TO CONFER ON POWER.

Nevada Governor Calls Meeting.

Officials and Experts from Three States Due Here for Parley Tuesday.

Los Angeles People Are Not Advised of Call for the Big Gathering in City.

High officials and authorities on power and water development representing at least three States have been invited to meet in Los Angeles Tuesday in a conference of unusual importance to the Colorado River hydroelectric projects, particularly as they apply to the conflict between the city of Los Angeles and the Southern California Edison Company's program for Boulder Canyon development.

A peculiar situation arose last night when it was learned that nothing of the conference apparently was known by the Los Angeles officials in charge of the municipal project, although Russell H. Ballard, vice-president and general manager of the Edison Company, said he regarded it as probable that some of the Edison officials would be asked to appear before the conference. Gov. Boyle of Nevada has arranged for the meeting, Mr. Ballard said, and Nevada, Arizona and California, particularly the Imperial Valley, are expected to be represented.

Secretary James P. Vroman of the Board of Public Service said last night that he had not heard of the conference even informally and that no invitation had been extended the board to be represented, so far as he knew. Chief Electrical Engineer Scattergood and members of the board, including Dr. John R. Haynes and R. F. Del Valle, also declared they had heard nothing of the conference.

TO SEND COMMISSIONER.

Gov. Campbell of Arizona yesterday stated it will be impossible for him to attend the conference, although he had been urged to do so by Gov. Boyle. In Gov. Campbell's [illegible], he added, W. S. Norviel,

HARVARD TO SAIL NEXT THURSDAY.

Steamer to Make First Trip to San Francisco After Being Refitted.

The steamship Harvard, sister ship of the Yale, will next Thursday make her first trip to San Francisco since her refitting as a passenger boat after war service as a transport.

With the beginning of regular trips by the Harvard the Los Angeles Shipbuilding Company announces service by the boats alternately on six days of the week. The schedule is so arranged that passengers from or to San Francisco or Los Angeles may stay approximately six hours in either city and make the return trip on the same boat.

NEW COUP PREPARED BY SMALL.

Believed Legal Offensive to be Started Tuesday by the Governor.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—Intimations were made here today that the attorneys representing Gov. Small have made plans for a new coup, a simple legal proposition that may start the big guns roaring again. It is believed the new legal offensive will begin next Tuesday.

"I will be ready, whatever it is," said State's Attorney Mortimer, at Springfield. "We will be ready, just as we were when they tried to get Sheriff Mester to walk into a habeas corpus trap in Cook county. We have warrants for the arrest of Gov. Small and they will be served."

Meanwhile the Governor continues his inspection of public highways with his "Capitol on wheels," carrying on affairs of state by means of long-distance telephone and messengers to and from Springfield. The Governor announced today he would continue his tour next week, probably visiting three counties before returning to Springfield.

Political importance of the case grows as time wears on. The indictment of the Governor is the consuming topic in every city and hamlet in the State. Opinion is divided, many people believing the Governor is the victim of political foes working with the corporations.

NEXT WAR IN THE AIR.

Must Strengthen Aerial Corps.

Recent Bombing Tests Indicate the Trend of Future Naval Warfare.

Congress to be Asked Again to Provide Sufficient Funds for Experiments.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—That no time should be lost in strengthening the Navy for aerial offense and defense is the general conclusion of the officers who witnessed the sinking of the former German battleship Ostfreisland with the one-ton bombs loosed by Gen. Mitchell's Army aviators.

The remarkable series of bombing teste which all the powers were closely watching, is regarded as indicating conclusively the trend of future development in naval warfare. Gigantic bomb hurling planes capable of sinking battleships will be perfected, it is believed, while capital ships will be strengthened and equipped to resist and ward off aerial attacks.

Here is a summary of the projects being considered as a result of the observations of the experts at the bombing tests:

CARRIERS AT ONCE.

Building of eight airplane carriers for the Navy for one of which Secretary Denby is to ask Congress at once, despite the recent refusal of Congress to appropriate for any The collier Jupiter is being transformed into an airplane carrier but its speed is only fifteen knots compared with the thirty knots of the British carriers.

The adaption by the chemical warfare service of poisonous gases and the smoke screen effect to lightweight bombs which can be dropped by speedy pursuit planes upon the enemy and thus prepare the way for the slower going bomb planes with their destructive freight.

TEN-TON BOMB PLANNED.

The urgent speeding up of experimental production by the aircraft industry of still heaver planes, which would carry at least two of the one-ton bombs at a trip with possible reaching out as far as a mammoth plane that could carry a ten-ton bomb able to destroy the modern battleship such as the Pennsylvania, at one blow. The Navy already has in use the NC type of bombing place, which can cary twice as heavy a load as the Martin bombers, which destroyed the Ostfreisland, and they will build another type, the "giant," which will be twice as powerful as the NC, and four times as powerful as the Martin bomber. On July 18 the Army Air Service issued a call for new designs of extremely powerful and speedy bomb-

HUGHES AND GEDDES IN CONFERENCE

Discuss Details Prior to Formal Invitations to Disarmament Meet.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Secretary Hughes and Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador, spent more than an hour in conference today discussing, it is understood, details to be arranged prior to the delivery of formal invitations to the proposed conference on the limitation of armaments, and the Far East.

It was said that the British government probably would not insist further on a preliminary conference and would not interpose any serious objections to having the conference convened early in November.

It also developed that France is not adverse to November 11, Armistice Day, for the first meeting, and that unofficially Italy, Japan and China have indicated their willingness to accept that date.

Satisfaction with developments was expressed by officials and there were indications that the invitations would be sent out next week. The unofficial, but none the less authoritative, declaration that the United States was opposed to preliminary conferences and especially to parleys participated in by any number less than all the invited powers are believed to have forestalled further efforts in that direction.

REDS RULE AMERICA TOO, SOVIET TELLS DUPES.

Washington Vanderlip Contrasts Early Days of the Commune with Ruin Following its Collapse.

BY WASHINGTON B. VANDERLIP.
[Copyright, 1921, by the King Features Syndicate, Inc.]

My first impulse to go to Russia came one night in October, 1919, as I sat by a camp fire in the Hudson Bay wilderness reading the essays of Ralph Waldo Emerson. I read this sentence:

"Beware when the great God lets loose a thinker upon this planet . . . it is like a conflagration in a great city; no man knows where it will end or what is safe."

I had been reading of Lenin and his associated revolutionists, of course, as all Americans had, and the fact that I knew the Russian language fairly well, had in earlier years spent much time in Russia hunting for oil or gold, made me more eager than most Americans to learn if Lenin was a man of genius and a born leader of men, or merely an infamous adventurer.

A few months later I proposed to a group of oil dmen in Los Angeles, Cal., that they should send me to Russia to obtain orders for America for the things Russia most needed to rehabilitate her railroads, her mills, her factories and her boundless farms, and also to obtain concessions over a large tract in Russia to be developed by American enterprise.

We all agreed that the soviet leaders should be dealt with openly and frankly. I was to study the soviet government's men and measures, ascertain the progress of Japanese intrigue, obtain if possible a lease of Kamchatka for the United States and thus make a beginning of closer trade relations between Russia and the United States.

On my first trip to Russia, begun July 26, 1920, I passed through England. I evaded the Scotland Yard detectives who were watching the headquarters of the Russian Trade Delegation because I did not wish British business interests to know of my errand to Russia. I met M. Krassin, Lenin's trade emissary, in Stockholm, then went on to Copenhagen to meet M. Litvinoff, the shrewdest man in Russian Communism, except Lenin himself. After a month of negotiation by wireless, I was sent on to Moscow.

Crossing to Reval, the Esthonian port nearest to Moscow, I first met with regulations of the American State Department obstructing peaceful communication with Russia. The American consul told me that I must surrender my American passports before I entered Russia. The soviet representatives told me I could go nowhere in Russia without an American passport. Naturally, I ignored the American consul, kept my passports and proceeded nto Russia without the protection of my own government.

TRANSPORTATION WRECKED.

A little beyond Reval I saw the first evidence of the utter breakdown of the transportation system under soviet rule. Hundreds of tons of supplies that had been purchased in Scandinavia for the Russians covered the wharves and neighboring streets. Many of the boxes had been broken open and their contents stolen or wastefully scattered.

I saw Esthonian women selling for a few coppers layettes made by the American Red Cross for Russian babies still unborn. Other Red Cross supplies of general use were offered for sale on the streets. On one of the docks where a shipload of chocolate in boxes had been unloaded, boxes had been broken open by thieves or by carless handling and mixed with the mire of the streets, so that for a quarter of a mile from the dock the mud was chocolate color.

SHOCKING WASTE.

I wondered whether this shocking waste was due to dishonesty or simply to stupid inefficiency and lack of management. It was evident, whatever the cause, that a vast amount of food, clothing and comforts, for which generous Americans had contributed millions of dollars to the Red Cross, never reached the unfortunate people for whom they were intended.

I do not criticise the Red Cross management. War makes waste in-

RUSSIA ACCEPTS FAMINE AID, FREES PRISONERS.

American Relief Body Ready to Start Work on Short Notice; Senator Secures Release of Woman.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

RIGA, July 30.—Soviet Russia has agreed to release American prisoners and to accept famine aid from the American Relief Association just at the moment Senator France of Maryland has returned here from Moscow determined to advocate renewal of trade relations, and perhaps diplomatic relations, between Russia and the United States, and bringing with him one of the prisoners, Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, a Baltimore newspaper woman, who was freed by his efforts.

Senator France, who entered Russia skeptical of the advantage of immediate diplomatic relations with the soviets, but believing trade relations advisable, is now an enthusiast for both.

While American officials here are speculating as to what effect the release of the prisoners and the entrance of the American Relief Association into Russia, will have in clearing up the Russian situation, Senator France declared that the Lenin government was starting a new line of development in Russia, which "cannot backslide into radical Communism."

TALKED WITH LENIN.

The Senator talked with both Lenin and Trotsky, and was impressed by them.

"I found that the Russian government is handling the situation in a statesmanlike way," he said. Lenin is much interested in American relations. Russian factories have not all ceased operating; many are working well. They are short of raw material. Farmers are prosperous where they are not in the famine and drought belt."

The Senator mentioned furs as a possible product of trade with the United States, and asserted there would be plenty of exports when factories were equipped and agricultural needs were supplied from abroad. He thought a commission of American experts would be welcomed, but contended that Russia should have the right to send one to America.

"I am convinced Russia will carry out any guarantee or concessions made in return for credit," he declared.

ADMITTED CONDITIONS BAD.

He said he was free to move about and see what he liked, and the officials admitted bad conditions where they existed. The Senator secured Mrs. Harrison's release independent of the Hoover and Hughes notes. Mrs. Harrison was freed from the prison hospital only a few hours before the train left Thursday.

In a statement issued here today the Senator said:

"After three weeks devoted to

PIGEONS USED BY HARDING.

President, on the Yacht Mayflower, Keeps in Touch With Washington.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Communication with Washington by naval carrier pigeons was maintained today by the Presidential yacht Mayflower as she steamed up the Atlantic Coast with President and Mrs. Harding en route to Plymouth, Mass., where on Monday the President will speak at the ceremonies commemorating the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims.

Before the Mayflower left yesterday, Lieut A. J. McAtee, director of the naval pigeon service, placed five carrier pigeons aboard. At 4:55 p.m. today one of the birds returned bearing a message from the President. The pigeon had left the Mayflower at 11:30 a.m. when the yacht was about twenty-five mile northeast of Cape Henry light, about 250 miles from Washington.

The President's message said:

"Executive offices, White House:

"Fine voyage. All well. Mrs. Harding greatly refreshed. Making our schedule amid excellent conditions. Inspection this morning revealed fine crew aboard the Mayflower. Greeting to all the office force.

(Signed) Warren G. Harding."

FALL TO VISIT PARKS.

Secretary of Interior Will Also Inspect Western Reclamation Projects.

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Secretary of the Interior Fall leaves tomorrow morning for San Francisco and, after a few hours there, will go shortly into Yosemite National Park. Secretary Fall is the first of the members of the Harding Cabinet to leave Washington for official inspection trips and it is expected he will be followed shortly by Secretary of the Navy Denby.

At San Francisco Mrs. Fall will join her husband and will make the trip with him. At present there is no indication that Secretary Fall will go to Los Angeles but the itinerary worked out is not definite and it is possible that he will visit the Imperial Valley and personally give a once-over to the power projects at Boulder Canyon in the Colorado River. In that event he might be in Los Angeles for a few hours.

WILL VISIT YELLOWSTONE.

Secretary Fall will thoroughly familiarize himself with Yosemite Park, Crater Lake Park in Oregon and Glacier and Rainier Parks in Washington and will spend seveal days in Yellowstone National Park. He will be joined in Yosemite National Park by Stephen T. Mather, director of the Park Service, who will show him the intricate details and problems of the parks themselves and will explain the plans devised to be worked out in making the national parks more and more popular with the public.

If the Secretary has the time he may go to Alaska for a trip of inspection over the government-built and operated railroad to the coal mines which the government expects will be a big factor in the fuel supply of the Pacific and on this trip the Secretary will examine into the possibility of having a Shipping Board line of steamers operated from the coast ports in connection with the Alaska railroad for the purpose of opening up Alaska to tourists and those who would locate in the territory.

Regardless of whether he has time to get to Alaska, Secretary Fall will visit some of the more important reclamation projects in the west, notably those in Oregon and Washington, Idaho and Montana. While the duration of the trip depends largely upon pressure of official duties in Washington, Secretary Fall does not expect to return to Washington until September 15.

WOOD TO RUN PHILIPPINES.

Formal Announcement and Acceptance Will Be Made Within a Short Time.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Gen. Wood will be Governor-General of the Philippines. Formal announcement of the appointment and the acceptance of Gen. Wood will be made within a short time. Informal assurance that he will undertake the great work of upbuilding the government of the island, the restoration of morale and prosperity has been received. The only condition is that the University of Pennsylvania grant him leave of absence for at least a year. He was elected provost of the university at a salary of $25,000 before he undertook the inquiry into Philippine conditions at the urgent request of President Harding.

Gen. Wood will be more than Governor-General of the Philippines, although he is regarded in official circles here as the one man that can bring the islands to the position where the administration wants them both in prosperity and political health. With Jacob Gould Schurman, Minister to China, and Charles W. Warren, Ambassador to Japan, Gen. Wood will complete an intimate council of information and suggestion on problems of the Far East and the Pacific for the guidance of President Harding and his Cabinet. All of these men are well known to each other and have supreme confidence in the ability and patriotism of each other. They are particularly well equipped for their various posts and are accustomed by past administrative offices to do team work.

While it is expected that Gen. Wood will not immediately return to the United States to report in person to the President on conditions in the Philippines, it is assumed that he will be present as an adviser on Far Eastern conditions at the coming disarmament conference.

It is understood to be the wish of President Harding and influential Americans in the islands that Gen. Wood take over the work as chief executive of the island government at once.

It is also understood that a place is to be created to be known as Vice or Deputy Governor so that Gen. Wood can break in as an understudy a capable man who can succeed him as Governor when he leaves to take up his work at the University of Pennsylvania.

TEMPERATURES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES.

Following were the maximum and minimum temperatures yesterday in various eastern cities compared with Los Angeles:

	Max.	Min.
New York	86	70
Philadelphia	88	72
Boston	72	64
Cincinnati	90	68
Omaha	88	68
Indianapolis	90	72
St. Louis	96	78
Chicago	95	72
Des Moines	92	68
Kansas City	96	76
Winnipeg	70	51
Huron, S. D.	74	62
Los Angeles	78	64

Because of a difference in humidity, there is an actual difference in "heat unpleasantness" of from 5 to 10 degrees in favor of Los Angeles as compared with the East, according to Col. H. B. Hersey, meteorologist for the local station of the United States Weather Bureau.

Come on, Lord, Greeting to Northcliffe.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—How should one address a member of the British peerage was the question being asked here today when Lord Northcliffe, famous British newspaper owner, called on President Harding at the White House.

George W. Christian, Jr., secretary to the President, answered the query in his own way.

"Come on, Lord," he said to Northcliffe as he indicated the way to the President's office.

DISGRACED BY LOSSES TO GREEKS.

Turk General Relieved of His Command; Officials Admit Many Killed.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ATHENS, July 30.—As a result of the defeat of the Turkish Nationalists in Asia Minor by the Greeks, the Nationalist commander-in-chief, Gen. Ismit Pasha, is declared in a Constantinople message received by the newspaper Kronika to have been relieved of his command, being replaced by Gen. Noureddir Pasha.

The same dispatch declares Turkish officers admit a loss of 20,000 men by the Kemalists.

TURKS' LOSS HEAVY.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

CONTANTINOPLE, July 30.—Losses suffered by the Turkish Nationalists in Asia Minor total 5000 men killed or wounded, and 8000 taken prisoner, according to the best information from Turkish quarters available here. The Turks also have lost fifty cannon and other war materials.

The Turkish Cabinet today decided that any attempt toward bringing about peace between Turkish Nationalists and the Greeks would be inopportune until the battle around Angora had been fought to a definite decision.

Meanwhile a note from the Angora government has been received, accusing the British with supplying the Greek army with Turkish ammunition.

Reports from the Black Sea coast announce that Sinope, seventy-five miles west of Samsun, and Trebizond have been bombarded by Greek warships. The Greek destroyer Panther was damaged by fire from the land batteries.

Find Body of Well-Dressed Man in Canyon.

Dead apparently about three months, the badly decomposed body of an unidentified man, probably about 50 years old, was found late yesterday by George Matsch of Los Angeles, who with a party of campers stumbled onto the grewsome find in the Upper Arroyo Seco near what is known as Teddy's Outpost.

The clothing on the body indicated that the man had been well-to-do, but nothing was found to disclose the identity. Nothing was found in the vicinity of the body to provide a clew as to the cause of his death. A careful examination, both of the body and of the vicinity, is in progress by the Pasadena police. The remains were taken to the mortuary of Reynolds & Van Nuys in Pasadena.

MARINE STRIKE IS OVER.

Pacific Coast Unions Overwhelmingly Vote to Return to Work.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—The sea strike of the Pacific Coast, which has been in effect since May 1, was declared formally at an end today by the unions.

By a vote of 1272 to 481, the Sailors' Union of the Pacific Coast balloted to declare the strike off and return to work. The move of the men followed the arrival here of Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union, who advised the men at a mass meeting held at the Civic Auditorium Friday night to go back to work. Today's action of the sailors signified their willingness to accept the 15 per cent wage reduction and the open-shop plan of the employers.

ADMIT DEFEAT.

The union went on record to maintain the organization. Furuseth told the men that they had lost this fight, but not their entire campaign, which has covered many years.

Friday night the marine firemen, oilers and water tenders' union voted to return to work. The cooks' and waiters' union has taken similar action.

Sailors at Portland voted Friday night to also return to work, as did the firemen and cooks. These unions refused two weeks ago to join the marine engineers when they voted to go back to work.

In the middle of the sea strike the marine engineers made an agreement with the United States Shipping Board. The local engineers on the Pacific Coast said that this had been done by eastern unions, and the move for a time threatened to disrupt the Eastern and Pacific Coast organizations.

The action of the engineers in making a separate agreement with the Shipping Board was denounced here by the sailors, cooks and firemen, who declared that they had been deserted.

Shipowners took the stand that the strike had been broken and they refused to deal with the unions here. Millions of dollars were lost to San Francisco's port and the rest of the Pacific Coast by the marine tie-up, which was declared to be the bitterest in shipping history.

LARGE SUMS EXPENDED.

Shipowners here were forced to expend large sums for repairs to their vessels, sabotage was charged in many troubles experienced on vessels by the shipowners, but these charges were countered by the unions who declared that it was due to the lack of skill of nonunion workers.

Police protection was sought to protect the interests of the shipowners on many occasions during the strike, and court action figured during the controversy, when shipowners sought injunctions against the unions.

It is believed that the majority of the 125 steam schooners engaged in the coastwise lumber trade will now start to resume their operations in full swing. About thirty-five of these vessels have been moved in evitable, and I heard that some of the neediest people who actually received supplies from the Red Cross afterwards bartered them for local products they knew better. Red Cross supplies thus innocently fell into the hands of local dealers.

The customs-house officials of the little Esthonian Republic are not disposed to pass baggage as a rule until they are bribed to do so. These grafting officials, formerly Russians, now belong to an independent republic, under President Wilson's theory of the "right of self-determination." It is strange, but true, that the Russian soviet officials do not conceal their contempt for these Esthonian Republic officials.

I found Petrograd, the beautiful and famous city built by Peter the Great, reduced to less than one-third of its normal population by six years of war, which had closed more than one-half of the shops, paralyzed two-thirds of the organized industries, and driven more than a million inhabitants, including most of the skilled workmen and practically all of the bourgeoise or merchant class, back to the farms, to that sustenance out of the richness of nature, the land.

A city of more than 2,000,000 population, a city of gorgeous luxury in high places and of the most abject poverty in the low in 1914, at the outbreak of the World War, has now fewer than 600,000 people, a large proportion of whom live upon the "rations" or supplies doled out to them by bureaucratic officials upon credentials given to them by the soviet government.

Clothing, food, everything was "rationed," as in a public institution, but unlike any well organized institution, even the poorhouse, as conducted in any American community, there were no regular hours for dispensing the necessities of life. Applicants having soviet cards were kept hours and hours in line, waiting their turn. This was the most unfavorable aspect of soviet rule that I saw at first.

Some favorable things were seen later, as will be told. Petrograd was as orderly and as safe as the streets of New York, Chicago or San Francisco; perhaps safer than the byways of such great American cities in hard winters or periods of severe unemployment, which Petrograd has now endured for several years.

Death, disease and hunger were not altogether traceable to soviet rule, despite the persistent propaganda circulated in America, but were due, instead, chiefly, I think, to the disorganization of the civil government and the necessary concentration of all the energies of the soviet commissaries to supply the great armies in the field, which were fighting armies, led by Czarist officers, but munitioned and supplied with money and food by the governments of Great Britain, France and the United States.

Hundreds of thousands moved away from Petrograd (which led an artificial existence even in the days of the Czar) to centers near the food supplies. Moreover, when the soviet governments abandoned Petrograd as its capital, moving to Moscow, it took with it 300,000 officials and soldiers, most of whom had lived in Petrograd.

The great palace of the Czar, the imposing buildings that formerly housed the state, army and navy departments of the great Russian empire; the palaces of the grand dukes; the princely residences of Russian nobles and plutocrats, who formerly lived in such lavish luxury at home and abroad, with hordes of servants, are now all put to public use.

All are accessible to the common people. Some of the great private residences are used for schools, to which the soviet government is giving unremitting attention. Others are used for hospitals or rest cures for the wounded or sick, who receive the best care the soviet government can give them. Art galleries formerly belonging to the richest and most aristocratic, as well as the most exclusive families of Russia, are now occupied by free beds for the wounded or civilians who are sick or indigent.

Many a wounded Russian soldier, peasant born, who can neither read nor write, now recuperates in a room adorned with paintings of old masters as valauble and as rare as any in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York or in the Field Museum in Chicago.

COURTEOUSLY RECEIVED.

The soviet officials live simply and work day and night, but the soviet government still has comforts and many luxuries for distinguished visiting officials or any foreigner whom they invite to Petrograd or Moscow. Thus I was met at the railway station, in the impressive manner in which all European or Asiatic governments "receive" any visitor whom they wish to compliment, by the secretary of the Governor of Petrograd, M. Zinoviev, who was apprised of my coming by wireless.

He conducted me, without delay for the examination of my baggage and with every mark of courtesy, to the International Hotel, where a fine room, a hot bath and excellent service awaited me. There the first time in many days I was served with a bountiful supper, including hors d'oeuvre, fowl; well-made French pastry, and very strong Russian tea. I slept in the luxury of clean sheets in a bed as comfortable as the best hotels in America afford.

Furnished with a pass that permitted me to go anywhere, and speaking Russian well enough to get along in any Russian crowd, I mingled with the people in the streets the next day, men and women on their way to work, who were as quiet and orderly and as well disposed as may be seen any day in the foreign quarter of New York, Boston or Chicago, and different only in their clothing, and a certain uniformity of type in the Russian face.

I found no sign of terror, but always suspicion. Russians, immensely talkative when excited or among themselves, are reserved and uncommunicative with strangers.

STREETS NOT CROWDED.

The streets of Petrograd were not as crowded as in the old days, of course; there was a noticeable diminution of life and movement, due to the lessened population. But the people who were there laughed and joked and seemed to be as happy as any workday crowd on the East Side of New York City, which now has a Russian population almost equal to that of Petrograd.

They were all badly dressed, and everywhere, particularly in every shop one entered, there were evidences of the four-year long blockade which all the great exporting countries of the world, including the United States, have maintained against Russia in the hope of breaking down the soviet (or Communistic) government of Russia.

I was not unprepared to find a total absence of the ordinary articles of wear that men and women and children wear, like dresses, hats, shoes, gloves, collars. I expected to see a shabbily attired people, and I found it.

There were no signs of misery or despair, and a very large proportion of the women had healthy red cheeks. The children seemed well fed. The soviets have made the feeding and the education of children their very first consideration, second only to the maintenance of the authority of the soviets and provision for the army.

I found upon investigation that there have been times and periods of dire need in the cities where live so many that can produce nothing in the way of food; who must depend absolutely upon the ability of the government to induce the peasants to produce and distribute in a country where money has become so plentiful that it is almost useless and valueless. There have been times of unpreventable interruption of the food supply flow due to the collapse of the railroads and to the increasing disposition of the peasants to cut down production and hide their surplus crops.

FEAR SECRET POLICE.

I was able to talk to many of the folk I saw in the streets, but on every side was a manifest disposition to hold the tongue. I found later that such public discretion was due to the fear of the agents of the dreaded Tche-Ka—the secret police of the soviet government.

Agents of the Tche-Ka might be anywhere, might be at one's elbow, and although the days of the Red terror had passed, the Tche-Ka would not tolerate in those days of a year ago denunciation of the government, or any comment which seemed to touch on counter revolution.

Time after time I was asked: "How does the revolution go in America?"

I replied invariably that there was no revolution in America; that the people over there would never overthrow our form of democracy. They shook their heads in obvious disbelief. Soviet propaganda had done its work. At that time England and the United States, not to mention France and Italy, were believed by the people to have gone to Communism. Four Russians out of five cannot read, and soviet papers print not real news of the rest of the world.

WOMEN SLIGHTED.

The women I spoke to made it clear that they did not like their status under the soviet, and presently I learned why, as I saw them ignored, thrust aside, relegated to the back seats in the motion-picture and movie houses, crowded off the sidewalk.

Even the clothes that they and their babies wore were designed and issued by the soviet tailors after standards and patterns produced "by commissars that never make mistakes."

In these talks the people showed keen interest in America, often asking:

"When is your country going to make friends with us?"

Two or three very intelligent men said to me:

"When is America going to stand with Russia against the Japanese imperialists?"

I had heard many tales about the shocking condition of the streets, stories of whole blocks in ruins, of dead animals lying in the streets. I did not find this to be the case. The streets of Petrograd seemed at least as clean as the streets of New York or any big American city. It is true that many are grievously in need of repair. Stretches of cobblestone torn up for missiles or for the erection of barricades have not been replaced in the general inefficiency of things.

The theaters and motion-picture houses were all in operation and were crowded nightly. Tickets were obtainable from the amusement commissars. The plays and scenarios, while clouded by the gloom and tragedy that seem a part of the Russian temperament, were extremely interesting. Under the rule of the soviet the best playwrights and artists are "required" to contribute their talents to public amusement in return for rations.

MEETS TROTZKY.

At the time of this first visit, Trotzky, singular product of the times, had sprung from the editorship of a radical newspaper in New York City to the command of 4,000,000 troops. Later on I was to see him frequently and to attend with him a Red review where many of the soldiers were dressed in American uniforms taken, I could not help but believe, from the bodies of our American boys, or from American military stores sent to Poland and captured by the soviet army.

The war industries (and there were no others) were turning out material in this heyday of Communism in a fairly satisfactory manner—a good deal more honestly than was the case in these industries under Czardom in the first years of the great war. For at the time of which I write, last fall, there was little grafting.

Rarely could I find a servant, even, who would accept a tip, though I tendered a sizeable one. Lenin had issued a decree that tips were degrading. Tipping, like looting, was then discouraged by the bayonets of the soviet soldiers.

At this time, the very peak of the great experiment in radicalism, the Communist leaders were overjoyed. They believed that such public morality and self-respect could be maintained and that the country would sweep on to great achievements in domestic upbuilding and exterior accomplishment.

Later I shall tell you of what I saw when I went once more to Russia three months ago—of what a change had come over the picture since Communism had failed.

As compared with an American workman, the Russian workman was reckoned in prewar times at about 53 per cent efficient. Under Communism this percentage was at first fairly well maintained, although all production was absorbed by the government for military necessities. The Communist workman was receiving soldier rations, designated as those of the first class. He was getting a pound and a half of bread per day, vegetables, mostly cabbage, for soup, and a porridge.

Milk and eggs were saved for the children. Meat was scarce. There was little fruit, little pastry, little sweets of any sort. Medicines and soap were almost unprocurable.

The people in the street told me it was the duty of all citizens to support the government against the wicked foreign enemies that were trying to break in and seize the lands of Holy Russia.

They told me that England and Japan and France were to blame for cutting off the food and supplies they needed so sorely. They asked me many times why America permitted wicked nations to act so cruelly to Russia. I had no answer to make.

On all I detected a rising tide of resentment against the Japanese. Lenin had seen to it that the people were fully informed of Japanese aggression in Siberia. The hatreds of the Russo-Japanese War were reviving.

DIVERTING INFORMALITY.

I traveled a few days later over the Nicholas Railroad to the new capital, Moscow.

There is diverting informality about train travel in Russia. Strangers of five minutes ago become talkative and confide to you details of their family life. No one waits for an introduction.

I saw a motherly looking Russian woman escorting half a dozen children, all ticketed by the soviet like so many calves or sheep, who simply took charge of me. She offered me a share of her slender food supply, which consisted of a little more than black bread and cabbage soup, which she made on the train, and when in return I opened a tin of American packed beef tongue and then brewed some coffee with real sugar I thought her delight would pass all bounds.

The train made its way southward in the leisurely way characteristic of Russian trains. Often something went wrong with the locomotive, which burned wood, with something else. There were delays of hours. That gave me an opportunity to see more than one village. There is nothing more squalid and hopeless looking in the world than a Russian village.

It is painful to an American eye, used to our snug, comfortable looking little towns. Stunted trees swamps, weeds, scrawny cattle, flocks of piratical crowds on the outskirts. Usually there is a wall with a heavy gate fastened on holidays and after dark. Usually there are within the walls two rows of gloomy log hovels with thatched roofs. There are no sidewalks, no flowers, no decorations of any sort. Manure piles are set in the open streets and often enough near the wells. Pigs and chickens roam at will in the dust of summer and the mud of autumn.

Within the huts the smell of animals and garbage and unclean things was unpleasant. There was usually one dark, damp room with bare floor of earth or planks. Ordinarily there were only a rough table, a wide platform-like bed with no mattress or sheets and an oven built of brick and smoke-blackened. In these ovens the peasant not only did his cooking, but his bathing, for in heat baths he sweats gloriously and then drenches himself with cold water. Here is the original "Russian bath."

VIOLATE REGULATIONS.

To every train the peasants came flocking with burdens of home products, baskets of eggs, chickens and ducks; pigs alive and dressed, and fowls yet in life or reasonably well cleaned; bread often quite surprisingly good; cabbages and other vegetables. This was supposed to be against soviet regulations, but I learned very quickly that Ivan Ivanoffsky could not be made to obey all the regulations of the commune.

In former visits to Russia I had been impressed with the servile attitude of the country folk. They were eternally bowing and scraping and baring their heads. They always flattered every well-dressed stranger with the title "Baron." It was Baron this and Baron that. They cringed before haughty nobles, frequently taking a whip lash in the face as a reminder of their servitude.

All this is now changed.

Servility has disappeared and a kind of bold indifference has taken its place. The Russian peasant, always sturdy, with magnificent physical endurance and capacity, has gained a sort of independence and self-respect.

It may be that in this change lies the hope of Russia for the future. The peasants demand now to be treated on the level as human beings. Here and there, of course, bad manners and truculence have taken the place of servility and obsequiousness. But nature will take care of that. I felt that a new Russia had been born as I journeyed southward, breathing the atmosphere of a new day.

GLAD TO SAY HE HAD BECOME BETTER MAN.

WRIGLEY (Ky.) July 30.—J. W. Robinson, candidate for deputy on the ticket with I. C. Ferguson, candidate for Sheriff, in a printed appeal to the voters, lauds the candidates who are opposing Mr. Ferguson.

In the next sentence he emphatically denies that Mr. Ferguson has the "worst moonshiner that lives in Morgan county" on his ticket. Mr. Robinson, in denying what he terms reports of "some high-toned gentleman" that he is a moonshiner, says:

"I want to say that I have not always been as good a citizen as I should have been, but, thank God, I am a better man than in the days of old."

about the hardest work I ever expect to do, I can confirm the impression that the United States should immediately resume trade relations with Russia.

"My own belief is that the resumption should be of diplomatic relations, but I prefer to have that recommendation come from the commission which we would have to send to negotiate a trade agreement. I am certain that any commission would see that prompt recognition was desirable.

"I find no indication that Russia is getting in a worse condition, but on the contrary I feel that the government officials are in harmony and working to bring about order and industry. Recent decrees have inspired confidence by the Russian people, and any contact with the outside will be of great help.

"Neither England nor Germany hesitates to extend this aid and I don't see why America should.

"The famine condition in the Volga is bad, and the government officials do not conceal their anxiety. Just how bad it is I do not know.

"I cannot comment on the reports that the terms of the American relief administration have been accepted except to say that any friendly contact that can be effected between Russia and America will be of immeasurable benefit to both countries."

AWAIT OFFICIAL REPLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Official word of the Russian soviet authorities' decision regarding the American relief administration's order to furnish food to starving Russian children, conditioned on the release of the American prisoners, and the State Department's demand for their release, still was lacking today. The State Department, however, was officially informed of the arrival at Riga of Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison of Baltimore, an American prisoner.

Beyond press dispatches announcing the soviet government's acceptance, Secretary Hoover was without a reply to his telegram sent last week to Maxim Gorky at Petrograd.

On the basis of press reports that the reply was being sent by way of London, officials here declared that the answer might be expected at any time. State Department officials, on the other hand, suggested that no formal answer would be made to the demand of the American government, but if the American prisoners were freed under the conditions of Secretary Hoover's offer Russian authorities would let the action stand as speaking for itself. Release of Mrs. Harrison was said to indicate the possible adoption of such a course.

Mr. Hoover indicated that relief work could begin within forty-eight hours from the time American prisoners were out of Russia.

ENVOY SAILS FOR LONDON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Prince Mohammed Walikhan, envoy of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who arrived July 11 to seek American recognition of his government, left today for London on the steamship Baltic.

He was accompanied by his staff. They declined to discuss their mission other than to say it was of a secret diplomatic nature and that it was not completed. They also declined to say when they were returning.

ing types, which will stimulate the best work the country can produce.

Rush production of a battleship type with heavily armored protective deck, and possibly an armored belt extending from main deck line to keel.

Experimental development of some device for battleship ventilators which would eliminate mustard and poison gases from the intake air, thus safeguarding all interior compartments which are ventilated by forced draft.

Development of antiaircraft gunfire which would be highly effective up to high altitudes. The .60-caliber machine gun, used during the war for low flying aircraft will probably be replaced by a .50-caliber gun of the same type using tracer, armor-piercing and explosive bullets in alternation for ranges up to 3000 feet. And a 4.7 antiaircraft type will probably be rushed through production to replace the three-inch gun used chiefly during the war time (for ranges up to 25,000 feet) and produced in large number for the trained "archie" personnel which must now be developed. Ordnance officials also will probably develop a 37-millimeter machine gun type which can discharge one-pound projectiles in a steady automatic stream against armored aircraft.

ARMOR-PIERCING BOMB.

Development of a 4000-pound bomb in the immediate future and experimental work on still larger types up to the ten-ton size in the course of the fiscal year. Especially will experiments be directed toward the perfecting of an armor piercing aerial bomb, one of which was all ready for test on the Ostfreisland.

Rapid increase and organization of a larger air service to supplement the coast defense organization and protect our great length of seacoast from all kinds of attack.

Production of amphibious aircraft which can land either on land or sea with equal ease and safety.

The Most Stubborn Thing in the World

The TRUTH may be kept from "Part of the People Part of the Time," but it can not be kept from "All the People All of the Time."

New Uprights $365 up.
New Players $495 up.
New Grands $745 up.

A fact, a reality, an unqualified, intrinsic truth, a rigorous certainty—these things are all the same, they represent precision. A fact is not a guess, a supposition nor a theory—it is TRUTH, and the truth about any article you need is worth knowing.

Every instrument advertised and sold by the Barnes Music Company possesses certain differences of style, quality and price. Naturally all people do not want the same style, the same quality nor the same priced instrument. Herein Lies Our Opportunity—If You But Know the TRUTH

The tremendous growth of the Barnes Music Company is living, indisputable evidence that you can't keep the TRUTH from "All of the people all the time," and in behalf of those good people who are earnestly striving to secure the instrument best fitted to meet their particular requirements, yet within easy reach of their pocketbooks, we have published and dedicated the little booklet shown at the lower left-hand corner.

This book sets forth very plainly the "reasons why" we can and do give better values and better service—and it is free for the asking, or will be mailed, postage prepaid, to any address upon request.

Military Leaders to Placate Poles.

Silesian War Would Aid Bolsheviki.

Soviets Plan Attack on Britain.

(Copyright, New York Herald.)

RLIN, July 30.—The possibility of another Russian attack on the causes many leading Germans believe that everything possible be done to prevent a conflict between Germany and Poland. Eric Ludendorff, one-time termaster-General of the German armies, declared today that "it better that Germany lose Upper Silesia than have a conflict Poland."

Ludendorff expressed the that such a conflict would "only play into the hands of the Bolsheviki" and would be a signal for an offensive by them that would aim at an extension of Bolshevist influence westward. He declared that the partly demoralized Poles might, in the event of a determined attack by Russia, succumb to a Bolshevist drive. The opinion in military circles here is that it were better to have the Poles as neighbors than the Bolsheviki.

Russia's next move will be against the British Empire, is the belief of men who were once high in German military circles. Despite the lack of sufficient military support to the soviet ally, Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Turkish Nationalist leader in Asia Minor, to enable him to hold his own against the Greeks, German officers are of the opinion that it will not be long before the Bolsheviki will concentrate their military strength in some important field of operations with a view to cracking the British Empire, but that meanwhile Moscow is preparing for new operations against Poland.

The New York Herald correspondent here today heard a German express the hope, which was common here a year ago, that Germany would decide to fight Poland. One-time German army officers, who were present, hastily interrupted the man who was wishing for hostilities and declared that a war between Poland and onarmed Germany would now result in a triumphant Polish march to Breslau and farther.

TWO BANKS WEATHER RUNS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BOSTON, July 30.—One hundred fifteen deposits aggregating $3500 were received at the Boston Five Cent Savings Bank this afternoon, President W. R. Evans announced. The fact that these were from old depositors, together with an easing off in demands noticed before the bank closed at 2 o'clock, led officials of the institution to believe that the end of today's run was in sight. The bank, as usual on Saturdays, was open from 2 to 5 and 6 to 8 p.m. to receive deposits.

President Evans said that $700,000 had been paid depositors and that the bank was prepared to meet all demands. The depositors who withdrew their money were principally of foreign origin.

Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen reiterated his assurance of the bank's integrity and added:

"It has been reported to me that the withdrawals in the Five Cent Savings Bank are the result of propaganda circulated systematically. This report is being investigated."

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—The Northwestern Trust Company, an uptown institution, today weathered a run that began yesterday. A false rumor of the trust company's conditions started a line of timid depositors yesterday and caused many to withdraw funds today. When the bank opened this morning $1,000,000 in cash was on hand to pay all demands.

Milton H. Berry's Success On

ief History of Three Cases. Full Details of These Cases Will be Given to Those Interested.

The three cases referred to but a few of the many who Mr. Berry is successfully instructing to regain the use of their paralyzed parts. These three cases are prominent persons who are living here in Los Angeles. You may confer or communicate with each one or all of them. The names will be supplied to you.

Lady—Age, past sixty-five; stricken with paralysis, four years, left side affected. Arm entirely useless. Leg partially affected, necessitating the constant use of a cane. After two months' instructions she walks without the cane and uses the arm naturally and the use of the arm is gradually but surely recovering as the motion of the elbow and wrist is now very pronounced.

Man—Age, seventy: Stricken eight years. Both legs partially affected; used a cane. Could not raise either leg from the ground but shuffled his feet. After three months' instruction he takes natural steps without the use of the cane. While these steps are at present limited, each day proves that he is becoming stronger in the use of his limbs.

Lady—past sixty: Stricken three years ago; left side, arm and leg almost useless. Was unable to walk, had to be helped by others. After two months' instruction by Mr. Berry she can walk alone without any aid.

If you doubt the foregoing statements you should call to make arrangements to meet these persons and, if you desire, any others of those who Mr. Berry is teaching. These persons are only too glad to enlighten those who, like themselves, have gone on for years believing that nothing can be done for them.

VOTE TO END MARINE STRIKE.

the last three weeks by the Shipowners' Association of the Pacific with nonunion crews.

The action of the unions in voting to return to work will result in greater activity in shipping circles on the Pacific Coast, as there are millions of feet of lumber lying in northern ports waiting to be transported via water.

GENERAL STRIKE.

An effort will be made tomorrow by the general conference committee of the building trades unions of the Bay district to have all men affiliated with unions of the Building Trades Council called out on strike. This will apply to builders now working, whether they are on jobs operating under union conditions or the American plan. A tally of the vote taken by fifty unions of the Building Trades Council made public at the mass meeting in the Building Trades' Temple today showed forty-six unions in favor and six against a general strike.

According to reports of various business agents of the building trades unions, there are about 800 union men working. The only effect the strike movement to be taken care of tomorrow will have will be holding up of all work being done by union men.

No returns have been received from the unions affiliated with the labor council. The leaders of the general conference committee have decided not to make any further requests to labor council unions for a general strike vote. The executive committee of the council has taken a definite stand against a general strike and further efforts to get direct action from them will not be taken until after the union labor mass meeting called for Sunday, August 7.

Members of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Marine Cooks' and Stewards' Association, and of the Marine Firemen, Watertenders' and Oilers' Union, voting at Los Angeles Harbor, turned in large majorities in favor of returning to work under terms and conditions poposed by the Shipowners' Association of the Pacific Coast.

All vessels flying the American flag were affected when the strike was called on May 1, in protest against the cutting of wages 15 per cent for members of all crafts on the ships. Two months later the strike was called off in regard to the Shipping Board's vessels. The strike on privately-owned vessels continued four weeks longer until yesterday. Union leaders declared they were unable to hold out longer, with their men returning to work daily and all shipping on a normal basis.

The marine firemen at the harbor voted forty-five to twenty-two to return to work. The complete vote here was given as 738 to 183 to end the strike. The vote of the Sailors' Union at the harbor was still in doubt, but reports from San Francisco stated the members at various Coast ports had voted almost unanimously to return to work. The marine cooks and stewards voted 364 to 64 to call off the strike.

PORTLAND (Or.) July 30.—By a sweeping vote the members of the Sailors', Firemen's, Cooks' and Stewards' Union branches of Portland, last night decided to call off the marine strike and return to work.

EDISON HAS NEW QUERIES.

Touch History, Geography and Science.

Former Princeton Student Admits He's Stumped.

Who Knows What is Put on Safety Match Boxes?

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Edison is at it again. He has dug up an entirely new set of weird queries to test the intellectuality of our college youth. In a renewed effort to demonstrate his assumption that college boys don't know enough to come in out of the rain, he invites Stephen Sap to solve another 150 problems of human experience—history, current affairs, a dash of science, a whiff of geography.

A former Princeton student, with three years' experience at Old Nassau, batted against the latest Edison questions and whiffed—struck out completely. Out of the full set of 150 that was handed to him with the dictum that there could be only one session and that no longer than forty-five seconds could be indulged per question, he solved, or thinks he solved, ninety. The rest he knows he muffed horribly.

HERE ARE SOME.

Here are some of the questions brought to the New York Herald by the former Princeton student:

What is the hardest substance known?

MANY HURT BY SEWER EXPLOSIONS.

Minneapolis Business Section Damaged; Big Store Now on Fire.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) July 31. Twenty-eight persons were hurt, several severely, and much damage done by a series of explosions in sewers and cable manholes late last night and early today.

At 1 o'clock one of the largest department stores in town caught fire.

Crowds forced their way to the scene of the explosion in spite of efforts of police to keep them back. Hardly had the crowd been driven away from the blazing manholes when a second explosion across the street wrecked a cigar store and injured a score of men and women. One man standing near a manhole when the top blew out was thrown several feet and severely bruised. Two other men standing near were thrown down by the force of the explosion and fell into the manhole, out of which flames were shooting. Firemen pulled them out before they were seriously injured.

The second explosion demolished the cigar store, throwing the stock into the street.

The third occurred halfway up the block and blew out every window in the street.

CHINAMAN SLAIN IN NEW TONG OUTBREAK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARYSVILLE, July 30.—One Chinese was slain and two others wounded here tonight in what was described by police as a tong outbreak. Ung Wah, 60, was shot dead. The other were not so seriously wounded. About a dozen shots were exchanged, it is said. Four young Chinese who are declared to have started the firing escaped. Later a man who gave the name of Joe Fong was arrested as a suspect.

Colorado River Basin Commissioner of Arizona, will represent that State at the meeting.

Mr. Ballard, who was at Fresno last night, said he had been absent from Los Angeles several days and was not thoroughly familiar with all the details of the meeting. He presumed, however, that the Edison company officials probably will be called into conference and possibly also the municipal officials.

The invitation to the Imperial Valley interests lends additional color to the session, inasmuch as Imperial Valley was the scene Friday night of a heated discussion on the Boulder Canyon project between Los Angeles officials and representatives of the Edison company. The outcome of the meeting, held at Calipatria and attended by the delegates of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Imperial Valley, was at least in spirit that the valley has a decisive voice in the controversy and is in a position to drive the best bargain possible, and should take advantage of the opportunity.

Assemblyman Beal of Brawley voiced this sentiment when he declared that Imperial Valley is in a position to dictate to a certain extent and that now is the opportune time for the valley to "get hers while the getting is good." President J. S. Nickerson and Director C. W. Brockman of the Imperial Irrigation District and others spoke along the same line.

QUESTION OF COSTS.

Of tremendous interest to Imperial Valley residents is the cost to them of the projects as outlined by Los Angeles officials and by the Edison company. Under the Edison plan the corporation would assume entire responsibility for the construction cost, it was pointed out, whereas under the municipal project, 15 per cent of the estimated $50,000,000 cost would be assessed as flood and irrigation benefits against approximately 2,000,000 acres of land, much of which is in the Imperial Valley.

This phase of the controversy entered largely into the Calipatria meeting, which lasted until after midnight. Chief Engineer Mulholland, Chief Electrical Engineer Scattergood and W. B. Mathews, special counsel for the Board of Public Service, spoke for Los Angeles. They explained the position of the municipality as one of cooperation with the other communities of Southern California and each expressed a desire to have all of the interested municipalities enjoy a full share of the power developed.

POWER MAN TALKS.

A. B. West, vice-president and general manager of the Southern Sierras Power Company, a subsidiary of the Southern California Edison Company, made a long talk, attacking the arguments of the city officials. He said many years would be needed by the city of Los Angeles before the benefits of the project would accrue because of the litigation incident to the formation of a combination of municipalities. In the case of the corporation, he said, it would require months rather than years for the work. The cost to Imperial Valley would be nothing, he said, while under the municipal plan, the other communities would have to pay for power, water and flood protection to the extent of millions of dollars.

Proponents of the municipal plan asserted that water and power cost much more when the service is from a utilities corporation instead of from a municipal plant. Both Mr. Mulholland and Mr. Scattergood dwelt on the point that the City of Los Angeles is now selling power at about half the corporation rate.

Dwight T. Towne, representing the Wholesalers' and Manufacturers' Association and the Chamber of Commerce of Santa Barbara, and Charles D. Hamilton, chairman of the Riverside County Board of Supervisors, told the seventy-five Imperial Valley business men that their communities were "suspicious" of the Los Angeles offers and that neither Riverside nor San Bernardino counties will become a party to the Los Angeles proposals.

UNCONSCIOUS HUMOR IN MISINFORMATION.

PRIZE-WINNING EXAMPLE IS FURNISHED BY PAPER IN ARIZONA.

As an example of unconscious humor the following aggregation of misinformation, quoted from the Mohave County Miner, published at Kingman, Ariz., takes the cast-iron sofa tidy:

"Los Angeles is willing to furnish the money to build the big dam in the Colorado River at Boulder Canyon, but it must be given exclusive right to distribute the power and water from that stream to the best advantage to Los Angeles. Other communities must have no rights in the project, Los Angeles to step in and take it all. If that is not done Los Angeles will not play in our garden, nor will it allow the dam to be built even with Federal funds. It is really too funny for anything, and comports with the usual Los Angeles idea of being first in the market for control of everything that might be used to build up neighboring cities. But the one thing that is apparent to those who know is that Los Angeles people are interested to a considerable extent in the lands of Mexico, just below the international line in the Imperial Valley. If the big dam is built at Boulder Canyon it is the purpose of the Reclamation Service to build an all-American canal to irrigate a vast new territory, as well as giving water to the farmers now being supplied through the old canal. This would cut the water from the large acreage that the Mexican Land and Development Company has under lease to Japs and Chinamen, the water for which does not cost them a bean, the American farmer paying for the upkeep of the canal and control of the river. A farmer informed the Miner editor that this method of sustaining the canal and permitting the use of the waters to Mexican landowners to have mulcted them in the sum of fully $100,000,000. And why should these fellows not want to get their hands on as potential a project as the distribution of the waters of the Colorado and the power generated by the waters of that stream, no matter under what guise it was obtained?"

The Most Sensational Announcement in the History of Musical Instrument Merchandising—

Closing Out
Our Entire Line of Sohmer Pianos
at Less Than Cost

Thirty-nine Sohmers, Uprights and Grands will be closed out at prices which have no precedent in piano merchandising history—beginning tomorrow at 9 a.m. We are discontinuing this agency, which we have handled for 15 years.

Here is the reason: Sohmer makes players—as well as pianos. We do not handle the Sohmer player because we believe the Duo-Art is the greatest of all reproducing pianos—and the Duo-Art can be had only in the Steinway, Weber, Steck, Wheelock and Stroud pianos. The Sohmer Co. now requires that anyone selling Sohmers must also handle the Sohmer player. This we will not do. Hence the transfer of the Sohmer agency to another house. It remains for us to close out our Sohmer stock immediately.

We have always had a high regard for the Sohmer piano. Under the present circumstances, however, we offer our entire new stock of Sohmer Uprights and Grands, in beautiful art mahoganies and walnut, every one of which we guarantee to be fresh and new (some of which are still in our warehouse yet unboxed) at the following less-than-cost prices:

Reg. Price, $1250.

Style 45 Upright—We have ten of this style.

Made in mahogany and American walnut, polished or art finish; brown mahogany, art finish only. New design combination fall board and music rest. Width 5 ft. 2 in.; height 4 ft. 6 in.; depth 2 ft. 3 in.

This gives you an opportunity to secure the Sohmer, a high grade piano, at the price you would pay for the cheaper grades under ordinary trade conditions. Never before in our memory, in all piano business have we known of so high grade a piano offered at prices equaling this less-than-cost sale. Generally special sales show some profit, but in this case we will show an actual loss. We want to dispose of this stock and do it quickly and even at these less-than-cost prices we will arrange reasonable terms.

TWO KILLED IN FIFTEEN FOOT FALL.

Motor Crushes Pilot and Passenger as Plane Crashes in Take-off.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, July 30.—While hundreds of spectators looked on at an air carnival here today Pilot Ross E. Poland of Cameron, Mo., and George W. Linger, prominent Denver automobile man, were almost instantly killed when their plane crashed scarcely fifteen feet to the ground at the take-off of an air derby.

Both were in an Italian plane, one of the six participating in a twenty-four-mile handicap race given under the auspices of the Sons of Colorado.

Pilot Poland had banked his plane just after the take-off and it settled quickly, lost speed and crashed nose first into the ground. The heavy motor was thrown back against the bodies of the pilot and Linger, acting as one of the judges of the race. Poland was dead when spectators reached the demolished plane. Linger lived a few minutes. Their necks were broken and both were terribly crushed.

Poland, a former service man, had been employed as an instructor at the local aviation field for several months, coming here from Colorado Springs. He was about 30 years old. Linger who was 61, was a member of a Los Angeles automobile sales agency and was one of the six citizens who accompanied the pilots in the air derby to keep a record of the altitude at which the planes were supposed to fly. He was widely known throughout the West as a cattleman. The other pilots, not noticing the accident, continued the race, which was won by Pilot Paul Meng.

The body of the plane was virtually splintered as far as the basket on the second seat.

Bootlegger is Grave Menace, Says Haynes.

WASHINGTON GROVE (Md.) July 30.—Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, speaking here today, declared "he is a shortsighted American who fails to see in the bootlegger of today the spirit of the anarchist and the Bolshevik."

"The bootlegger," he asserted, "is in the last analysis a law violator and, stripped of his social prestige and political influence, he is a criminal giving assistance and encouragement to those forces of profiteering criminality whose business it has been to prostitute statesmanship and debauch citizenship, which have murdered more men in the disposition of their duties in proportion to the number employed in the enforcement of law than fell on the battlefields of France."

The personal-liberty argument against prohibition was described as a soap bubble by the commissioner.

SENATE COMMITTEE TO DISCUSS DYES.

AMERICAN VALUATION PROVISION IN TARIFF BILL TO ALSO BE TALKED OVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Whether the American valuation provision shall be retained in the Fordney tariff bill and whether the dye embargo section shall be restored will be decided by the Senate Finance Committee before hearings are held on the proposed duties. Monday and Tuesday will be given over to discussions of the domestic valuation plan and the dye embargo question will be considered Wednesday after which the committee will meet executively.

Agreement as to this course was reached today after discussions had made it evident in the opinion of committee members that the two subjects would crop up continuously and delay the hearings.

Although the dye embargo section was eliminated by the House, after a fight, witnesses appeared today urging its restoration. Objections to its reincorporation also were heard. The committee itself appeared sharply divided.

The temporary restrictions on dye importations, now in effect under the emergency tariff law, expire August 28.

SALT LAKE RAILWAY OFFICES TO CLOSE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE CITY, July 30.—As a result of the recent taking over of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad by the Union Pacific system, the traffic offices of the former railroad in Salt Lake City and throughout the East will be closed beginning Monday, according to word received here from Omaha, the headquarters of the Union Pacific. Hereafter, it was stated at the local offices of the Union Pacific, the work of the two roads will be consolidated at the Union Pacific offices.

GOES TO AFRICA FOR GORILLA FAMILY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Two women and a child were members of the party that embarked with Carl Akeley on the steamship Baltic today for a trip into the jungles of Africa.

Mr. Akeley, who has made two trips into the African wilds, is making this one in the hope of obtaining a gorilla family for the American Museum of Natural History.

INVESTIGATION SHOWS MORMON MURDERED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) July 30.—Investigation of the death of Joseph Lillywhite, president of the Colonio Morelos Land Company, a Mormon company in Mexico, has led to the belief that he was murdered and not accidentally killed as at first reported, according to F. J. Dyer, American consul at Nogales, Son., Mr. Lillywhite was found dead in a yard in Agua Prieta, Son on the night of June 18.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The State Department has heard nothing official from the Russian soviet government regarding its reported decision to release American prisoners, although an official message concerning the release of Mrs. Marguerite Harrison of Baltimore reached the department from Riga, Mrs. Harrison having been released through the intervention of Senator France of Maryland, who is in Russia. The department expects its demand for release of all American prisoners will be complied with, but the United States will do nothing in response to Russia's cry for food relief until all Americans detained or imprisoned are safely out of the soviet jurisdiction.

The coming Washington conference on Far Eastern problems and disarmament may force postponement by the Senate of free canal tolls discussion, the President being anxious that nothing should occur which might embarrass the most cordial relations with the invited powers, one of which is Great Britain, whose protest against free tolls in 1919 was an effective one.

Thousands of World War veterans have been cut off from compensation for disability by a ruling of the Comptroller-General that certain allotments were illegal. Congress, as a result, may have to amend the law.

Several Senators indicated at the Finance Committee hearing on the tariff bill today their opposition to an embargo on dye imports.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, in a speech near here today, branded bootleggers as anarchists and Bolsheviki.

The War Department publication of slacker lists is being held up by failure of draft boards and State authorities to check and return the lists sent to them for revision.

The Shipping Board received today a bid of $10,000,000 for the government's 287 wooden ships.

"We intend and will no no violence unless the Ku Klux Klan shows violence. We are in being and in force. If necessary, we will travel in force to do business in the form of open warfare.

"The law will have its chance to show that we have laws against mobs, white-capping and acts of violence. But we warn that being in Rome, we do as Romans do.

"We are unknown and unknowable. We will remain that way. We hope that we will not have to resort to populating lamp posts and using cold steel, but if so, Oakland and Greenwood (local cemeteries) will boast of much activity and the price of black coal will rise.

RIENDS WANT KIRK INQUIRY.

mand Prompt and Public Action on Charges.

ional Guard Officers May Hold Investigation.

jor Says He is Ready to Meet Accusations.

A prompt, thorough and public igation into the charges ing Maj. E. E. Kirk, acting head of the National Guard here, will be demanded by his friends and military associates, according to an announcement made by them yesterday, following the statement by Gov. Stephens that such charges, relating to Maj. Kirk's relations with the I.W.W. in San Diego in 1912, had been laid before him.

Another investigation probably will take the form of an official inquiry within the guard, officers of the organization said. None of these, however, was willing to go into details or be quoted in view of the fact that he might be called upon to take part in the inquiry. Those in touch with the situation said they felt certain that some action will result from the regular meeting of the National Guard at the Exposition Park Armory on Tuesday.

WANT PUBLIC INQUIRY.

The demand for a prompt and public investigation will be made in a resolution prepared to be introduced at the next meeting of the United Spanish War Veterans. This resolution will call upon the Governor and the other authorities to give Maj. Kirk an opportunity to meet the charges and defend himself in public. Maj. Kirk said he heard of this plan but refused to take any hand in the matter, so far as he personally is concerned. Dr. Howard W. Seagar, lieutenant-colonel in the Reserve Corps, and a member of the Spanish War Veterans, admitted that this action is contemplated.

The charges filed with the Governor by representatives of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association include the certified copies of documents showing that Maj. Kirk was indicted, tried and convicted in San Diego in 1912 in connection with the I.W.W. demonstrations there when the radicals from all over the country flocked to that city for the purpose of breaking San Diego's antistreet-speaking ordinance.

BOREE IN NORTH.

No additional information was forthcoming from the Governor's office yesterday regarding the progress of the investigation. Adjt.-Gen. Boree, who was said by the Governor's office to have charge of this investigation, was en route to Sacramento yesterday. He left Los Angeles before he could be reached for his version of the charges and the investigation.

"There is nothing I can add to my statement of last night other than to say that as soon as these charges are brought into the open I will go more than half way to meet them. I am anxious to have an opportunity to disprove the allegations that I have not been loyal or fair in my duties since my entrance into the National Guard," Maj. Kirk said yesterday.

"I have taken no steps so far, leaving the matter in the hands of my friends, but I have received many calls from my officers and associates in the guard, and can say with genuine pleasure that I am exceedingly gratified with the overwhelming expressions of confidence given me as the result of these charges. Many of my officers told me they will be glad to testify in my behalf and deny under oath that there is the slightest basis for any charges directed against my conduct since my entrance into the service of the United States."

BUSINESS GROWTH SHOWN.

Business in Los Angeles is steadily increasing, according to the monthly report of the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce, which was completed yesterday.

The report indicated that during July there was a decided increase over June in the number of skilled workers employed. Business in food products revealed the greatest increase, registering a 30 per cent expansion. Textiles and their products experienced a small gain. The month's business in lumber showed a gain of 5 per cent.

A 15 per cent increase was reported in chemicals and their allied products. A 5 per cent gain was shown in stone, clay and glass products. Railroad repair shops showed a fair growth in business and miscellaneous industries stood next in production to the food products group.

Of the sixteen groups investigated, ten of them showed increases, four remained stationary and two reported losses.

MANY REPLY TO ALL-YEAR "ADS."

Hundreds of Easterners Are Writing for Data.

Planning to Make Permanent Homes in Southland.

Drive to Spread Prosperity Over All Seasons.

Although the Southern California All-Year Club's advertising campaign has been under way for only two weeks, it is already proving to be a big success and hundreds of inquiries are pouring in from easterners who have realized that Southern California is not only a winter paradise, but also an all-year resort.

"A large proportion of our letters is from people who are interested in making their permanent homes here," said C. G. Milham, secretary of the club, "and we feel that this will make for increased prosperity of every business man in Southern California."

The All-Year Club's plan in launching the summer advertising campaign was to point out the delightful climate and many pleasures of Southern California as a summer resort and to convince easterners of the fact that this locality is unexcelled for the home-maker. The success of the plan is indicated by the fact that many persons in the East are now planning to make their homes here.

"I am considering making my home in Southern California," writes a St. Louis man to the All-Year Club. Another man of San Antonio, Tex., writes, "What I do want to know is this: What is real estate worth? I mean lots near fruit orchards, also cost of living, house rent, until I can buy one. I have a family of five. I would like to build a bungalow. If you can't answer this give it to a real estate dealer."

"I have a good car and would like to motor out if the roads are good," writes a lumber dealer of Louisiana. "There are four other cars that would make the trip with us. Please send maps, data and full information about climatic conditions there now."

The inquiries come from persons of all walks of life, bankers, city officials, merchants, clerical workers and others whose presence will be a valuable asset to this community, in building a greater Southern California.

The particular advantage of the All-Year Club's summer campaign is that it tends to establish an equalization of prosperity all the year around. Many easterners have thought of California as a winter resort only, and so the influx of tourists has naturally been larger in winter than in summer. But, due to the All-Year Club's advertising, many additional persons will be attracted to Southern California both in summer and in winter, and will bring added prosperity to Southern California throughout the year.

"The success of this campaign is largely due to the untiring efforts of the captains, and teams engaged in securing subscriptions to the All-Year fund," said Mr. Milham yesterday, "and results will show that these men have rendered an exceptionally valuable service to this community. We still need money for this campaign and all wishing to contribute may send their contributions to the All-Year Club in the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce Building."

Two Are Hurt in Auto Upset, Driver is Held.

Thrown heavily to the pavement when the automobile in which they were riding turned over at Twenty-sixth street and Santa Fe avenue early last evening, Reyes Hurtado, Mexican machinist of San Francisco, and Louie Fernandez of 2417 East Twenty-fourth street suffered possible basal skull fractures.

Henry Fernandez, also of 2417 East Twenty-fourth street, driver of the car, was uninjured. He was held by the police on a charge of reckless driving. Mr. Hurtado and Louie Fernandez were taken to the Receiving Hospital for treatment by Officers Moran and Knotts of the University division.

The driver of the car told the police that he had swerved the machine sharply to avoid hitting a boy who had run into the street.

WOMAN HAS A THRILLING PAST.

Texas Pioneer Endured Many Hardships, Danger.

Captured by Indians After Bloody Fight.

Aided Husband in Preaching the Gospel.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) July 30.—One would have to search far to find a woman whose life has been filled with the thrilling adventures and notable achievements, which, since early childhood, have marked the pathway of Mrs. Rebecca J. Fisher of Austin. She is 89 years old. Mrs. Fisher is a native of Pennsylvania, but came to Texas with her parents more than eighty years ago. The family entered this State through the port of Galveston, which was then but a poor and straggling village. Mrs. Fisher's father, Johnson Gilleland, was a member of Capt. Tomlinson's company of Texas troops. They were living at the Mexican village of Don Carlos when an attack was made upon them by Indians. So sudden was the assault that no defense could be made. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gilleland were killed, and Mrs. Fisher, then Rebecca Gilleland, and her 6-year-old brother were captured. In speaking of this terrifying experience, Mrs. Fisher said:

INDIANS' CAPTIVES.

"After murdering my father and mother, the Indians hurried away, taking brother and me with them. The chief's wife took charge of me. She was very vicious and threatened to cut off our hands and feet for crying, but she would not let any of the others hurt us."

As soon as the outrage of the Indians was discovered, a company of rangers under Capt. Price hastened in pursuit of the savages. Surprising the Indians in camp, where they were resting in apparent security, the rangers stampeded them. Before making their hasty departure the Indians pierced the boy's body with a lance and struck Rebecca on the head with a sharp instrument. Leaving the children for dead, the redskins hastily made their departure with the rangers close upon their heels. With their excellent mounts, the officers soon overtook the fleeing Indians and a bloody fight ensued, with the Texans victorious.

Little Rebecca, recovering from the shock of the blow on her head, carried her brother as best she could to a sheltered spot in a near-by grove of trees. When the fight was over the rangers returned for the captives. Hearing them approach the children thought they were Indians and fled back into the forest. One of the officers, knowing the little girl's name, called to her. It was only a few hours after their capture that the children were rescued. They were taken into the soldiers' camp, where they received every attention from Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston and General Mirabeau Lamar, afterwards President of the republic of Texas. Relatives were notified and the children were soon safe with their own people. Mrs. Fisher's brother recovered from the dangerous wound inflicted by the Indians and grew to manhood. He engaged in newspaper work and at one time was called the Texas poet.

COLLEGE GRADUATE.

Mrs. Fisher received her education at Rutersville College, one of the large educational institutions of the early days in Texas. Shortly after her graduation she became the wife of Rev. Orceneth Fisher, a prominent and distinguished Methodist minister. With her husband, Mrs. Fisher endured the privations and perils of those early days with the staunch heroism and serene faith that has marked her entire life. Dr. and Mrs. Fisher were among the pioneer missionaries who carried the Bible to the struggling settlements that had been planted in the wilderness of Texas and the West.

In 1855 Dr. Fisher was selected to serve his church at San Francisco, Cal. He was later made presiding elder of that district. Accompanied by his wife, they made the trip from Texas to California in a stage coach over the old overland route. It was a long and perilous journey, beset with dangers from Indians and outlaws. Arriving in California the young couple found the most deplorable conditions existing not only in religious matters, but in social, business and political realms. Lawlessness reigned almost supreme. Human life was lightly regarded. No man ventured forth unarmed.

While Dr. Fisher was serving the church in California one of the most prominent men of the community was killed. This intensified the bitterness and antagonism that existed between the law-abiding citizens and the ruffian element. Dr. Fisher was invited to preach the funeral sermon of the murdered man. While in the midst of the service a telegram came announcing that the men guilty of the crime had been hanged. The swift justice meted out to the murderers did much to clear the situation in that section.

ENCOUNTER HARDSHIPS.

Dr. and Mrs. Fisher were asked to go to Oregon to look after religious affairs in that State. Many hardships and dangers were encountered on this trip. The rough country over which they traveled was infested with savages. A company of troops accompanied them part of the way. For days at a time they traveled without seeing a single human habitation. The whole country was a wilderness.

Dr. Fisher had been authorized by the bishop to organize the Methodist Episcopal Church South in Oregon. This was on the eve of the Civil War, and much antagonism was shown toward the establishment of the Southern church in that western State. The clergyman, however, was not a man easily swerved from his duty. He had been requested to establish the Methodist Church South in Oregon, and he was determined that nothing should hinder him from performing this task. Before organizing the church he had planned to hold a camp meeting. Previous to the beginning of the meeting some one hoisted an old and battered flag at the entrance to the arbor. About the time that services were to begin a mob of about 300 men appeared at the meeting place and demanded that the minister remove the flag. Upon his refusal to do this the crowd rushed to the arbor crying "Hang him! Hang him!" The utmost confusion reigned. The men in the arbor got out their six shooters, women and children screamed and fainted. Mrs. Fisher, though startled and frightened, soon regained her composure, and, single handed, caught the leader of the mob, who was standing near by, and held him fast. In speaking of the incident, Mrs. Fisher said:

VICIOUS FACE.

"I will never forget the vicious expression of that man's countenance. During the excitement of this disturbance Dr. Fisher retained his wonted equilibrium, and through his composure did much toward quieting the mob. He told them that he was there as a minister of peace, and not of war; that he wanted to preach to them, and would do them no harm. When order and quiet were restored he began the delivery of his sermon, preaching from the text 'Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law.' They felt the power and truth of the sermon and were subdued by it. It did our church much good, making it grow and increase in numbers all through the country. The next day after the disturbance the father of the leader of the mob sent me a piece of Oregon cloth for a cloak. He said that I had saved his son's life. Those were awful days in that country, and I became known to the people as the 'woman who quelled the mob.' The men said that if one shot had been fired on that memorable occasion I would have been instantly killed. But I gave no thought to self. I was only a humble instrument in the hands of the Lord to be used in the accomplishment of his purpose."

NOTABLE CAREER.

Mrs. Fisher and her husband returned to Texas about 1870. Dr. Fisher died nearly thirty years ago. In addition to his notable career as editor, minister and bishop, he served two terms as Chaplain in the Congress of the Republic of Texas, and was one of the most distinguished men of his day. In the many perils and hardships that she was called upon to bear, Mrs. Fisher's courage and heroism never failed.

Mrs. Fisher has been called "the mother of Texas." She has served as president of the William B. Travis Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic, and has also been State president of the same organization. For many years she has made her home in Austin. She numbers among her acquaintances many of the great men and women of a century, including Miss Frances Willard, Mrs. James K. Polk, President and Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Judge Jackson of the Supreme Court of the United States, and many others distinguished in the service of their country.

NEWS AT THE STATE CAPITAL.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SACRAMENTO, July 29.—Who wouldn't be Governor of California?

This is a question buffeted about by State officials, especially those who consider it from the financial standpoint.

While it is the general belief the Governor receives a salary of but $10,000 a year, the truth is he gets a gross annual salary of $32,950 or a gross monthly salary of $2745, when allowable expenses are considered.

Figured from appropriations granted the Governor for the next two years by the last Legislature, the salary question presents itself as follows:

Salary for biennium—$20,000 or $10,000 a year or $833 1-3 month.

Postage, traveling and contingent—$18,400 or $9200 a year or $766 2-3 a month.

Special Secret Fund—$10,000 or $5000 a year or $416 2-3 a month.

Upkeep gubernatorial mansion—$17,500 or $8700 a year or $730 1-6 a month.

Total gross annual salary, $32,950; monthly salary $2745.

Records at the Capitol show the various appropriations always are drawn on for the full amount allowed for each month. In other words, there never is a balance in any of the gubernatorial funds.

State Highway Engineer Fletcher declares highway construction work being carried on under the supervision of the Highway Commission is doing much to relieve the unemployment situation in California.

Fletcher estimates there are at present 2500 men employed on highway contract and maintenance work in the State. Of this number 1500 are employed on contract work alone.

Since January 1, 1921, sixty-three contracts have been let by the commission, and the value of these contracts totals $7,916,874.97. In addition to letting these contracts for the construction of new highways and laterals, the commission since January 1 has spent $1,358,416.63 from the Motor Vehicle fund for maintenance work.

Work is being carried on at present, says Fletcher, in the following Southern California counties: Fresno, Inyo, Kern, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara.

Secretary of the State Board of Health Dickie announces that the annual meeting of the county and city health officers of California will be held in Santa Monica in September under the auspices of the California League of unicipalities.

Preparations are being made by the State Department of Education for the enforcement of the law requiring supervision of foreign-language schools in California.

Under the new law permits must be obtained from the school department by persons desiring to conduct or teach in a Japanese or other private language school, and before a permit will be granted the applicant will be rigidly examined to ascertain his knowledge of things American.

Sam H. Cohn, formerly statistician in the department, has been deputized by Superintendent of Public Instruction Wood to supervise the work of governing the language schools.

Warden J. A. Johnston of San Quentin prison has notified the Governor's office that two men are awaiting execution at the prison, and that a third has caused his execution to be stayed by appealing to the Supreme Court.

Gaudet Singh, a Hindu, is sentenced to die on September 2, according to Johnston, and Miguel Mauriquez, a Mexican, will be hanged September 30. John Valcalda was sentenced to hang August 12, but appealed.

State Controller Riley is going to take plenty of time to select a successor to J. W. Carrigan, State Inheritance Tax Attorney in Los Angeles, who recently mailed his resignation to the new Controller.

Riley says he has received applications for Carrigan's job, but declared no change will be made in the office for five or six months. "I want to take my time," says Riley, "in order to get the best man for the place."

COUNCIL O. K.'S GARBAGE DEAL.

Whitman Syndicate Loses Out in Controversy.

Bid of Fontana Hog-Feeding Company Accepted.

Reduction Firm to Take the Waste Temporarily.

The efforts of G. W. Whitman and his associates to feed city garbage to hogs in Los Angeles county definitely ended yesterday when John P. Steele, on behalf of Mr. Whitman, announced to the City Council the failure of the syndicate to secure a $75,000 bond to guarantee the performance of a ten-year contract with the city, and the Councilmen at once ordered the Board of Public Works to enter into a temporary arrangement with the Pacific Reduction Company to continue to dispose of the garbage for the next forty days.

The Councilmen also voted to accept the bid of C. H. Hopkins, representing the so-called Fontana syndicate, of 60 cents a ton for the garbage, under a ten-year contract, the material to be fed to hogs on an 13,000-acre ranch in San Bernardino county. The offer was accompanied by certified checks totaling $10,000, and A. B. Miller, who with Fred E. Lewis, is the principal member of the Fontana Farms Lands Company syndicate, said that Mr. Hopkins would file a bond for $75,000 tomorrow and execute the contract.

MAY CHANGE LAW.

Mr. Miller said that application would be made at once to the Board of Supervisors to have the new county ordinance amended so as to permit the transportation of garbage through Los Angeles county. The carrying of the wastes through the county is prohibited under the new ordinance, which was designed to prevent the feeding of garbage to hogs in the unincorporated parts of the county, and it was this regulation which blocked the efforts of Mr. Whitman to carry out his plans to start a garbage-feeding farm near Baldwin Park.

At the time Mr. Whitman made his bid of 96 cents a ton for the waste of the city, C. H. Hopkins was also a bidder, and it was this offer of 60 cents a ton for the garbage which was repeated yesterday. Under the new contract to be made between the city and C. H. Hopkins, the latter agree to accept the garbage beginning September 10, and until that date the Pacific Reduction Company will dispose of the city's garbage at its plant. In return the city will cancel the present outstanding bill for garbage at 51 cents a ton owed to the municipality by the Pacific Reduction Company, which amounts to about $15,000.

TO USE CLOSED CARS.

Mr. Miller of the Fontana Farms Lands Company, representing the successful bidder, said he believed that the county authorities on the showing to be made by the syndicate that the garbage would be transported in closed, specially constructed steel railroad cars, across the county, and that the health of no one would be peopardized by the transportation of the material would amend the ordinance. Mr. Miller said that there are now 5000 hogs on the ranch in San Bernardino county, and he declared that he expected no opposition from the people of that section, as the ranch would be conducted under the most sanitary conditions. By September 10, if the contract becomes effective, there will be 20,000 hogs on the property to handle the city's daily collections, totaling 300 tons of garbage.

That there is a likelihood of a satisfactory arrangement being made between the Fontana syndicate and the County Board of Supervisors to permit the transportation of the garbage was indicated by the statement made yesterday afternoon by Supervisor Wright, who said:

"If the garbage can be transported entirely through the country districts of the county and not through the built-up, residential portions, and the material is shipped in a sanitary manner, I can see no objection to permitting Mr. Hopkins and his associates from sending their cars through Los Angeles county."

CHOICE OF ROUTES.

As the shipments can be made by the Salt Lake or Santa Fe or by the Pacific Electric, it is probable that a routing for the garbage cars can be agreed upon that will be satisfactory to the Supervisors and that the shipping of the material can begin on September 10.

On account of the seriousness of the situation, the City Council met in special session to provide for the handling of the garbage after midnight tonight. Following Mr. Steele's statement that the Whitman bidders could not carry out their agreement, the City Council adopted a resolution formally forfeiting all of Mr. Whitman's rights under his contract, and this may make possible the retention by the city of the $10,000 certified check which accompanied the Whitman bid on July 1. City Attorney Stephens said that he would advise the Board of Public Works and the City Council during the coming week as to the city's right to refuse to return the check of Mr. Whitman.

HOW THEY VOTED.

Mr. Hopkins's offer of 60 cents a ton for the garbage was then read, and Councilman Mallard moved that the offer be accepted. The vote on the city's returning to garbage-feeding to hogs as a method of disposing of the city's wastes was: Yes, Allan, Langdon, Mallard, Mushet, Sanborn, Sparks and President Criswell, seven; no, Conaway and Wheeler. Councilman Conaway had opposed the approval of the Whitman contract and by his vote yesterday reaffirmed his opposition to this method of garbage disposal. Councilman Sanborn also opposed the Whitman contract, but voted yesterday in favor of accepting the Hopkins bid. Councilman Wheeler voted for the Whitman contract, but yesterday opposed accepting the Hopkins offer.

Attorney J. E. Kelby, in stating the willingness of the Pacific Reduction Company to handle the garbage during the next forty days, warned the Councilmen that the people of Los Angeles do not approve of the feeding of garbage to hogs, and he declared that the city, in order to continue a service of garbage disposal which had operated successfully for the past eight years without complaint, should purchase the plant of the Pacific Reduction Company and operate it.

"The health of the community is at stake," said Mr. Kelby, who stated that the company would sell the plant to the city for $450,000. Mr. Kelby declared that, owing to the fall in the prices of greases and other products manufactured from garbage by the reduction process, the plant has been operated at a loss since January.

COMMISSIONER'S VIEW.

Public Works Commissioner Treat, discussing the action taken by the Councilmen, which followed conferences held during the past few days between the Councilmen and members of the Board of Public Works, said:

"The acceptance of the bid of C. H. Hopkins was the only practical solution of this problem. To have taken over the Pacific Reduction Company plant and to have operated it would have cost the taxpayers at least $8000 a month. We are confident that, under the conditions with which we know the Fontana syndicate will handle the garbage, there will be no complaints from anyone."

Famous Boat of Klondike Gold Rush a White Elephant, Say Owners.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30. Permission to sell for $10 the steamer Humboldt, one of the famous ships of the Klondike gold rush of 1898, was granted by Judge Cabaniss of the Superior Court here. The vessel belongs to the estate of the late Adolph Ottinger, and Millard Ottinger, his son, petitioned the court for permission to sell, declaring the Humboldt was entailing a loss to the estate of $1200 a month. As under court procedure it would be impossible to give the vessel away, Ottinger said, he asked permission to sell it for a nominal sum. The Humboldt, a wooden vessel of 1076 tons, in recent years has been used in the coastwise lumber trade. She was built in Eureka, Cal., in 1896, and has been tied up here many months because of lack of cargo.

TRAP TWO ASSERTED HOLD-UPS.

Police Say Chain Led to Confession of Street-Car Robberies.

A small piece of chain induced two youthful hold-up suspects, according to the police, to confess yesterday they are the men who have been terrorizing the operators of one-man cars by robbing them of collections.

The suspects, M. C. Davels, 23 years old, and William Jones 22, were arrested as suspicious characters last Friday night by Police Lieut. Davis, Detective Stephens of University Station and E. L. Olney, chief special agent for the Los Angeles Railway. The men were suspected of having committed street-car hold-ups.

When the room of Davels and Jones at 1158 East Twelfth street was searched, the small piece of chain was found. It was part of the equipment of a conductor's change container and was identified by a victim of a recent hold-up.

According to the arresting officers, Davels and Jones confessed to robbing J. M. Faulkenberg and W. J. Harris, who operate one-man cars on the East Jefferson-street line. The prisoners were charged with robbery.

JUDGE CONLEY SHIFTED.

FAR EAST REALLY IS NEAR TO LOS ANGELES.

SHIPPING COSTS MAKE GREAT CHANGE IN DISTANCES, SAYS BUYERS' CHIEF.

The Far West and the Far East as geographical locations have been replaced by the Near East and the Near West as far as Los Angeles is concerned, according to the Los Angeles Purchasing Agents' Association and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and they prove their points by figures.

"When measured by freight or shipping rates distances take on a considerably different aspect than when measured in miles," said W. L. Chandler, head of the National Purchasing Agents' Association, at a luncheon last week given by the chamber.

Mr. Chandler pointed out that in cost of transporting pig iron Sweden is as near Los Angeles as our harbor and Honolulu is nearer than San Bernardino, Hongkong is closer to this city than San Francisco, while the Far East is no farther away than San Bernardino.

"Transportation rates have changed geography, so let's drop the designations 'Far West' and 'Far East' and say instead 'Near West' and 'Near East,'" he said.

CONVICTED AS ROBBER.

Willie Jones, colored, who set up an alibi when charged with holding up and robbing two men in a grocery store January 29, last, and obtaining $124, was convicted by a jury in Judge Conley's court yesterday. Sentence will be passed on him tomorrow. At a previous trial of Jones the jury disagreed.

BEQUEST TO LIBRARY.

Woman's Will Also Names Y. M. C. A. Among the Beneficiaries.

Bequests were made to the Y. M. C. A. and the Los Angeles Public Library in the will, filed for probate yesterday, of Ida V. Fleming, who died here last June 18. It was stated in the petition for the will that the decedent died with "neither issue, father, mother, brother or sister," and mentioned various persons she desired to share in her estate, which was given as in excess of $10,000.

Besides the two institutions, those mentioned as beneficiaries are Charles Fleming, a brother-in-law; his wife, Marion Fleming; Mrs. Lou Haurm, Mrs. Anna Yates, Eva and Martha Swalley, Mrs. Simon and Miss Marie Simon, all of this city and Miss Mary Talcott.

BABY-SLAYING CASE MAY END TOMORROW.

The final chapter of the trial of Miss Erie Mullicane, on trial in Judge Houser's court on the charge of slaying her new-born babe, will be written tomorrow. Virtually all of the evidence is before the jury. The defense will call several doctors who will testify as to the state of mind of the unhappy mother at the birth of her nameless child.

There is no direct evidence that Miss Mullicane deliberately strangled the baby. There is evidence that when the body was found days afterward in a trunk at a transfer company's office, a double-knotted handkerchief was discovered around its neck. The autopsy surgeon stated that the lungs floated, indicating that they had contained air, but he was unable to say whether death was due to natural causes or design.

BILL PARKER COPS HONORS.

Wins Men's Tennis Singles Title from Nat Browne.

Southern Crown for Women Goes to Mrs. Leachman.

Challenge Round in Men's Doubles Billed Today.

BY PAUL LOWRY.

It took Bill Parker five minutes less than two hours to win the Southern California tennis title for men in the finals of the annual championship tourney on the courts of the Los Angeles Tennis Club yesterday afternoon. The swarthy San Franciscan swatted his way to victory over Nathaniel B. Browne, pudgy, but valiant, upholder of the south's honors, in a four-set match that was studded with considerable sound and a deal of indifferent tennis. The scores were 3-6, 6-2, 10-8, 6-2.

Scarcely had the north's victory in the men's singles been chalked on the scoreboard when the challenge round in the women's singles was started, and here the north again waltzed away with the honors when Mrs. Ream S. Leachman, 1920 champion, defeated Miss Marion Williams in straight sets, 6-0, 7-5.

RAH FOR JIMMY.

In the finals of the boys' singles, James Derricks defeated Merrill Ramsey, 6-4, 3-6, mainly because he was the steadier in the pinches.

The junior singles crown went to Arnold Wolff, who trounced Fred Houser, 6-1, 6-1, and the junior doubles title was copped by Call and White, who disposed of Ordway and Wachter, 1-6 9-7, 6-2.

Miss Marion Williams won her way to the challenge round by defeating Miss Jessie Grieve in a very interesting match, 6-1, 6-4.

Two matches will be played this afternoon, the first one starting at 2 o'clock. These are the finals in the mixed doubles which will bring together Mrs. B. O. Bruce and Tom Bundy on one side of the net and Miss Marion Williams and Simpson Sinsabaugh on the other, and the challenge round in the man's doubles, with McLoughlin and Ken Hawkes opposing Nat Browne and Tom Bundy.

IT LOOKED NICE.

Everything looked rosy for a southern triumph in the Browne-Parker match in the first set. The two rivals stood on the base line and matched poke for poke with Browne having all the best of the pokes. Browne was playing superbly. Parker couldn't get warmed up and was missing a lot of easy shots. When he came hurdling to the net, which was infrequent in the first set, Browne passed him with brilliant back-hand slices or fore-hand chops, or sent him charging to the base line after dinky lobs.

In the second set Parker changed his mode of attack. Forsaking the back line he rushed for the net at every opportunity and by increasing his pace soon had Browne on the run. His volleys and half-volleys just over the net caught Browne in deep court, and he soon piled up a lead in games of 5-2. Browne then won his service, and Parker ended the set by winning his.

The third set was most bitterly contested of all. Parker again retired to the base line style of play, apparently fearing that he would be unable to stand the strain of a continuous rushing attack. The games went much as they did in the first set until Browne had forged to the front with a commanding lead of five games to three. Parker discovered the Bromne had a weak point in a chop close to the body and he took advantage of it to the extent of winning Browne's service, and making it 5-4 in games. Then ensued the decisive game of the set. Parker worked it up to 40-15 in his favor by a wonderful rally, only to toss away the next two points, netting an easy volley and smashing a lob close to the net into the backstops, but rallying again he won the next two points and game on two beautiful volleys.

BREAKS THROUGH.

Games then went with the service to the seventeenth game, when Parker broke through Browne's service, walloping a short lob for the deciding point and quickly ran out the set, allowing Browne only one point on his service.

Browne's side-line passes in the fourth set enabled him to hold matters even for four games, when Parker started taking the net, and here he dominated the play completely. Browne never won another game, losing the last two at love, Parker driving and smashing at will.

If Marion Williams could have forgotten that she was playing a finals before a crowded grand stand she might have done much better in first set with Mrs. Ream S. Leachman of Vallejo. But the local girl was flustered, and she showed it to the extent of losing a love set to the northerner. However, she demonstrated her real ability in the second set, when she carried Mrs. Lachman to a deuce set, and gave southern adherents a real thrill by winning the first three games. Mrs. Leachman had to play real tennis to beat her, and should be proud of the Brock challenge cup which she carried home for keeps, her win yesterday being her third leg upon the trophy.

ANGELS' DRIVE IS WONDERFUL.

The recent drive of the Los Angeles club toward the pennant is one of the most sensational developments of the season.

President Powers is too familiar with the uncertainties of baseball to make a July claim for the flag, but he is confident that his team will make a tremendous bid.

On July 12 Killefer's men were fifth. Since then they have won fifteen out of nineteen games—a smash which yesterday landed them in second place. During this drive they have shown the best baseball witnessed here in the race to date.

MARY BROWNE STATE CHAMP.

Defeats Miss Wagner for the New York Title.

Los Angeles Racketer Wins in Straight Sets.

Mrs. Bundy and Mrs. Hitchins Grab Doubles.

BY FRED HAWTHORNE.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Miss Mary K. Browne of California won the woman's New York State championship lawn tennis singles title this afternoon by defeating Miss Marie Wagner, the defending champion, in the challenge round of the annual tournament on the turf courts of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge. Miss Browne won by a score of 6-3, 6-3, and from the start there was no question as to the final outcome of the match, even though Miss Browne was woefully off her game almost throughout.

WINS DOUBLES.

Mrs. May Sutton Bundy of California, paired with Mrs. Carl V. Hitchens, champion of Mexico, won the women's doubles title by defeating Miss Wagner and Miss Clara Cassel in straight sets at 6-3, 6-4.

In a special exhibition men's doubles match, Vincent Richards and Howard Voshel of New York defeated the Kinsey brothers, Robert and Howard, from California, by a score of 10-8, 9-7, 6-3.

Miss Browne gave unmistakable evidence in her match for the singles championship with Miss Wagner that she is far from her best condition at present. She was continually missing shots and had so little confidence in her game that she was afraid to stroke the ball, until well in the second set, when she finished off the last three games with the loss of only three points.

GOING GREAT.

Had Miss Wagner shown more of the fighting spirit she might have at least forced the issue to three sets even if she had not won the chief honors. Her own strokes were going beautifully and in the early stages she was decisively outplaying her opponent. As soon as Miss Browne began to show signs of coming back, however, Miss Wagner weakened palpably.

The unusually high temperatures of the last few days have been raising havoc with Miss Browne's physical condition, and she has not been able to obtain the necessary amount of sleep for a player attempting the gruelling program she had mapped out for herself. I mention this to explain the little Californian's lapses today, when neither strokes nor judgment were working properly for any sustained period. It was purely on that undefinable quality known as "class" in a champion that enabled her to vanquish Miss Wagner in straight sets.

NOT IN DANGER.

Mrs. Bundy and Mrs. Hitchens were never in danger in their match against Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel, and they formed an aggressive and powerful combination, both seeking the net for the "kills," when the openings had been made, although Mrs. Bundy favored the back of the court most of the time. It was her splendid forcing shots on ground strokes that gave Mrs. Hitchens many opportunities to finish off the points by brilliant work at the net position. There were times when the Mexico City champion faltered, but in the main her play was up to the standard and she was an important factor in the victory.

MAKES ERRORS.

Richards and Voshell were not working together very smoothly in the early stages of their match against the Kinsey brothers. Richards was guilty of many errors, especially on his return of service, and he also flubbed many "sitters" at the net position. Voshell, on the other hand, was steadier than usual, but this did not detract a whit from his speed and tremendous smashing overhead, and it was the force of his game that turned the tide against the fine, accurate play of the Californians.

The Kinseys, while never as severe as the opposing pace in their handling of overhead shots, earned many a point by splendid placing and position play, and the rallies from inside the service court lines kept the largest gallery of the week keyed up to an enthusiastic pitch.

SHOWS SPEED.

By the time the second set had reached the half-way point, Richards had worked the rough points off his game and was going into the rallies with a speed equal to Voshell's, while his low volleying and cross-court overhand volleys were important factors. The Kinseys continued to play sterling tennis right through to the end, but they could not stand up under the swift pace as well as the easterners.

The summaries:

WAHOO'S SLAM BRUISES SACS.

Crawford's Great Triple Wins Game in Ninth.

Solons Lose a Tough Contest in Closing Canto.

Hughes Wobbles Near End and Gets the Derrick.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS

That great allegorical pageant, "Potato Week," ended in a brilliant spectacle yesterday afternoon, when Wahoo Sam Crawford put Los Angeles in second place in flattening the spud until it resembled a saucer peach, Angels winning, 4 to 3.

Up to the ninth the celebration had taken the form of a pitching duel between Tom Hughes and Dick Niehaus, with the local man having a decided edge. But something happened to both of these pitchers in the final frame, with the attack on both sides overpowering the defense, and shaping things up for a spectacular finish which sent the fans into a species of dry delirium tremens, when, with an explosive climax, the Angels nosed out Sacramento.

STAGE RALLY.

Crawford's triple was delivered under dramatic circumstances. Sacramento blanked, and running two runs behind, staged a sudden rally in the ninth, and jumped into the lead with a three-run attack, which, in its severity, drove Hughes to cover, and brought Nick Dumovich in to block further progress of the enemy with sundry sweeps of his lean left arm.

Two out, two on and two needed to win when Crawford came up for his final shot. Statz, leading off in the ninth, had retired on a fly that backed Kopp against the left-field fence. Jimmy McAuley drove over second for what looked a sure single, but the scurrying McGaffigan got in front of the ball, and nailed him by half a stride.

BEGINS TO FALTER.

With victory at his fingertips, Niehaus began to falter, and walked Carroll. This brought Sandow Griggs to the plate. Whether Niehaus had lost his control, or refused to flirt with fate by giving Griggs anything good to hit, is problematical. Anyway, Sandow didn't get anything to his liking, and eventually drew a base on balls. Potentially, Sandow was the winning run.

This put the issue squarely up to Crawford. Opportunity knocked with both fists at Sam's front door, and he was not deaf to the entreaty. Sam, in fact, welcomed the opportunity, as he was behind in his hitting for the day. One came up about belt high, and Sam belted it accordingly. When the ball squrted from Sam's bat there never was a doubt as to who had won that ball game. The sphere shot out on a rising line into left center, yards from the best dash and jump of both Kopp and Compton, and lodged solidly against the base of the fence.

SAM AT THIRD.

Carroll and Griggs were across long before the ball had been returned to the diamond, with Crawford at third. Sam formally touched that base with both feet, and then with difficulty made his way to the clubhouse through thousands of porpoises which were now excitedly disporting themselves on the field.

Los Angeles gathered its first ace in the second, when Bert Niehoff, first up, drove the potato over the left-field fence and into a Main-street restaurant for a home run. Another in the third on a double by Statz, McAuley's bunt and a left-field single by Deadly Dixie. Three times subsequently, the Angels had runners on third, once with none out when McAuley started the fifth with a triple, but not until the fag frame were they able to break through again.

PASS DOES IT.

As in the final dash, it was a pass which started the game's other great rally. Hughes opened the ninth with a walk to Pick, and this precipitated something, which but for poor coaching, might have resulted in enough runs to put the game clear beyond the reach of Los Angeles. Compton followed this pass with a line single that sent Pick to third. Sheehan bunted to Hughes, who hesitated, and then threw to McAuley too late to force Compton. Bases full.

Buddy Ryan cleaned them with a double to farthermost corner of right field. Rounding second, Ryan was poorly coached. He started for third, and then turned back, only to find the way of retreat cut off by Crawford's sharp throw to Niehoff. Buddy was then chased down on the line for the first out. Bill Orr followed with a single, which would have counted Buddy, meaning there would have been four runs in with nobody out.

TOM YANKED.

Orr's hit dislodged Hughes. Dumovich struck out Cook, but Niehaus singled infield. McGaffigan forced Orr at third, leaving the Sacs one run to the good. But this was not the last potato in the sack as far as

PREPARE FOR REGATTA.

Skippers of the Los Angeles Yacht Club will line up this afternoon for a twelve-mile race off Long Beach to practice up for the Southern California yacht regatta, which will be held at Santa Barbara next week. The race this afternoon will be for sloops only, the yachts covering a triangle course.

Los Angeles yachtsmen will be present at the big regatta in large numbers, and entries from San Diego, San Francisco, and Santa Barbara indicate that the annual affair will be the largest ever held. More than 100 ships are expected to take part in the races, yawls, sloops, schooners, speed boats, and motor yachts having signed up to compete for cups in their respective classes.

There is a lively interest in the Lipton cup race, which will take place on the second day of the regatta. Competition is limited to sloops, and rules of the Boston Bay Yacht Club will be observed. The Galliano, owned by Capt. Churchill of the Los Angeles Yacht Club, won the trophy last season at the Coronado races, and the Gretchen and Trilby, flying the pennant of the San Diego Yacht Club, will attempt to carry the Lipton cup back to San Diego waters.

A crew of seasoned yachtsmen will pilot the Galliano under Capt. Churchill. Hap O'Conner will officiate as timer, Doug MacKinnon will be on the main sheet, Harold Clark starboard backstay, Pierre Davis, port, and Shorty Dorsey and Bayne Stephans will handle the light sail.

All yachts from San Pedro entered in the regatta will make the trip in competition, each ship competing in its class. The starting gun will be fired at noon Saturday, August 6.

G NEWS

MEN ON TRIAL GET GRILLING.

Black Sox Hauled Over Coals by Prosecutor.

Indicted Players Planning to Tour the Country.

Defense is to Have Its Session Tomorrow Morning.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—When gam- blers begin corrupting the great American game and players begin co-operating with them, baseball is headed for the same trap into which horse racing fell and for the same reasons. This warning was given today in arguments at the closing of the trial of former White Sox players and their alleged gambler associates in the 1919 world series scandal.

The indicted players are so confident of acquittal, however, that they are planning a tour of the country, believing the trial will be a tremendous advertising asset and that they will be greeted by huge crowds at every appearance. George (Buck) Weaver, however, will not accompany them. He and his brother-in-law have built up a profitable pharmacy business here and that requires his undivided attention. The others, with Eddie Cicotte as captain, manager and pitcher, say they already have numerous offers of dates, chiefly in the South and Southwest, and negotiations are now in progress with independent managers in the big league cities.

WILL BE FREED.

It is practically certain that Weaver and Felsch will be acquitted. In fact, Judge Friend has intimated that he would instruct the jury in their favor and set aside a verdict of guilty should one be returned. If Weaver re-enters the game, he will only do so as a major league player. He has not attempted to play outside ball and will not even engage in practice games with his old associates.

Edward Prindeville, one of the attorneys for the State, today excoriated the "Black Sox" and their gambler friends, saying in part:

"The evidence shows that a swindle and con game on the American public was arranged in New York and carried out in Cincinnati and Chicago. These defendants swindled the kids who saved their nickels and dimes to go out and watch their idols in the world's series. Instead of seeing honest ball games, they saw a lot of conspirators jumping around after being 'fixed' by a few gamblers.

A COMBINATION.

"We have here baseball players who dealt with David Zelser, a gambler who styled himself the lieutenant of Arnold Rothstein and Abe Attell. When you get a combination like that at work corrupting baseball, you get a combination that kills honest sport.

"Baseball is about the only sport we have left that is not commercialized. If the game is to be conducted in the same manner the 1919 series was conducted you will find that it will soon be restricted the same as horse racing or prize fighting—either that or legislated out of business.

"Gambling is the root of the whole trouble. Unless the gamblers could buy the players, heart, soul and body, there would be no inducement for them to bet on the games. Unless the gamblers can make money betting on fixed games, there is no market for dishonest ball players to sell their honor.

SOLD GAMES.

"These ball players were not dealing with a single clique of gamblers. They sold their games wherever they could and for what they could get. Later they quarreled with Burns, a fixer, and cheated him out of his share. The crime strikes at the heart of every red-blooded citizen and every kid who plays on a sand lot. The State is asking in this case a verdict of five years in the penitentiary and a fine of $2000 for each defendant."

The defense will open its arguments Monday and expects to consume ten hours. Five hours will then be given the State to close and the case will go to the jury, probably Tuesday afternoon.

BISCAILUZ RESIGNS CITY PLANNING POST.

Undersheriff Biscailuz, recently appointed by Sheriff Traeger, yesterday tendered his resignation as a member of the City Planning Commission to G. Gordon Whitnall, secretary of that organization. The undersheriff stated as his reasons for resigning that his new duties take up all of his time and he has found himself unable to devote the required work to the city planning. He said he had represented the Native Sons of the Golden West on the commission, and hoped that society again would be represented. The resignation, it was understood, would take effect as soon as the board can make a new appointment.

ALMOND TARIFF FIGHT PLANNED.

California Senators Will Work in Harmony.

Battle Will be Carried to the Floor of Senate.

Present Rates Spell Disaster for Industry.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—California almond growers with their backs to the wall are determined to make a sensational fight for a higher tariff on their product. Today they succeeded in getting Senator Shortridge and Johnson to make the fight jointly for the benefit of California and the industry and both Senators announced that they would go to the floor of the Senate if necessary.

Senator Shortridge is heartily in favor of the Johnson amendment to increase the tariff on almonds to 5 cents for unshelled and 15 cents for shelled and both Senators will have the assistance of the California Congressmen and the facts and figures compiled by the almond growers themselves.

That Senators Johnson and Shortridge will work in complete harmony in their fight before the Senate Finance Committee and on the floor of the Senate, if the battle is carried there was disclosed today in individual and simultaneous statements given out by the California Senators following Johnson's announcement that he would introduce an amendment to the Fordney tariff bill which went from the House to the Senate with duties of only 4 cents on unshelled and 12 cents on shelled almonds, a schedule utterly ineffective to prevent disintegration of California's almond growing industry, according to the State's 4000 growers.

Senator Shortridge said: "I shall certainly back Senator Johnson's amendment before the Finance Committee and I shall fight for it on the floor is necessary."

"I shall certainly welcome Senator Shortridge's co-operation," Senator Johnson declared. "This is not a one-man fight. It is a last minute desperate battle to save an industry of tremendous importance to California and we must have with us every man, woman and child at home to win."

SCHAEFER GOLFS TO IMPROVE CUE WRIST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—Young Jake Schaefer, it was learned today, has taken up golf to improve his billiard play, which threatened last winter to outdo the wizardry of his father. The young balk-line player has decided to make Chicago his home after living for some time in San Francisco. Charles Tennes, his manager, has posted a purse of $2500 for a match between Schaefer and any other billiard player in the world.

WATER DEVELOPMENT URGED

Gov. Stephens was the guest of honor and speaker last night at the meeting in the Van Nuys High School to celebrate the formation of the California Potato Growers' Exchange. R. B. Holloway, president of the Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce, delivered the address of welcome. Others on the program were Director Hecke of the State Department of Agriculture, Dr. H. S. Gordon, president of the Riverside Farm Bureau, and R. B. Peters, president of the San Bernardino Farm Bureau.

Gov. Stephens, in urging development of the State's water resources, stated that California has close to 10,000,000 acres available for irrigation. Of this territory 36 per cent was irrigated in January, 1915, and the irrigation of 636,000 additional acres since the initiation of the State Water Commission has shown that the State has made a 7 per cent increase in its irrigation program. The Governor added that during the last thirty months the total of all applications represents 6,000,000 acres.

The State, he said, can produce 9,250,000 theoretical horsepower from its mountain streams, the steady increase of horsepower developed in California pointing to the remarkable possibilities available for power development in the State.

The Governor also touched upon the great tasks confronting California, tasks which are not insurmountable—of the determining of existing rights, a work which has been hampered by insufficient funds appropriated for this purpose.

MEXICAN CROP OUTLOOK GOOD.

Cotton, Bean and Sugar Yields Are Promising.

Chamber of Commerce Official Reviews Situation.

Modern Machinery and Methods Are Much Needed.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) July 30.—Crop prospects in Mexico for the present season are remarkably good, according to Pedro V. Rincon, a director of the Confederated Chambers of Commerce of Mexico. The rainy season this summer was a little late in beginning, and this caused planting in the plateau region in the valley of Mexico to be somewhat delayed. Planting of corn and beans, however, in the region where the rainy season prevailed is now practically over. The acreage of these products is about the same as usual.

BELOW LAST YEAR.

"In the States of Queretaro, Guanajuato, San Luis Potosi and Aguascalientes, the crops are about 2 per cent less than last year in condition," Rincon said. "They were unusually good last year in these States. In the States of Jalisco, Colima, Nayarit and Sinaloa there promises to be a very good yield of beans, garbanzo and sugar cane. The sugar production of the States of Vera Cruz, Morelos, Puebla and Oaxaca will be large.

"In Morelos and Puebla sugar plantations that were devastated during the revolution are being reclaimed, and while it is going to take some time to bring them back to what they once were, this will gradually be accomplished. This also applies to the sugar mills of that region, many of which were badly wrecked or destroyed.

In the States of Durango, Coahuila and Chihuahua the wheat crop, which already has been harvested, gave more than an average yield. The corn crop, however, in those States, was poor.

"The prospects for the cotton crop in the Laguna district around Torreon are very promising. The pink boll worm has done little damage there this season, due to the energetic efforts on the part of the government in combating the pest. In the State of Sonora the garbanzo production will be equal to, or larger than that of last year.

CONSIDERABLE IMPORTING.

"More or less corn, wheat and flour have been imported to Mexico ever since trade relations were established between this country and the United States. It is not every year that the importation of large quantities of these products is necessary in order to supply the needs of the Mexican people. It usually can be counted upon, however, that the domestic production of corn will not be sufficient to meet home demands. In the prerevolutionary days there were shortages of corn production that threatened famine in different localities of the country, just as it has been during the last few years.

"In 1917 corn sold in the City of Mexico for 80 cents a kilo, which is equivalent to two and one-fifth pounds. The Confederated Chambers of Commerce organized a subsistence department and purchased 15,000,000 pesos worth of corn in the United States. The grain was shipped to Mexico and sold at its exact cost of 32 cents a kilo.

"Distributing stations, at which this corn was shipped, were established at El Oro, Toluca, Torreon, Monterey, Pachuca, San Luis Potosi and Queretaro. The government loaned the Confederated Chambers of Commerce 1,200,000 pesos with which to make the original purchase of corn and this fund was turned over from time to time until the entire 15,000,000 pesos worth of the grain had been bought.

MINING COMPANIES HELP.

The larger mining companies at El Oro, Toluca and Guanajuato advanced the subsistence department money for the purchase of corn for their employees. We continued this work for a period of nine months, relieving the shortage of the grain among the poor people very materially and enabling them to make their purchases at a greatly reduced price. Corn is now selling at 8 to 9 cents a kilo."

The Confederated Chamber of Commerce of Mexico was organized in 1912. Its membership embraces fifty-seven local Chambers of Commerce in different cities of the country, also Chambers of Commerce made up of business men of other nationalities, including the American Chamber of Commerce, the Italian Chamber of Commerce, the French Chamber of Commerce and the Spanish Chamber of Commerce, all of the City of Mexico. The American Chamber of Commerce at Tampico does not belong to the confederation but it co-operates with it in every way possible. The Confederated Chamber of Commerce is divided into various committees which look after the interests of their members and promote business and trade between them in every possible way.

BASIS IS AGRICULTURE.

Although Mexico is exceedingly rich in mines, oil, timber and various other native products, the fact is recognized by President Obregon and the men who are associated with him in the administration of the government, that the basis of the prosperity of the Mexican people is agriculture. Of the approximately 15,000,000 people in Mexico, it is estimated that not less than 10,000,000 reside upon ranches and farms. They are by their very nature a pastoral and agricultural people. Notwithstanding the vast rural population, the lands of the country have been made to produce but a very small part of what they are capable of doing.

It is to bring about a greater production and thus increase the distribution of wealth among the Mexicans that the government is evolving and putting into effect various projects, some of which may, to a degree, at least, have the appearance of being socialistic, but which are believed to be, on the part of their advocates, the best means of solving the economic problems by which the country is now confronted.

NEED MODERN MACHINERY.

One of the prime necessities of agricultural Mexico is modern farm machinery and implements. The government has imported large quantities of American-manufactured machinery and distributed it among the more progressive native farmers with a view of demonstrating in a practical way the benefits that may be had by the use of modern methods of agriculture. Scientific rotation of crops and the exercise of greater care in the selection of seed are also being urged.

Although the thin soil of the plateau region of Mexico has been in many instances at least growing crops for centuries no fertilizer has been used to replenish the exhausted elements of nutrition. It is proposed to introduce fertilizers and in this way bring about an enormous increase in the yields of various crops.

It is stated that there is available in Mexico for fertilizer purposes enormous deposits of rock phosphate and guano with a possibility that potash beds may be found by the making of proper research. Sulphuric acid could easily be obtained by the installation of necessary equipment in the smelters, it is pointed out. At any rate the subject of increasing the agricultural production is receiving the earnest attention of soil experts.

In the City of Mexico there is maintained a large public exhibit of modern farm implements and machinery, where visitors from the rural districts may obtain a first-hand knowledge of their operation.

Intellectual Prisoner is Saved from Sentence in Forgery Case.

Dr. John J. Finn, Harvard graduate, former instructor in an institute at Watsonville, graduate of Johns Hopkins University and student of biology in Edinburgh, Scotland, will be put on probation by Judge Avery after October 29, if he behaves himself. This intellectual prisoner who was arrested on the charge of passing forged checks was sent back to the County Jail, where he has endeared himself to the prisoners by his medical work among them.

As he was leaving the jail for Judge Avery's court for sentence yesterday a piece of paper was slipped to him by another prisoner. The paper contained a verse written by Al E. Stinson, Jr., a fellow-prisoner, dedicated to Dr. Finn. The concluding stanza read:

"Just picture yourself in the prisoner's place,
Waiting and watching for his kindly face;
Then you will say when you understand,
That he is the living reminder of Charity's hand."

Dr. Finn's downfall was due to two hings, according the Dept. Dist.-Atty. John J. Hill—drink and an exaggerated ego.

Dr. Finn met Jimmy McLaughlin. Jimmy wanted to go to San Francisco and did not have the money. The scheme of raising money on forger checks suggested itself. The couple abtained about $310 by forging checks, one of them at least bearing the forged signature of a Catholic priest, it is said. The arrest of the two men followed. McLaughlin skipped his bail. Dr. Finn remained in jail.

In Judge Avery's court Mr. Hill spoke kindly of Dr. Finn. It was his belief that McLaughlin actually forged the names to the checks. Dr. Finn declared he had had a drink of cider in Main street. After the drink he could remember nothing, he said.

"You are a very likely sort of a fellow," the court said to Dr. Finn. "I am not surprised that your friends dealt kindly by you."

THREATENS TO SPREAD FILM ROW.

Head of Studio Strikers Says National Chief Backs Action Here.

Motion-picture theaters throughout the country will soon be affected by the striking studio employees of Los Angeles unless the local producers comply with the demands of the strikers, according to a statement issued yesterday by Vern Ostendorf, chairman of the strikers' committee.

Mr. Ostendorf stated he has received a telegram from James Lemke, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees and the Motion-Picture Machine Operators, in which that official sanctions the action taken by the strikers here.

"The telegram I have received from the national president advises me that the controversy between the motion-picture studios and the building trades council has the indorsement of the national headquarters in New York," said Mr. Ostendorf.

"This means that we can now carry our fight to all cities in the United States where pictures, produced by the eleven Los Angeles studios now affected by the strike, are exhibited. If we so desire we can request the motion-picture operators to refuse to take part in the showing of the pictures."

LOSES PIN SET WITH SEVENTY DIAMONDS.

Mrs. H. K. Bingham, wealthy Santa Barbara woman, asked the police to find a bar pin, set with seventy diamonds and valued at $900, which she says was either lost or stolen in a downtown store yesterday. Mrs. Bingham told the police she removed the pin from her waist when she was about to try on another. She laid it on a table, she said, and within a few minutes it was gone.

LOTS AT ANAHEIM LANDING

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS ANAHEIM LANDING has been one of the most famous watering resorts in Southern California. The oldtimers selected it on account of its Quiet bay, full of shell fish, a true arm of the sea. For the first time in all that period, lots can now be purchased right on the bay. Paved streets, water, gas and electricity are being installed. Less than seventy-five lots are for sale. R. D. Richards, agent at the Landing. Postoffice address, Seal Beach, Cal.

LEADS WORLD IN AGRICULTURE.

Los Angeles Produces More Value in Farm Output Than Any Other County in United States, While Southern California Outdistances World.

Shades of hogs and hominy! No wonder half the Middle West farmers migrated to Southern California. The Bureau of Crop Estimates has just issued its 1920 report, a part of the decennial Federal Census, which shows that the Southland is the greatest farming country in the world.

This may make the hair bristle on the heads of those who are from Iowa, Illinois and Kansas, but it is the cold-pickled truth. California outgrows all the other States when it comes to producing agricultural products, and Los Angeles county leads the world in value of its farm crops.

Not so very long ago the United States Chamber of Commerce drew a circle around Los Angeles and designated it as a white spot on the business map which was otherwise dark or shadowy. Lots of people thought there was a halo over this city because of its thousands of busy factories. Many thought that the building industry was responsible for its prosperity.

It cannot be doubted that whirring wheels and busy hammers have done their share to dispel the clouds of business depression which hovered over in the months following the close of the war, but the fact must not be lost sight of that the fertile earth hereabout has much to do with the continued prosperity of the Southland.

COUNTY IN LEAD.

Facts and figures are usually dry, but they are occasionally refreshing and it may be an eye-opener for some people to know that California, in 1919, produced $4,487,600,591 worth of farm products. Los Angeles county grew $62,212,843 worth of the grand total. Figuring it out on the basis of fifty-eight counties in the State, this county produced as much agriculturally as nine average counties elsewhere in the State. The only other county in the United States which gets within what might be called gun range is Aroostook county, Maine. It falls $10,000,000 short of Los Angeles, with a total farm crop valuation amounting to $52,541,205 for 1919. San Joaquin county, California, holds third place with a crop valuation placed at $[illegible]. Tulare county, California, is fourth with $32,329,607.

Fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth, in the order named, are Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; Whitman county, Washington; McLean county, Illinois; San Bernardino county, California; LaSalle county, Illinois, and Champaign county, Illinois.

VALUE NEARLY DOUBLES.

In the ten years elapsing between 1910 and 1920, the value of farm property in Los Angeles county nearly doubled, and the value of the crops grown here each year increased four-fold, the Census Bureau says. During that same period the number of farms in this county increased from 7919 to 12,444.

At present there are 8436 white farmers in the county. The land area is 2,633,600 acres, 882,333 of which are under cultivation. The census report says that the average value of farm land in Los Angeles county is $386.12 per acre. It is considered doubtful, by agricultural experts, that this average valuation can be found elsewhere in the United States.

One of the pleasing features of agricultural conditions here is that a large percentage of the farmers own their own places. Out of the 12,444 farmers in the county, 7598 own their farms outright, and 988 of these farm so extensively that they lease other lands to cultivate.

Statistics show that the average farm in this county ranges between three and nine acres. There are 3398 of these. Those ranging between ten and nineteen acres number 2902. There are 2437 ranging between twenty and forty-nine acres and only 988 ranging between fifty and 100 acres.

PRODUCTION INCREASE.

In the ten years between 1910 and 1920, the cereal production of the State increased from $28,039,826 to $108,576,469. Hay and forage increased from $42,206,252 to $96,121,856. Vegetables gained from $12,121,958 to $47,277,921. The value of fruit and nut crops during that time advanced from $50,706,869 to $270,910,698.

Only those who have visited the great freight terminals in this State and watched the hundreds of carloads of fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, canned goods and live stock roll eastward over the transcontinental lines or be loaded at Los Angeles Harbor for the seaports of the world at large can appreciate the tremendous agricultural development which has taken place here during the last decade.

Take citrus fruits, for example. The orange and lemon growers between Porterville and San Diego ship approximately 50,000 carloads of fruit every year. The walnut growers ship several hundred carloads. Vegetable and fresh fruit shipments run into thousands of carloads annually. During the month of June Southern California lemon growers marketed almost 600 carloads of lemons in a single week.

Los Angeles county leads the world in the production of farm products, but due credit must be given to Orange county, with its wide diversity of crops, Imperial county, with its ever-blooming reclaimed lands, San Joaquin county, with its wonderful fruit orchards, and Tulare county, with its fruit and dairy ranches.

Imperial county is credited with having $7,579,711 worth of domestic animals. It has 43,165 head of dairy cattle, 44,839 head of hogs, 264,123 chickens, and it sells $2,315,489 worth of dairy products in the course of twelve months.

Orange county produces $24,465,231 worth of farm products a year; $2,335,901 worth of hay, $17,895,247 worth of nuts and fruits, and several millions of dollars worth of miscellaneous products. San Bernardino county turns in $26,517,455 worth of products of the soil, of which $23,429,055 is fruit and nuts. Tulare yields up a total of $30,457,341 worth, of which $19,416,780 is fruit and nuts and $7,598,204 is hay and forage. San Joaquin county grows $10,748,208 worth of grain and seeds, $9,989,852 worth of vegetables and $9,432,595 worth of fruits and nuts.

Among the 117,670 farmers in the State 87,580 are owners and only 25,141 are tenants. There are 111,184 white farmers in the State. Among the foreign-born farmers are 5152 Japanese, 4453 Italians and 2440 Portuguese.

The Japanese farmer population has increased from 1816 to 5152 in the last ten years, but during that period the Italian farmer population has advanced from 2457 to 4453, and the Swedish farmer population has progressed from 1647 to 2245.

LOVE CULT HEAD WINS IN HEARING.

Lessing Woman Discharged in Syndicalism Case, but Faces Sanity Test.

After sharp clashes in court between defense and prosecution attorneys, resulting in Justice Brown threatening to send both to jail unless they settled their differences elsewhere, Mme. Maida Lessing, head of a so-called love cult at "Mount Helios," Glassell Park, accused of criminal syndicalism, was discharged yesterday.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fitts asked that the case be continued while Robert G. Loucks, defense attorney, refused to consent to a continuance. It was stated that an insanity complaint was issued against the defendant on Friday.

The court stated that the prosecution had not proved a case of criminal syndicalism against the defendant, having failed to prove that she had advocated force or violence to bring about a change in the form of government. He said that if Mme. Lessing were not insane, the City Prosecutor should prosecute her for vagrancy.

Mr. Fitts declined to rest the people's case. The court summed up the testimony and released her so far as this charge is concerned. She will be arraigned on Monday before the Lunacy Commission on an insanity charge.

OPEN NEW WIRE OFFICE.

So that the telegraph business for firms in the southern end of the Los Angeles business district may be handled with greater expedition, the Western Union Telegraph Company yesterday opened a branch office at 905 South Main street.

TO SHOW INDUSTRIAL TREASURES.

Market Week, Due Next Month, Will Reveal Vast Trade Progress of Los Angeles Through Exhibits of Products of Coast Metropolis.

With a salute of twenty-one guns, produced by bombs shot skyward from the roof of the wholesale terminal, the blowing of factory whistles of the city and harbor district and the vibrant song of The Times' siren, the first annual market week and industrial trade exposition of Los Angeles will be formally opened at 10 a.m., Monday, August 15.

"Business and pleasure" has been adopted as the slogan of the week by the Chamber of Commerce, which is planning to extend a welcome to thousands of buyers and guests from twelve Western States, Mexico, Central America, Hawaii and the Orient.

A fleet of automobiles will call for the visitors at the leading hotels at 9 a.m. and the formal opening will be preceded by an automobile parade through the business district, terminating in front of the new seven-story unit of the wholesale market at Seventh street and Central avenue, where the program of the day will be given from a flower-decked platform built for the occasion.

As the twenty-one-gun salute to Gov. Stephens ends, the Governor will address the assemblage, extending a welcome for California. Mayor Cryer will speak for the city and President Weaver of the Chamber of Commerce, in voicing greetings from that organization, will point out "that Los Angeles has taken her place in the marts of the world as a center of industry and distribution."

For weeks an intensive advertising campaign, reaching more than 30,000 buyers, has been telling the purposes of the Industrial and Trade Exposition, which is the greatest effort of the kind ever undertaken to stimulate manufacturing and distribution in this city.

GREAT THRONG EXPECTED.

It is estimated that during the week there will be 250,000 admissions. The exposition will be free to the public from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. throughout the week and should prove an educational panorama for the residents of Southern California. Morning sessions will be set aside particularly for buyers and on the sixth floor of the building group cabaret luncheons will be held daily where units of common interest can get together to discuss the trade opportunities offered by Los Angeles. These luncheons will not be open to the public and only those wearing badges will be admitted.

The Wholesale Terminal interests have donated the use of the building for the show. Proceeds from the rental charge for exhibitors and concessions will be used to defray exposition expenses and advertising. Manufacturing interests have responded whole-heartedly to the gigantic undertaking and practically every available space of the 350,000 square feet of floor surface has been contracted for. There will be 1000 exhibitors and the exhibits will total

BOY BABIES TO ORDER; SECRET AWAITS BUYER.

Just as Easy as High-Signing Way to a Kickful Drink, Discoverer Says; Seeks French Market.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

He says he hopes to sell his secret to the French government for $100,000. After that every new French baby can be a boy if mamma and papa carry out his simple formula. It's as easy as winking. He regrets that his own United States government probably would not be enterprising enough to purchase the precious secret, but France—well France needs him, and he is confident of being able to do business with France.

His name is Dr. William A. Johnson. He is 86 years of age, hale and pepful. And for the last twenty years he has lived in picturesque Sycamore Springs in the heart of Santa Monica Canyon.

But he has been hoarding this determination-of-sex secret in his bosom since he was 20. Nothing rash and precipitate about William. Believes in studying the market and selling at the top. The great war has put a premium on boy babies, especially in Europe. He says he can provide boy babies to order—and the recipe is worth $100,000. And he expects to make the trip to France directly he has discovered an amiable Frenchwoman to accompany him as wife and interpreter—can't do business if you don't know the language, and it is essential that the interpreter should be an interested party—in the family.

The French lady—there are several beingsca ned ona pprobation—when selected, will be the third Mrs. Johnson. When he married the first Mrs. Johnson at the age of 22 he laid down the edict that their potentially numerous family should be all boys. The first two were. Then Madame pleaded for a girl. Not wishing to be too adamant, he explains apologetically, he consented. After that he weakened again when Madame begged for a girl playmate for little sister. But henceforward he sternly insisted upon boys—and three more followed in proper succession.

"Five boys and two girls. Yes, ma'am. That was a good proportion," he said with mild satisfaction. "Oh, I can provide the proof. I've proved it out scores of times back in Indiana. There was Joe Harris what always had girls. 'Why don't you get a boy?' I asks Joe, and after I'd swore him to keep the secret on his oath, I told him. He always had boys after that. And there was Sally Marshall—it was Joe's wife told her by not keeping the secret, and she had boys right along. There's dozens more cases I could name you. When I go to France I am willing to have it tried out, you understand. I will wait a year for my money. But I tell you I can do it every time. It never fails. Can't understand why these clever scientific fellows haven't caught on to it long ago. It's easy enough. Oh, no ma'am, no medicine, nothing like that. Just ordinary sense."

SELLS RANCH.

That is how he told us about it in his little shack, with the furniture all piled around anyhow because he had just sold his ranch house at a dizzy profit. He sat on the double bed, dressed in his very best clothes in our honor, and explained that he kept two pillows on the bed because he was lonesome. His second wife died three years ago and he guesses he is getting more particular, anyway he can't quite make up his mind to any of the Frenchwomen he is so cautiously reviewing. But the right one will come along presently—now that he has sold the ranch, the time is so obviously ripe. He raises bees, miles of bees—and doubtless knows exactly how to raise queen bees, boy-baby bees being mostly drones.

"But how did you light on this secret," we craved to know.

"Well, my mother was a woman doctor, guess she was one of the very first way back there in Indiana. She had a big practice and I used to go around with her. I wanted to know how come there was so many girl babies but mother said I was too young to ask such questions. But I kept right along figuring things out, not only with people, but with animals." He nodded his white old head sagely and smiled triumphantly. "And then one day it come to me. I proved it out, yes, ma'am; I proved it out. And it worked every time. No, I ain't giving away the secret—the French government will pay me $100,000 for it when I show them. You bet they will."

"But what do you want with $100,000 at 86?" I asked.

"You wouldn't have me give it

THINKS HE CAN DETERMINE SEX.

Boy Babies to Order, Slogan of Octogenarian.

Hopes to Sell His Secret to French Government.

Man in Santa Monica Canyon Calls Formula Simple.

away, would you?" he asked reproachfully. "Why should I?"

"Service to mankind, service to France," I suggested, "and you are rich, already."

MUST SELL IT.

"Well, I guess I am pretty well fixed at that," he beamed, "but it would be worth $100,000 to France. Oh, of course, I must sell it—anybody would."

So we couldn't worm his secret out of him. I asked him if it had anything to do with the superior vitality of one of the parents—some scientists having declared that the lower vitality of either parent at conception insures birth of the opposite sex. Or whether it had any thing to do with intellect—several editors and writers on The Times who are the fathers of girl babies recently having explained to me that the offspring invariably take the opposite sex to the dominating intellect—ahem! Either theory seems to harp on opposites. But the old fellow just grinned and said it wasn't anything like that. Just a simple preliminary measure. I rather gained the impression that it was as simple as a high sign in the soft drink parlors and restaurants—like blowing the nose vigorously, wearing a red carnation, keeping one's thumb in the air, or mentioning the general excellence of the climate in Bermuda.

Personally, I always have boys myself, but I can't remember what sign achieves it. However, I may anticipate the old gentleman with that little French deal, yet. My own theory, at present, is that it is the docile, meek, entirely obedient wife that has boy babies, while the self-opinionated suffragettes just naturally have girls.

But in the meantime if a palpitating world yearns for that precious secret, it had better hasten to introduce that essential French lady to Dr. Johnson—everything hangs upon that.

UNGALLANT ATTITUDE.

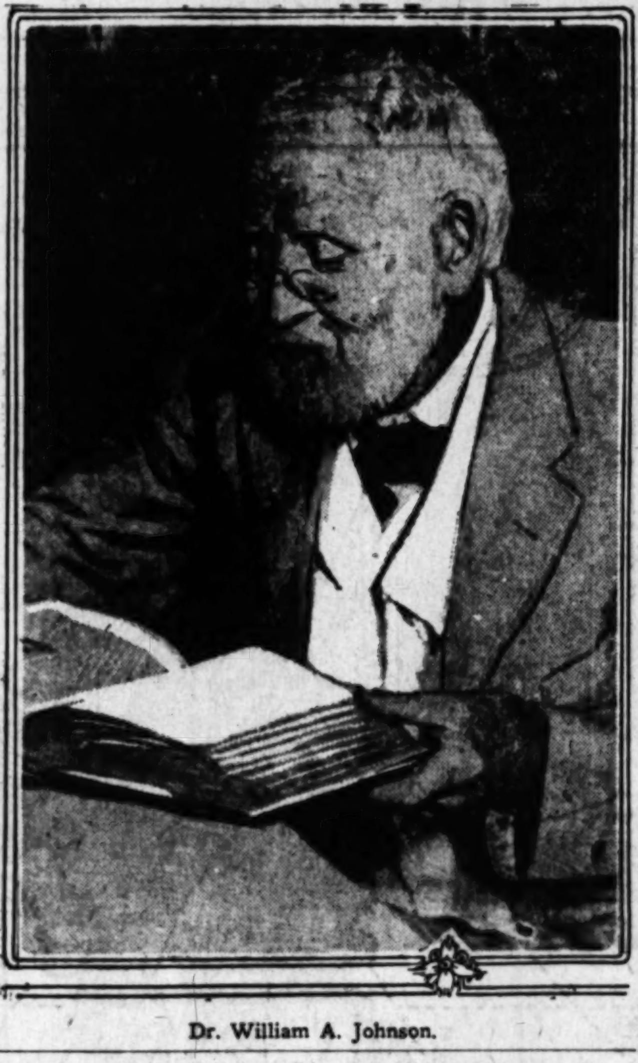
All the same this passion for boy babies is rather ungallant. I am rather glad the United States government is lacking in this sort of enterprise. Just the fact that all the intellectual men go in so strongly for girl babies—they raise them on The Times with amazing regularity—is proof enough that this is the most desirable sex. Think how dreadful it would have been for the world if my parents had elected to produce me a boy, for instance. And I have the best of reasons for knowing they would have if they could.

There are 3,000,000 more women than men in England today—and so at last they look like even solving the Irish question. On the other hand men still predominate in India, China, Borneo and Burmah—and there you are, don't you know.

In fact, it looks to me as if this Dr. Johnson is going to be a sort of another "Pussyfoot" Johnson—going to Europe to advocate a theoretical reform that doesn't necessarily work out in practice.

Sisters, I ask you, why boy babies anyway? A masculine intrigue to swomp the feminine vote. Politics, politics—at it again.

Says He Can Regulate Sex of Unborn.



Dr. William A. Johnson.

WILL CRUISE TODAY.

Naval Reserves to Make Voyage From Harbor to San Diego.

Men of the Los Angeles naval reserve under Commander A. R. Woodbine, are scheduled to cruise to San Diego today, starting at 3 p. m. The success of last Sunday's cruise demonstrated the ability of the local organization to make cruises to points within 100 miles of this port, and it is expected that some very attractive trips will be taken during the rest of the summer.

Five hundred naval reserve lapel buttons have been received at the local headquarters, according to Commander Woodbine, and will be given to members upon application.

The Havana surprised him

It may you, too

HE had been smoking Robt. Burns for six years. He knew that he enjoyed it. He knew that Robt. Burns was an individual cigar. He didn't know why.

He was surprised to learn that the filler of his Robt. Burns was entirely of Havana.

He was still more surprised to know that this carefully selected Vuelta Arriba leaf costs as much as any filler tobacco which the Island grows.

More fine Havana goes into Robt. Burns Cigars than is required for any other cigar made in America.

Robt. Burns' full Havana filler is individually cured to an individual mellowness.

That is why Robt. Burns is an individual cigar. Gentlemen: Here is a Havana aroma which you will enjoy!

POMONA TO RUSH WORK ON SCHOOL.

Local Contractor Secures Contract; City Lots Cleaned at Decided Loss.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

POMONA, July 29.—Presenting a bid for $4449, Grant McCain was yesterday awarded the contract for building the addition to the Kauffman Junior High School building. The addition assures the Kauffman faculty and students of an enlarged study hall, which will accommodate 120 students, and of a basement room that will be specially arranged for sloyd work. The work will be rushed.

More than 500 city lots will be cleaned by the city street department this year at a cost of approximately $1500, according to W. A. Walls, who has nearly completed the work of posting the lots and supervising the removal of weeds from them. It costs the city between $2 and $6 to clean a lot and it charges a fee of $1 for each one cleaned.

At an inquest held this morning at 10 o'clock at the Todd & Patterson undertaking parlors by Coroner Nance, the mystery of the death of B. A. Freeman, lineman for the Southern California Edison Company, who was fatally injured when he fell from a pole near Walnut several days ago, remained unsolved. It developed that he was working without his safety belt at the time of the accident, but it was not established whether his fall was caused by a contact with the high-voltage wires or whether he was burned about the body when he fell. The verdict was that he met death from a basal fracture of the skull resulting from a fall from a pole.

Paul Wurl, employee of Wurl's garage of this city, narrowly escaped death last night near Spadra, when he drove head-on into a big truck driven by Fred Watson of San Bernardino. His face was gashed severely by the broken glass from the windshield and he suffered minor cuts and bruises on the rest of his body. The car he was driving was a total wreck. It is alleged that the truck was carrying no lights, except an oil light on one side. The driver of the truck left before officers arrived, leaving the truck standing beside the road.

BURGLAR SENTENCED TO TERM IN PRISON.

Dave Anderson, found guilty of robbing the house of J. Gautt, was sentenced to San Quentin by Judge Avery yesterday. The testimony at the trial was to the effect that Anderson made an appointment with Mr. Gautt, an elderly man, to meet him downtown. Mr. Gautt kept the appointment, but Anderson went instead to Mr. Gautt's house and stole property worth $170. The case was prosecuted by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Eighols.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION.

The Erbes Brothers' Music Company, doing business at Fresno, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court yesterday, giving the debts of the concern at $46,750.02, of which $44,147.85 is unsecured. The assets are listed at $23,147.68.

The seventh floor has been retained for overflow exhibits and a demonstration of the motion-picture industry which promises to be both instructive and interesting.

You may start at the top or at the bottom, no matter which way you navigate, you will be loaded, delighted and dumbfounded by the time you again step into the sunshine of a closing day. You will realize as never before that Los Angeles has something besides sunshine and flowers, oranges and rose-tinted scenery to offer.

Indicative of this is the fact that today there are 3500 manufactories here with an annual output amounting to $738,000,000. Employed in these hives of industry are 106,000 people at a weekly pay roll in excess of $3,000,000. In 1914 Los Angeles was the tenth city in the United States in population, but the twenty-sixth city in industry. Today Los Angeles is tenth in industry and tenth in population. At the time of the signing of the armistice there were five ship lines operating out of Los Angeles Harbor. Today there are forty-five steamship lines making this a port of call and reaching 100 of the principal ports of the world.

"The eastern farmer is said to have thought of Los Angeles as dependent upon a luxury crop," said President Weaver yesterday, "but he is learning that more peaches are grown here annually than the total crops of Delaware, Michigan, Georgia and any other State named; that 25 per cent of the entire tomato crop of the United States is grown here; one-half the beans; most of the celery and 25 per cent of the onions. He also is learning that with remarkable harbor facilities, three transcontinental railroads and the benefits of the Panama Canal, Los Angeles is headed away on an industrial progression that has made it "the white spot" of the government map of prosperity. Raw materials, fuel and power, backed by a world spirit of unanimity of interests and boosting activity, have made Los Angeles the largest city in the western Americas and will constitute it the chief distributing point for Pacific shores."

NOT ALL "SHOP."

The big exposition will not be all "shop talk," however. On Tuesday evening there will be a grand ball at the Ambassador with buffet service. Friday night a tremendous stag banquet will be given at which stunts and surprises galore will splash the event into history as "never to be forgotten."

Especial attention to the comfort and entertainment of visiting ladies is being arranged for. Automobiles will be provided daily to take them to points of interest throughout the manufacturing districts and about the city. Theater tickets are to be provided for the wives and families of visiting buyers and it is probable that a gigantic picnic excursion to Catalina or some other point of interest will be staged for Sunday after the grand finale of closing the exhibition Saturday night. Daylight fireworks will punctuate the opening ceremonies and night fireworks will mark the close of Market Week.

Convicted of Taking Money from Ill Girl.

Judgment day came yesterday for A. F. Shafer, when a jury in Judge Reeve's court found him guilty of embezzlement of $500 from Avellia Nash, from whom he is said to have "borrowed" practically all her money and jewelry while she was not expected to live, and after he had proposed marriage and had been accepted.

The jury returned verdicts of not guilty on counts charging grand larceny and obtaining money under false pretenses. These charges covered the same offense as that on which the defendant was found guilty.

Testimony at the trial showed that Shafer was arrested on a felony charge and put up a $500 Liberty Bond as bail, but induced Miss Nash to lend him $500 to replace the bond, which he failed to do. On various pretexts he is said to have borrowed more than $1100 and to have obtained jewelry valued at more than $2000. Then, testimony showed, he agreed to take out insurance on his life in her favor, and borrowed $200 more to pay the premium, but failed to get the insurance.

Shafer will be arraigned before Judge Reeve on Monday for sentence.

DOG CAUSES WRECK.

Collie Pushes Master's Arm, Causing Him to Swerve Car.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, July 29.—"Jack," a collie dog, became too affectionate with his young master, Harold Jenkins, caused an auto crash on Venice Boulevard, near the Race Thru the Clouds this morning, and then ran away as if ashamed to face those whose lives had been menaced. The young man was driving the machine in which his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Jenkins, of 28 Navy street, and four others were riding. "Jack," who is exceedingly fond of motoring, was in front with the driver, and as the car was spinning along at a fair rate, rubbed caressingly against the arm that was operating the wheel. The car turned to the right and crashed into a wooden post, broke it down, tore into another and finished against an ornamental light post. Mr. Jenkins, sitting behind the driver, was cut in the face from flying glass, but no one else was injured.

Here to Help Colored White Plague Victims.

Rev. G. M. McClellan of the Colored Tuberculosis Association is in Los Angeles, where he hopes to establish a sanatorium for negro sufferers from the white plague. Representatives of the Colored Tuberculosis Association recently conferred with members of the Los Angeles Tuberculosis Association, soliciting indorsement of the project. The matter will come before the board of directors of the local association when it meets in the fall.

Dr. McClellan formerly was principal of one of the large schools in Louisville, and he has degrees from Fisk University of Nashville and the Hartford (Ct.) Seminary. His interest in the project for a tuberculosis institution for members of his race was prompted by a personal experience. One of his sons has been a sufferer from the disease and in attempting to find a sanatorium for him, Dr. McClellan realized the great need for an institution exclusively for those of the negro race.

Dr. McClellan has indorsements from the president of Pomona College, the pastor of the Lincoln Memorial Congregational Church of Los Angeles, several other Los Angeles men, and members of the faculty of the Hartford Seminary. He is living at 1669 East Fiftieth Place.

City is Chosen by Osteopaths for Convention.

Announcement that the American Osteopathic Association will hold its next convention in Los Angeles in 1922 was received at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. A telegram from W. Curtis Brigham, prominent official of the organization and a resident of Los Angeles, stated that delegates at the convention in Cleveland voted to designate Los Angeles for the next convention city. The message states that the Southern California booklets and Los Angeles poppies sent to the Cleveland meeting swept the members off their feet and there was an overwhelming majority in favor of visiting Los Angeles in two years.

NEW COURT POPULAR.

Six new complaints were filed yesterday in the local small claims court, making nine suits for money started in the new tribunal since it opened Friday morning. More than a dozen complaints were not filed, as not being permitted under the rules of the court. The cases will be heard during August by Justice Hinshaw, the first one being scheduled for trial on Wednesday.

WILLING TO COMBINE.

The soviet rule in Russia is tottering and offers a combination of the Mensheviki and Bolsheviki as a compromise. Why not make room for the cowsheviki as well? Give the ladies a chance.

MORAL QUESTIONS.

When week-end marriages take the place of Scotch highballs in the matter of social dissipation, is our beloved country going up or down? That is one of the questions before the house.

THE RULING PASSION.

An Ohio woman, who had been blind for seven years, recently had her sight restored. The first thing she noticed and commented on was the short skirts the women are wearing. Really the men who still have keen eyesight don't realize how lucky they are.

CAN'T BUDGET.

The new Secretary of the Navy is having a hard time in making that visit to Los Angeles and the Southland which he had planned. The contest over the naval budget is holding him firmly at the national capital and the mackerel may have ceased to run by the time he gets here.

GROWING FAST.

A man selling vacuum cleaners would starve to death in Long Beach. The place is filling up so fast that the natives declare there isn't a vacuum in the town. The new city directory shows a population of 78,619 and when it went to press seven more men were just coming over the crest of Signal Hill.

AT THE RACES.

One of the veterans of the turf, who has been driving the pacers for more than thirty years, says that women are taking the places of men at the tracks and in the betting ring. The plungers are wearing skirts. When a girl feels her oats she naturally turns to the ponies. However, there are a lot of sensible women who still love a fine horse, and the best horses are now to be found at the tracks. There you are.

THE KLONDIKE RETURN.

Alaska has had a slump in population and is in need of a boom. Tales of new wealth in gold and oil around Anchorage are starting another flock of Argonauts in that direction. Gold is a notable attraction in itself, but this time they are throwing in the oil for voluptuous measure. A Klondike with gold, wine and oil would be sumptuous indeed. Possibly the bootleggers will see that there is no slacking on the part of the wine.

SCRAPPING THE NAVY.

In view of recent adventures in air-bombing under naval auspices Senator King is sure that a battleship would be easy meat for an aerial squadron. Consequently he proposes to amend the naval construction program by stopping work on six big warships and constructing submarines and plane carriers in their stead. First thing we know we will have a billion dollars' worth of dreadnaughts that can be wiped out in an afternoon by a flock of planes. The best thing we can do is to get on a peace footing and forget all this war stuff.

LET THE SUN DO YOUR WORK.

Some day we will all be harnessing the rays of the sun to do the family cooking. In that day living will be cheap in California. The solar heater is warming up some of our homes now, but to tame the sun to do the plain and fancy cooking would be fine sport. One inventor is doing fairly well in that direction, with the aid of a combination of parabolic mirrors, but a full measure of success has not yet been attained. What is wanted is something that would round up the fervent rays of the midday sun and store them so that they might be used to bake the beans of Saturday night. To turn the beams into beans would be fine business. The experiments of the gent with the parabolic mirrors will be followed with interest.

THE BRITISH VIEWPOINT.

A British commission has also been investigating the packing industry in this country—especially in connection with the activities of the so-called "Big Five." The Britons wanted to find out if there was a combination to force prices upward or monopolize the market. It was pretty well agreed by American investigators that an agreement or understanding did exist, but the Englishmen are unable to find it. At any rate, they report that there is no combination to boost prices or control the foreign trade. The different packing firms are in active competition for the English business. If there is any understanding it is in relation to the home market, and with that the British investigators are not concerned. The Englishmen are sure that our packers are all honorable gentlemen and that the tales of horns and hoofs belong in the bull pen.

The Commissioner of Education says that illiteracy is a crime. If that is so, there is a lot of crime going on in this country and even the newspaper shops are not exempt.

If King George and Lord Northcliffe really get to passing ugly names it might be well to see whether the League of Nations is still functioning.

KEEP THE WHITE SPOT WHITE.

In the midst of the dog days, with office staffs depleted by vacation leaves, the stock market stagnant and business generally running in intermediate rather than high, it is comforting to accept the viewpoint of careful observers that we are moving towards better days.

Los Angeles and vicinity continue to occupy the white spot on the business map, and it looks as though the spot would soon spread over the commercial map. The crux of the deflation of credit and prices appears to have passed, and the banking situation is steadily improving.

An evidence of the strength of the foundation upon which business Los Angeles is builded is reflected in the encouraging manner in which retail trade has been sustained. Hand in hand with this evidence of sound underpinning and a buying power not seriously curtailed are the reduction of stocks, the stabilizing of prices and the maintenance of our building program.

The crop situation is favorable and, although there are some soft spots, notably in the potato market, the outlook is not subnormal for this season of the year. Some think that the depression, which has been far more marked in the Middle West and Far East than it has been here, will find a sympathetic reflection and that in some lines we have not reached our low point; but with production generally upon an improved status, aided by local conditions which automatically eliminate some of the problems the East has had to contend with, it looks as though many of our fears would vanish with early fall.

Because few people are buying expensive drinks or occupying the best seats in the theaters does not necessarily argue for business depression. As a matter of fact, we have been spending a good deal of money on luxuries of this kind.

Last year the people of the United States paid the government $82,000,000 for the privilege of witnessing the tragedies and comedies as depicted upon the silver screen. Just in taxes, mind you, which means that around $1,000,000,000 was spent for theater admissions alone. More than the interest on the national debt, and about one-quarter of the total revenues of the government for the year.

For soda water, ice cream and soft drinks we spent another $1,000,000,000; for candy, $400,000,000 more; for perfumes and cosmetics, around $50,000,000 and for jewelry about $220,000,000. Smokers paid a tax of $250,000,000.

It is estimated that we are disbursing about $4,000,000,000 for luxuries and nonessentials, about $200 a year for every family in the United States, or approximately $5 for every man, woman and child in the country.

In spite of this enormous expenditure, our banking situation is sound, and especially in Southern California there is a steady accretion of deposits, while untold millions have gone into investments legitimate and otherwise.

We are told by those who have a talent for such figures that the total amount of open-market paper sold through note brokers from Jan. 1, 1920, until July 1, 1921, was approximately $4,000,000,000, and of this amount $3,896,000,000 was liquidated when due, at par, without effort on the part of the holding banker, and that the ultimate loss on this vast sum, embracing the most critical readjustment period in our history, will only be about $18,000,000, or .0047 per cent of the total amount purchased.

Railroad earnings are improving, and while a general return of prosperity in this direction will wait upon reduced rates and a resumption of foreign trade, the primary step, that of wage readjustment, is being made without serious difficulty.

On the whole, there appears good reason to expect an early extension of the white spot which has never deserted Los Angeles, even through the most trying days of reconstruction, and which we will be glad to share with our neighbors far and near.

THE OPEN DOOR

According to cables from Tokio, Japanese commissioners attending the peace conference will insist that there shall be no abrogation on the part of the United States of the Lansing-Ishii agreement of 1917. This agreement, it is interesting to recall, was made at the time when the United States was entering the World War and, viewed in the light of subsequent developments, it is apparent that Japan drove a pretty sharp bargain.

The agreement bears the signatures of Mr. Lansing and the Viscount Ishii. It is tantamount to the abandonment of our traditional open-dooor policy in the Far East. Secretary Hughes has already made clear that the present administration is not in sympathy with it. One section provides that:

> Territorial propinquity creates special relations between countries, and consequently the government of the United States recognizes that Japan has special interests in China, particularly in the part to which her possessions are contiguous.

While the meaning of that language appears obscure, there is nothing doubtful about the construction that Japan placed upon it. One finds that reflected in the notorious twenty-one demands which she made upon China during the war and, as no free nation could then go to China's support, China was forced to submit to them.

Secretary Hughes has made plain that the administration desires to return to the policy outlined in the Root-Takahira agreement of 1907. Under the terms of that agreement Japan and the United States were "determined to preserve the common interests of all powers in China by supporting, by all pacific means at their disposal, the independence and the integrity of China and the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry of all nations in that empire."

Few Americans are aware that, ever since the Root-Takahira agreement was signed, the United States has kept a military force stationed in China. It consists at the present time of something over 1000 men. It is maintained there on the invitation of the Chinese government. Since the Lansing-Ishii agreement was signed, however, it has served chiefly to support Japan's claim to special rights and privileges on Chinese territory. There was a great hue and cry about bringing American troops back from Siberia and back from the Rhine, but the forces in China seem to have been forgotten. If they are not to be used to keep Japan from locking the open door, and they have not been, why are they still kept in China?

WIDE OPEN FOR GRAFT.

Senate Bill No. 628 is now a law of the State. It requires the Board of Education "annually during the month of June to make a school budget showing all the purposes for which the school district will need money and the amount of money that will be needed for each of said purposes for the next ensuing school year." This is to be sent to the County Superintendent for approval. If disapproved by him he returns to the board "for reconsideration and resubmission."

"Not later than the 31st day of July the School Board shall resubmit its budget with or without change from the original form as the School Board may desire. Thereupon, the Superintendent of Schools shall approve such budget."

The Board of Supervisors, under this law, "must levy and cause to be collected a district tax for each school district whose budget shows a district tax to be necessary and to fix such a rate for such district tax as will produce at least the amount of district tax money requested by the particular district. If the Board of Supervisors refuse or neglect to make the levy provided for under this section, then the levy shall be made by the County Auditor."

It will be noted that this act provides that money for all purposes may be raised by direct tax and that the objections of the County Superintendent, or the Board of Supervisors, or both, are of no avail. No veto power seems to be lodged anywhere. A bare majority of the Board of Education may call for funds for any purpose or any amount and their demands must be complied with, no matter if they mount into millions or are foolish expenditures.

This is one of seventy-six laws passed by the last Legislature relating to education. Mr. E. B. Couch, president of the High School Teachers' Association, in his report to that organization as printed in the Los Angeles School Journal of May 9, in reference to the work before the Legislature, says:

> It is unnecessary to say that we have not succeeded in every case, but no one will deny that we have stirred some things up and have succeeded in a great majority of the cases, and in addition to that, we feel that the teachers of the State, through this activity, have arrived at a much greater political solidarity. On the floor of the House it was remarked, "There is only one political ring in the State now—that is the teachers." We hope that this ring rings true.

The article referred to is headed "Six Dollars' Worth." If this refers to a teachers' assessment of that amount and the reports that one dollar was levied for the primary campaign and two dollars for the final recent city election are correct, it would indicate a possible teachers' fund of $36,000 for political purposes the past year.

HERR HUGO STINNES.

Germany owes many debts to the world. Some she will never pay because, being morally bankrupt, she cannot. Some she can pay, but marking time on general political uncertainties, she will not. Some she can and will pay because her own national existence is at stake.

For the millions consigned to untimely graves—for the Rachaels weeping for their children—for the blind and crippled and broken-down bodies of their sons left as a heritage to nations that never wronged her—there can be no recompense possible and no repentance adequate.

There are other moral debts only a complete change of heart will persuade Germany to liquidate. But the type of new commercial dictator enthroned in Berlin gives little evidence of any such change.

Whether the ambitions of the capable Hugo Stinnes will prove less dangerous to world peace than were those of the incapable Hohenzollern is a question that only rabid pro-Germans in America will answer in the affirmative. All we can say for certain is that Hugo Stinnes will be careful to see that those debts are paid the repudiation of which would jeopardize Germany's restoration to world power.

For Herr Hugo Stinnes is the new genius of Germany. Under his competent direction the German body politic has acquired cleaner limbs and a fairer-looking form. But the new commercial Germany of Stinnes and the old military Prussia of Ludendorff are still "sisters under the skin." The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hands are the hands of Esau. And Europe is still a blind Israel.

In so far as Germany has done nothing yet to palliate her late war crimes, save under the duress of irresistible force, America will hesitate before hailing Hugo Stinnes as the Moses to lead the people into the pleasant paths of accepted defeat. But wherever Hugo Stinnes is of use in aiding Germany to pay up the reparations imposed on her under the Versailles Treaty, the American people will credit his worthy efforts—and accept his motives with the proverbial grain of salt.

The world has been so taken up with the disorderly government established by Lenin, the fox, that it has paid little attention to the orderly government built up by Stinnes, the beaver. The world has seen Lenin as a world menace because his government is a disorderly one. Stinnes's invisible government runs smoothly. So not much has been written about it.

Yet it must have occurred to students of world affairs that nothing really dangerous can come out of disorder—so long as the disorder prevails. Robespierre was not dangerous to world peace. Napoleon was. It might perhaps be more informatory for the world diplomats if they analyzed Lenin a little less and Herr Hugo a little more closely.

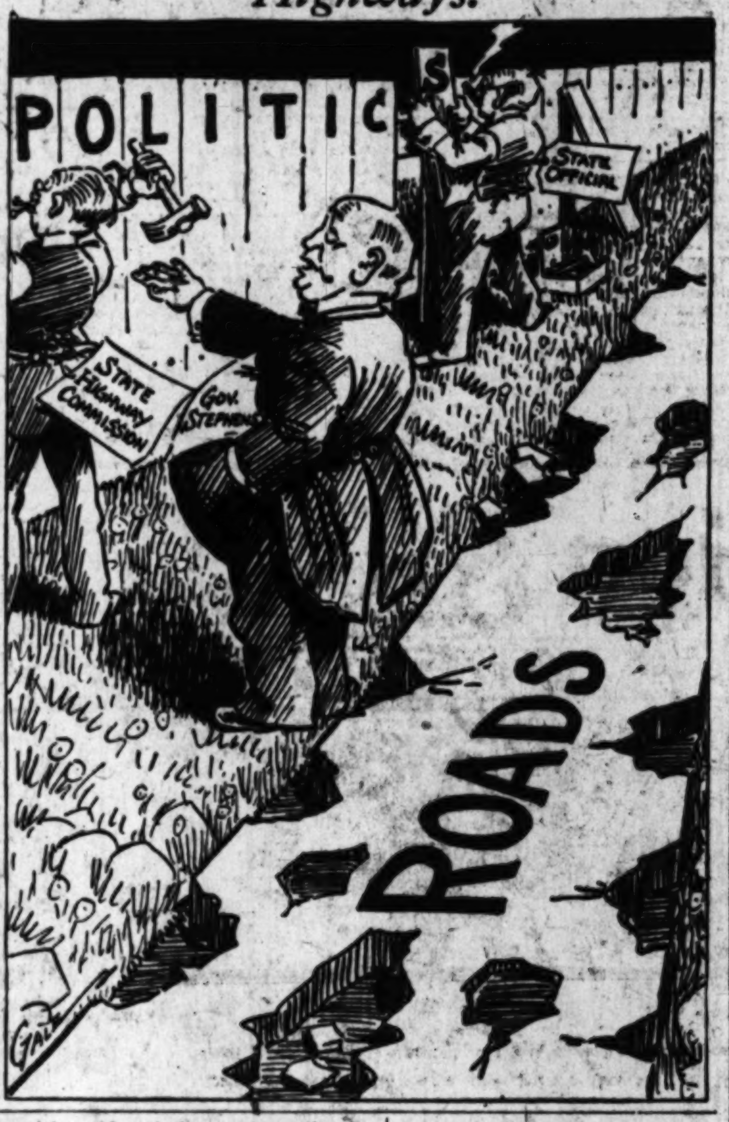
Germany's new commercial dictator already has shown the executive ability of a Hoover, the commercial instinct of a Rockefeller and the expansive vision of a Cecil Rhodes.

He has gathered together under the control of a "Big Seven" nearly all the coal, iron, steel, chemicals and transportation of the fatherland. He controls 1340 commercial companies. His capitalization of industry exceeds 6,000,000,000 marks. He employs directly nearly a million and a half of the world's best-trained workers. And don't forget that in Germany everyone is working overtime. He has the say-so in the marketing of all the necessities of life in the old empire.

Besides, he is buying up influential newspapers throughout Germany and subsidizing journals in other countries. Needless to say, he is more interested in disseminating propaganda than in publishing news.

Moreover, the aim of Hugo Stinnes is to bring finally to a resurrected Germany commercial world control as compensation for the military world control that was once so nearly within her grasp. This is no doubt a laudable ambition. But the old blood still runs purple in the old Prussian veins—the steel still burns in the old German heart. And when Hugo Stinnes has organized his new commercial empire, what next?

Overseeing His Political Fences But Overlooking the State's Highways.



"DEMOCRATIC" INDUSTRY CONTROL

Like many another high-sounding phrase, it is worth while, occasionally, to stop the wild roar and set to thinking just what may be meant by "democratic" control of industry. As the phrase has been used by Socialists and other extremists, it simply means that the "workers"—meaning only those who toil with their hands—in all industries shall have direct control of the mechanical departments of them. Said "workers" will choose their own foreman and make other similar decisions as to the details of the shops.

No one will ever accuse Victor Hugo of having been a "capitalist tool" or one in the slightest degree partial to the so-called favored interests. For that reason what he had to say regarding the control of industry by the "workers" may be worthy of consideration. In his immortal romance, "Les Miserables," he represents a character of exalted virtues, Jean Valjean, who, because he had been a convict, changed his name to that of M. Madelaine. Under this name he became Mayor of a city and built up a great industry, with the proceeds of which he worked incessantly for the common good. Finally he was placed in such a position during the prosecution of another man that he revealed his identity and was returned to the galleys for life. His great factory was left to the "workers" and here is the way in which Hugo tells of it:

> While we are about it, let us remark, in dismissing the subject, that, with M. Madelaine, the prosperity of M— sur M— disappeared; all that he had foreseen, in that night of fever and irresolution, was realized; he gone, the soul was gone. After his downfall there was, at M— sur M—, that egotistic distribution of what is left when great men have fallen—that fatal carving up of prosperous enterprises which is daily going on, out of sight in human society, and which history has noted but once, and then because it took place after the death of Alexander. Generals crown themselves kings; the foremen, in this case, assumed the position of manufacturers. Jealous rivalries arose. The spacious workshops of M. Madelaine were closed; the buildings fell into ruin, the workmen dispersed. Some left the country, others abandoned the business. From that time forth everything was done on a small instead of a large scale, and for gain rather than for good. No longer any center; competition on all sides and on all sides venom. M. Madelaine had ruled and directed everything. He fallen, every man strove for himself; the spirit of strife succeeded to the spirit of organization, bitterness to cordiality, hatred of each against each, instead of the good will of the founder toward all; the threads knitted by M. Madelaine became entangled and were broken; the workmanship was debased, the manufacturers were degraded, confidence was killed; customers diminished, there were fewer orders; wages decreased, the shops became idle, bankruptcy followed. And then there was nothing left for the poor. All that was there disappeared.
> Even the state noticed that some one had been crushed in that direction. Less than four years after the decree of the Court of Assizes establishing the identity of M. Madelaine and Jean Valjean for the benefit of the galleys the expense of collecting the taxes was doubled in the district of M— sur M—.

MR. TAFT'S TITLE.

William Howard Taft is not to be, as often has been said in the last few days, the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, for, as a matter of fact, there is no such title mentioned anywhere in the Federal documents. Mr. Taft's title will be Chief Justice of the United States and that is the only proper one.—[Hartford Courant.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

THE HELPING HAND.

Jim James was sick for many moons and had to soak his silver spoons to purchase beeswax pills; the wolf was neighing at his door and he was weak and sick and sore, and shy of dollar bills. And so it filled my heart with glee to call at times and leave a V, to help old Jim along; this way of aiding luckless men appeals to me a lot, but then some fellows say it's wrong. The drivesmiths daily seek my door to ask for bones and then some more to help some distant cause; the starving Bedouin's lost his flocks, the Eskimo is needing socks, and I am Santa Claus. And I confess, with little shame, that I detest the "driving" game and hold it most unfair; and I'll discourage, while I live, the folks who tell me what to give, and how and when and where. When there's another drive in town I sometimes turn the drivesmiths down and knock their nervy games; for when I have some extra bucks I'd rather buy some bottled nux for chaps like old Jim James. I'd rather help the guys I know and let the festive Eskimo be shy a Sunday hat; across the alley there is grief, and I may give some small relief, and I'd fain stick to that. The country's free, and those who care to spread their largess everywhere have every human right; but old Jim James is pretty sick, and I'll take him an ice cream brick and codfish balls tonight.

WALT MASON.

A MAN-KILLING JOB.

In an absolute monarchy the man at the top has a right to kill his subjects. In the United States this order has been reversed and the people have acquired the right to burden their President within an inch of his life.

Mr. Roosevelt, hardened by boxing, wrestling and strenuous outdoor life, managed to have a "bully time" in office. His successor, Mr. Taft, coming to the Presidency overnight, was obliged to adopt the regime of a crack athlete in order to get through his day's work. What happened to Mr. Wilson is indicated by the photographs taken on March 4, when he finished a double term a broken man.

One of the promises of the present administration was for a reorganization of government business in the interests of efficiency, and it is understood that the commission in charge of this matter, looking into the Presidency itself, is prepared to recommend an assistant to the President.

At present the Chief Executive is indirectly responsible for twenty-eight separate governmental departments, many of which are a mosaic for complexity. No large corporation, requiring at its head a man of foresight, would leave such a mass of detail upon his shoulders. There is less reason why the United States, greatest of all corporations, should demand that its President be jack of all trades.—[Boston Globe.

ARKANSAW MEWSINGS.

The trouble with the man who is always hollering for a square deal is that he always wants to act as an umpire in the matter.

Hot air isn't business. The fellow who toots his horn the loudest doesn't always have the best trade nor the biggest bank account.

Some girls just naturally have to become old maids. But Iva Chance lives in Benton, Ark.

We suppose that Eve was just like all the rest of the grandmas and told her granddaughters that she never stole apples when she was a girl.

Funny how a girl with sandy hair can grow jet-black eyebrows when a man who has sandy hair can't do it.—[Arkansaw Thomas Cat.

THE LANCER.

One of the pet feminist protests has always been that men don't appreciate good women, that their tastes run to fashionable painted hussies, no matter what their publicly expressed preferences may be.

But now we have Prof. L. J. Paetow of the U.C. bemoaning the fact that "women do not like saintly men, but they admire smooth, wicked rascals."

I don't approve of the professor adopting these feminist tactics. Don't you see how it undermines masculine superiority, professor — this plaintive wail that men have no encouragement to be good, this admission that it matters one way or the other what the ladies admire, this confession that our masculinity in itself is not sufficient recommendation. Whining is always a confession of weakness, anyway. It is perfectly seemly that women should be exercised as to what feminine attractions make the best hit with masculinity, but it is most unseemly that the lord of creation should voluntarily descend to similar anxieties. His regal assumption that "I am a man and therefore to be admired" proves so infinitely effective.

Of course, the fact of the matter is that both masculine and feminine tastes in the opposite sex are apt to run to glamour, hence the saintly men, like the "good" women, find it eminently desirable to assume a dashing naughtiness, no matter what their inherent virtuosity, if they would capture romantic interest. All the same, masculinity should have preserved an attitude of lofty indifference in the matter and conceded all the striving to the weaker sex. There is no sense in exposing one's hand. That is exactly where the ladies have always lost out.

One can't help preferring the aggressive masculinity of Pastor Norris of Texas, who shocked the church convention with the remark that he would rather have a wart on his nose than a Ladies' Aid Society in his church. It wasn't gentlemanly, of course, and it promptly provoked a resolution complimenting ladies' aid societies generally. But that interesting necessity for defense holds up the masculine end very diplomatically. That, I maintain, should always be our politic attitude—rushing to the defense of weak womanhood from its detractors, but artfully conceding the detractor's full publicity!

Norway's newspapers and prominent clergymen are loudly protesting because the American sailors made too ardent public love to the Norwegian damsels. The American admiral has been asked to put a stop to it. A disgrace to the American nation, an insult to Christiania, they call it.

All the same, don't you know, even an ebullient American Jackie is not likely to press his attentions without a little encouragement. Before making an international scandal of the affair one would like to hear from said Norwegian damsels. After all, the Jackies did not make open love to the clergy and the newspaper editors.

Five thousand members of the American Cosmetical Society have gone on record as declaring that husbands can best be kept faithful by wifey's judicious use of their valuable aids to beauty. "Wife's failure to use a lipstick has wrecked many a happy home," they declare.

It is nice to have this entirely disinterested solution of a prevailing problem—and consoling to know that where law, religion and cookery fail, cosmetics will ever succeed.

Gen. Charles D. Dawes is having a gorgeous fight of it making everybody else be economical. There is nothing quite so radiantly satisfying as curbing other people's wicked extravagance and being allowed to ooze sumptuous cuss words in the process. Of course, he is doing it well and the country's with him, even if the bureau chiefs are not altogether fascinated with his methods.

But every last man among us covets his job. Not a one of us but what holds the most pronounced views on the other fellow's expenditures. No wonder he is enjoying himself—who wouldn't?

Congressman Paul B. Johnson of Mississippi, the chap who is trying to abolish female smoking in Washington, is reported to be receiving affectionate and admiring correspondence from dames all over the country, every last one of them violently opposed to My Lady Nicotine, and some of them expressing the opinion that he must be so very kissable himself, as he smokes not, neither doth he chew.

Yet it is a mournful surmise that, if only all those letters were from naughty cigarette-smoking damsels, seductively trying to win him to just one little cigarette in their company, expressing a desire to wean him from his adamant antagonism, the good Congressman would probably get much more of a flutter out of them. Temptation is often so much more interesting than approbation.

THE LANCER.

SOME SLOGAN.

"Go slow and see our city. Go fast and see our jail." These slogans, the first in blue and white letters, the second in red and white letters, are posted conspicuously on Kenosa avenue, Haverhill, the road leading to the beaches and the mountains. If the police enforce the laws as the signs indicate they are disposed it, it would seem well for motorists to slow up in the Slipper City.

ALTON SEA EARTH DRAMA.

ake Made by Struggle of Land and Water Ideal for Study of Life.

BY W. E. ALLEN,
California Biological Feature Service

The name of the newly formed Salton Sea became well known to newspaper readers in 1905, 1906 and 1907, because of the great interest attached to the sudden formation of a large lake, and also because of the dramatic setting of the struggle in which man strove to recover control of a river which he had carelessly led astray. After the final ending of the contest by a narrow margin, this body of water ceased to be of interest of the general public and it was speedily forgotten by most people.

There are, however, a number of interesting questions for the student of natural phenomena. Many of these questions have already received a good deal of attention by various scientific men, and between 1904 and 1914, extensive investigations were carried on under the direction of Dr. MacDougal of the Carnegie Institution, with the assistance of scientists from other institutions. These investigations were mainly concerned with geology, geography, botany and botanical ecology of the Salton Sea Basin.

The very interesting results of these studies have been printed in a volume entitled "Salton Sea," and published in 1914. It is Publication No. 193 of the Carnegie Institution at Washington, and is accessible at most libraries.

INTERESTING FACTS.

Among the facts most likely to engage general public interest are the following: The Salton Sea Basin is a large part of an ancient submerged valley which has been brought largely above sea level by rise of the land mass in which it lies. In fact, it may be regarded as a natural continuation of the Gulf of California which has been partitioned off from the main gulf by the heavy deposits of silt from the rapidly cutting Colorado and Gila rivers.

Some of the basin is still nearly 300 feet below sea level and subject to rapid inflow from river or gulf whenever a channel is provided. Natural channel ways opened at flood time by the Colorado River through its soft delta banks have evidently permitted such flooding many times in past centuries or geologic periods. Such channels have soon been closed by silt (after filling of the basin to river level) and the lake left without further inflow for longer or shorter periods.

The intense heat and dryness of atmosphere in this region have then resulted in rapid disappearance of the lake, its depth being reduced at the rate of eight or ten feet per year. As a result of repeated submergence and evaporation great quantities of salts (largely sodium chloride) have been deposited along with the silt carried in suspension by the river waters.

IN FAULT LINE.

There is also evidence that the basin is in or nearly in the line of the great fault-plane responsible for the disastrous San Francisco earthquake of April 18, 1906. There are numerous hot springs and mud geysers in the partly exposed bed of the lake which are constant reminders that the region is still somewhat active volcanically.

The formation of the present lake was due to irrigation activities in 1904 by which water was being diverted to certain parts of the basin for agricultural purposes. The main irrigating canal was not sufficiently protected against flood waters which came in the winter of 1904-1905, and as a consequence the river escaped control and sent a large proportion of its flow into the basin through the enlarged irrigating canal.

This flow to the basin was not fully controlled until early in 1907, although the inflow and consequent depth of the water had varied with change of season.

At its greatest extent the lake was more than forty miles long and about ten miles wide. At the present time it is greatly reduced and the actual depth is said by local residents to be decreasing about one foot per year instead of the eight to ten feet which one might expect from the amount of evaporation. The difference is due to the fact that surplus waters for irrigating projects flow into it sufficiently to make good most of the present loss.

CONDITIONS CHANGE.

From the foregoing it may be readily understood that many interesting changes are constantly occurring in conditions of life in the immediate vicinity of the lake. Dr. MacDougal gave particular attention to these changes as they affected the life of land plants growing on the shores of the lake, but there has been no considerable study of the organisms living in the waters of the lake nor of the responses which they make to seasonal or nonseasonal changes in condition of the water.

Somewhat more than a year ago W. C. Crandall of the Scripps Institution for Biological Research, accompanied by Dr. H. C. Bryant and Dr. W. F. Thompson of the California Fish and Game Commission, made a two days' trip to Salton Sea giving particular attention to birds, fish and plankton.

They found a fairly large and diversified bird population and in one locality a successful mullet fishery which was getting the fish in marketable quantities. There appeared to be very few fish of any other kind, however. Mr. Crandall found a few mollusks and made a few catches of microscopic animals and plants by means of a fine meshed plankton net. These microscopic organisms were mainly fresh water forms and were probably found only near the fresh water inlets.

STUDY LAND LIFE.

In recent years very rapid advances have been made in the study and understanding of the conditions of life of land plants and there have also been substantial advances in similar knowledge concerning land animals. There has been no corresponding increase of such knowledge of organisms living in water. Yet practically this knowledge is important because it enables us to gain some insight as to existence and maintenance of resources of the water and theoretically it may be still more important because of its revelations as to the operation of various factors which affect life in the water or anywhere.

Extensive studies are being made of aquatic life in many countries, but there is need for many more workers in many more varied localities. An inland lake such as this offers excellent opportunity for studying aquatic life under extreme conditions.

EXTREME CONDITIONS.

With its high variability in extreme conditions, Salton Sea seems to offer unusual opportunity for study of the vital relationships of microscopic organisms. A biological station established there could work continuously through the year and get the full cycle of environmental change. Such a station should make daily observations in selected localities not only as to the living things present in the water, but also as to physical, chemical and general hydrographic conditions.

One might expect to find such problems as the following appearing in great prominence: What is the range of endurance of saltiness by any given organism? Does its structure or habit change with a changed amount of salt in the water? How is the effect of saltiness related to temperature or to light? Is the effect of temperature shown in any direct way? If so, is it due to acceleration or retardation of metabolic processes or to the mere physical effect of viscosity?

Are seasonal differences in activity and vigor due to differences in saltiness, in temperature, in light, in abundance of food, in abundance of enemies, or to some other factors? How do organisms affect saltiness and other physical conditions?

One may extend the list indefinitely, but in conclusion it may be said that the attempt to answer such questions under the conditions which we have in Salton Sea may throw a great deal of light on the attempts to answer such questions under the particular conditions of other localities and it may aid us to reach dependable conclusions as to the characteristic responses of living things to their environment.

INVITED TO PEAR FETE.

The annual Pear Day festival at Little Rock, to be held next Saturday, is an event that will interest members of the Chamber of Commerce and a special invitation has been extended to chamber members to attend the celebration in honor of one of California's newest and fastest-growing fruit industries.

A free luncheon will be served to the city's guests and prominent agricultural men of the State, including Robert W. Swett, president of the California Pear Growers' Association and J. L. Nagle, president of the California Fruit Exchange, will speak.

The pear industry is not only famous throughout the State and country, but shipments are made annually to England, France and Italy where the market for Bartlett pears is unlimited. As much as $2260 an acre has been paid for Antelope Valley pears. Last year shipments to Boston brought $226 per ton.

Travelers are directed to Little Rock over the San Fernando Boulevard, as far as Saugus, and then over the Mint Canyon road to Palmdale. Little Rock is nine miles farther and the entire journey of seventy-six miles from Los Angeles is made over good roads.

AVERS DRY LAW BROKE UP HOME.

Wife Says Dentist Began to Drink Heavily After the Prohibition Act.

Mrs. Sarah Hayes Finley declares that after prohibition went into effect her happy home was disrupted. Her husband, Dr. Edward Scott Finley, a San Bernardino dentist, did not drink to excess until after the prohibition law went into effect two years ago, she says.

Her suit for divorce, filed yesterday through Attorney H. M. Willis, states that Dr. Finley found difficulty in getting liquor. He absented himself from home, returning late at night, it seems. His excessive drinking, she says, caused her to become a nervous wreck. She was made fearful by his purported condition. Alimony of $150 a month is asked in the complaint, which states that Dr. Finley has an income of $400 a month.

Sleeping in the Open

A swing on the lawn by day—
A bed 'neath the stars at night.

The convertible swing we are now showing at a nominal price was made to increase the joy of living for all good Californians.

Who among us--lacking the time to make a camp--has not longed for the thrill of sleeping out of doors? A swing like this makes a practicable, comfortable camp of the back porch or the front lawn--brings the special joy of the out-doors directly into the home.

This swing is just as wonderful for real camp use as it is for the home. By day, it supplies comfortable seats, by night, makes a rest-inviting double bed.

We want to show this swing to you--every YOU among you who longs for the caress of night breezes and the blessing of the stars overhead. It is priced at $37.00, including standard—a very nominal price for a piece of furniture that does double duty.

Other swings are here, too, of various styles in varied materials and colors. Prices range from as low as $21.75 for a porch swing to $125.00 for a swing complete with standard, canopy and other luxurious equipment.

FEDERAL JUDGES TO REST DURING AUGUST.

JURISTS TO TAKE VACATION IN MOUNTAINS; RULING DUE IN CONNER CASE.

The entire month of August will be vacation time in both departments of the United States District Court.

Tomorrow Judge Trippet will call the calendar in his court, but that will be the end of his record for the entire month, according to present arrangements. On Tuesday Judges Trippet and Sawtelle, who has been filling out in the local Federal courts for a month past, will go to Judge Trippet's mountain ranch, in the Big Bear country, expecting to remain several weeks. Judge Sawtelle has been indisposed for some time, and the Arizona jurist hopes that the outing will benefit him.

It is not the intention of Judge Bledsoe to hold court during August, but it is believed that he will hand down this week a decision in the W. J. Conner case, that has occupied his time ever since the interesting question arose as to whether a man can be convicted of aiding and abetting in the commission of an act that a jury has decided is not illegal.

EIGHT ENRAGED WOMEN HEARD.

Alleged Seller of Desert Lots Says It Was All a Mistake.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, July 29.—That "Hell hath no fury like a woman stung" was proven here today when eight infuriated women appeared in justice court to attend the arraignment hearing of J. K. Woods, alleged bunko man, arrested for representing himself from an oil syndicate and selling them town lots in an imaginary city on the Mojave Desert. The eight women and two men had sworn to complaints charging Woods with obtaining money under false pretenses. Woods made no statement other than to say it was all a mistake.

CHILDREN INVITED TO PILGRIMAGE PLAY.

SPECIAL NIGHT FOR LITTLE ONES; IS SCHEDULED FOR NEXT SATURDAY.

Following the Divine command to "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," the Pilgrimage Play Association will have a special children's night in the El Camino Real Theater next Saturday.

On this night all children will be admitted for 50 cents, although adults will have to pay the regular admission.

A request for a children's night was made to the Pilgrimage Play Association by the library workers of the city, who expressed a belief that the influence of the play on the minds and hearts of children would last through all their lives. Miss Marjorie Day, chairman of the speakers' bureau for the play, is in charge of all arrangements for children's night.

Tomorrow night opens the fourth week of the play. Long Beach will have its second special night at the play on Thursday, and Santa Barbara soon will have a night.

DIESEL ENGINE PROVES WORTH.

Use of Motor Cuts Costs on Los Angeles Ship.

Runs Long Distance Without Power Plant Repair.

Foreign Governments Alive to Advantage of Drive.

The Los Angeles built and operated motorship Mazatlan, since she was commissioned last February has proven the utility of the Diesel engine, which is beginning to be hailed as an epoch-maker for the American merchant marine. The Mazatlan has completed 60,000 miles without a single engine mishap and has operated at an extraordinary saving over steam.

The Diesel engine, a German invention, has no international patents on its principle, and most of the maritime nations of the world are installing these engines as rapidly as possible. The United States is particularly slow.

The Diesel, because of its saving in fuel, men and cargo space is especially suited to the American fight for commercial supremacy on the seas.

LABOR IS PROBLEM.

The American problem since the days she was supreme with the clipper ships has been a labor problem; American laws have set a wage standard that made it difficult to compete with the British and Germans who employed cheaper labor. In the Diesel ships the engine-room labor is cut down from 20 to 30 per cent, the fuel cost from 50 to 65 per cent, and since fuel oil is cheapest in America, this country at last would find itself at an advantage, should the Diesel principle become universal.

This is the opinion of L. T. Kane, chief engineer of the Mazatlan, and a member of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers. His experience with the Mazatlan on her frequent trips between Los Angeles and Mexican west coast ports, has convinced him that the Diesel will solve these peculiarly American maritime problems.

The Mazatlan was the first steel passenger and freight ship of any consequence in this country, to be equipped with the Diesel drive, and consequently the first to prove results over a long period of time.

CUTS COSTS.

The Diesel is an internal combustion engine that uses ordinary fuel oil, and is designed to save oil. Of the total cost of operation of an average steamship, 42 per cent goes to fuel. The experience of the Mazatlan is that the Diesel engine will save from 25 to 30 per cent of the total cost on fuel, and this is only one of its advantages. Coal passers, firemen and many others of the crew are eliminated.

The Mazatlan, a ship of 987 tons, has carried as much as 1400 tons of cargo, although her rating, under steamship standards, is for a cargo of only 987 tons. This is because of the smaller space the Diesel engine requires for itself and its fuel.

The Germans have changed the cruiser Ersatz to Diesel drive, taking the engines built for submarine use, which also have been installed on the torpedo boats 186 and 187 and two 525-foot immigrant passenger liners, built for the Hamburg-American Line. They have eight other Diesel ships under construction, and have in commission the largest Diesel-drive ship in the world, the 17,000-ton oil tanker Zoppot.

SWEDEN ACTS.

The Swedish government has subsidized construction of Diesel ships. Several have been at Los Angeles Harbor recently; among them the Buenos Aires, a 9350-ton ship, one of fifteen of the Johnson Line. The George Washington, a Norwegian ship of 9600-tons, in the local harbor last week, also is of Diesel drive.

The United States Shipping Board has plans under way to change seventy steam-driven ships to Diesel and Diesel-electric drive. But as far as is known here the actual work has not begun.

The Scandinavian ships touching this port are managing it so that they get fuel free. They buy extra oil here and sell it in Europe at a profit that wipes out their fuel cost.

The Mazatlan is owned by the California-Mexico Steamship Company, and was built at Long Beach. Her engines were constructed by the Winton Engine Company.

JEWELRY DESIGNING.

School Opened in Rhode Island is Only One of its Kind.

Little Rhode Island has an investment of $31,000,000 in the jewelry industry, with an annual payroll of $12,000,000, and the Rhode Island School of Design has recently opened a new building to be devoted to jewelry work and silversmithing. This is the only school building in the United States devoted to the teaching of design and manufacture of articles of gold and silver. The school, situated in the heart of the jewelry producing district of the country, has the stanch support of the heads of the industry. They have taken it upon themselves to put in all the latest implements of the trade and the entire mechanical equipment. The very latest models of all types of machines used in an up-to-date factory have been supplied by means of a fund raised for the purpose by the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Association.

In itself the building is a model one, a four-story brick structure of simple design with every educational facility in safety, sanitation, light and utilities. To obtain these there was the closest co-operation between the teaching staff and the trade. The founding of this school with the co-operation of representatives of art and industry has been hailed by people in all parts of the country interested in the advancement of American industries to a higher plane, as the beginning of a movement which will give America a pre-eminent place in world trade in articles which depend upon the quality of the design. The building was designed by Bellows & Alrich, and the money came from the bequest of a wealthy Providence woman, Miss Lyra Brown Nickerson.—[New York Times.

COYOTES GIVEN RABIES BLAME.

Inoculated to Exterminate Them, Says Bushong.

Disease Transmitted to Dogs, Veterinarian's Theory.

Hydrophobia Treatment is Given Free by City, State.

City Veterinarian Bushong yesterday announced he believes he has discovered the reason why rabies is prevalent among coyotes in California and Nevada, which he believes accounts for the large number of cases among dogs in this vicinity and last year's outbreak of the disease in the northern Coast district. He says six or eight years ago a United States Department of Agriculture agent inoculated coyotes with rabies on the theory that the disease would exterminate the breed.

"I suppose," said Dr. Bushong, "this experimenter thought he was doing a public good. Of course, rabies has been among dogs for a good many generations without exterminating them, but I suppose the Department of Agriculture agent thought that this was due to the care taken of dogs. However, it appears that the infected coyotes bit other coyotes, but by no means all coyotes, so that the disease has progressed much as it has among dogs."

DISEASE TRANSMITTED.

In warning the public against the spread of the disease here, Dr. Bushong on Tuesday declared he believed it had been transmitted to dogs by coyotes and skunks. He based this belief on the fact that the dogs in the outlying districts were first attacked, and a similar condition has been noted in the northern part of the State, where last year's outbreak was much more general than the present one here. In this district there have been twenty known cases of rabies, and fourteen persons have been bitten and forced to take the Pasteur treatment to prevent the development of hydrophobia, as fatal to human beings as dogs.

Dr. Bushong says the Department of Justice agent inoculated coyotes in the hills of Nevada, and that the experiment was reported at the time in the department bulletins.

The symptoms of rabies are often similar to those of distemper and other canine disorders, and the sick dog should not be killed, but secluded until a veterinary surgeon arrives. The artificial death of the dog before the culmination of the disease prevents a definite analysis of the brain. The City Health Department makes these analyses free of charge, and, with the State Health Department, administers the Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia without cost.

FUR FARMING.

Examiner and Shipwrecked Sailor Founded a Unique Enterprise.

A former "sourdough" miner and a shipwrecked sailor are proprietors of one of the most curious "farms" in the north country, raising silver gray foxes on the island of Ugak, six miles off Kodiak Island, in the Pacific Ocean, near the Alaskan Coast.

E. T. Hafferty went to Alaska during the gold rush of '97, and after experiencing various shades of fortune decided that fox farming is a better method of making money than mining. Gus Olsen, his partner, arrived at Ugak Island on a bit of driftwood after being shipwrecked in 1898, and has never left the north land.

The two bought the entire island, consisting of about 50,000 acres, seven years ago and "planted" three pairs of silver gray foxes. These have multiplied until sixty pairs now roam their land, and within two years the two 'old-timers' expect to sell fifty pelts each spring.

Hafferty arrived in Portland, Ore., a short time ago with sixteen pelts to be disposed of, and will return to Alaska in a few weeks.

Hafferty is a United States Commissioner at Kodiak, and Olsen now does most of the work on the ranch.

"For ten months of the year he is the only human inhabitant of the island," said Hafferty. "But it is a life he loves."

"Our main trouble is with eagles," Hafferty continued. "They swoop down and carry away the fox pups when they are too young and small to protect themselves. Olsen devotes most of his time in the spring and early summer to killing these eagles. This spring we shipped sixty-five pairs of eagle claws to Juneau, for which we received 50 cents each in bounty. Olsen spends the rest of his time patrolling the island against native hunters who attempt to land and trap the animals we are farming.

One might get the idea that these animals are domesticated, but they wander over the island at will, and must be trapped just as though they didn't live on a farm.

ONE PAIR WORTH $1500.

"We hired two native trappers during the winter," Hafferty explained, "paying them $50 a month and $5 a pelt bonus, in addition to their board. Thus far we have not been compelled to feed the foxes, as the island is well stocked with game and fish drift to shore with the ocean currents. When a large whale goes ashore it provides feed for the foxes for at least six months."

At present market quotations a pair of young silver gray foxes, alive, are worth $1500, Hafferty said. Native Indians capture the fox pups and raise them from spring until fall, when they are old enough to sell and place on the farm. The animals mate during February and the young are born in May.

There is only one other fox farm in Alaska, on Middleton Island, near Valdez. It is the larger of the two, but Hafferty hopes within a few years to raise as many bearers of milady's furs as the Middleton Island farm does.—[Kansas City Times.

FIRECRACKER KILLS A FISH.

Mrs. Black Bass of Christmas Lake and a score of little basses are blacker than usual today. They are mourning for the paterfamilias, who celebrated the first firecracker Fourth in Minneapolis since 1909, in a sudden manner. They are off fireworks for life. Old Man Bass is off life, because of fireworks.

It happened at the cottage of W. H. Richards. Guests were celebrating the Fourth in old-time manner. One of the guests lighted a firecracker and tossed it high in the air. It circumscribed a parabola and alighted in the lake before it exploded.

There was a gleam of silver, a flash through the water, and a large bass rose to strike. Just as the bass seized the firecracker the "bait" exploded. The bass turned bottom-side up.

There was bass for supper at the Richards cottage. — [Minneapolis Journal.

ISLAND IS SOUTHLAND'S GEM.

Sea-Girl Paradise Golconda of Joy for World's Pleasure Seekers.

The spirit of a new America, a thinking people whose pleasures have turned on a sharp pivot from jazz, artificiality and speeding at high tension to outdoor sport, a closer communion with nature and to the stimulant found in relaxation among the natural playgrounds of the great outdoors instead of the cabaret, the theater and the many other indoor pleasures is revealed by the vacationists of 1921.

Unprecedented throngs of excursionists are reported to have left New York, Chicago, Boston and other great eastern cities to seek recreation at lake, mountain and stream resorts.

The same spirit is being felt in a still greater degree in California's sunny Southland, where mountain and sea ever beckon the traveler and city folk from the entire continent. And Santa Catalina Island is the mecca of thousands of these.

A succession of majestic rugged mountain peaks, Santa Catalina Island rises out of the sea, but twenty-seven miles from the portals of Los Angeles. In the curve of this huge footprint of nature nestles the gay little city of Avalon, where there is music in the air and where gay awnings and perpetually-blooming bunting flutter in the gentle and cooling breezes.

Here golf on the sporty links of the Catalina Country Club takes the place of the pool table; a tussle with a huge game fish—the famous tuna and the sworded sea tiger of the Pacific—supplants the thrills of a prize fight; a swim in the clear, blue scintillating waters of the bay registers what is pronounced by some a more lasting "kick" than that found in the olden days in the "fluid that sparkled and flowed red." In the evening a thirty-six-piece marine band plays in the Greek amphitheater—the carabet of the people—for all to hear.

It is this great playground of mountain and sea which William Wrigley, Jr., has made his hobby and which, with his keen business ability, unlimited newspaper advertising and unstinted investment of millions of dollars he has made the "people's island" where all may come to rest and to play.

On the smooth waters of the bay of Avalon float scores of pleasure craft, palatial yachts and steam launches representing an aggregate of millions of dollars, speed boats and motor boats of every description, rowboats, canoes and excursion vessels.

PALACE OF DELIGHT.

In strange contrast, like a jewel emlazoned in the tip of the crescent of the Bay of the Moons, is Sugar Loaf Casino—Mr. Wrigley's new fairy palace of delight—the scene of night life on terra firma. In a further curve of the island to the north is Descanso Canyon, in which nestles the magnificent Hotel St. Catherine, famed for its excellent cuisine and the rendezvous for the world's elite—scholars, kings of commerce and finance, scientists, stars of the world of make-believe, debutantes and rulers of society.

A board walk skirting the cliffs leads past Sugar Loaf and back to Avalon, continuing as a picturesque promenade along the entire water front and bathing beach—the only beach in the West facing the east—of the picturesque little island city.

Perhaps the chief point of interest is the pleasure pier, where each evening at sundown the trim motorcraft of sportsmen, proudly flying their flags, announcing a tuna or swordfish catch, land. To a huge derrick are hoisted the world's record game fish to be officially weighed in on the Tuna Club scales—leaping blue-fin tuna, weighing from 50 to 150 pounds; broadbill swordfish, the purple king of the deep, often weighing more than 400 pounds, and the ferocious marlin swordfish, called the striped sea tiger.

But as gigantic in proportion to the fish at Catalina are the problems which Mr. Wrigley has had to meet to equip his island so as to be able to accommodate the thousands of visitors thronging to its shores from all corners of the world. In the center of the city of Avalon he built the new Hotel Atwater, its ground floor housing the largest cafeteria in the world, seating 1612 persons at once, and averaging a service of 2000 meals per hour.

Island Villa, the picturesque city of 1000 tents, was enlarged, until it now takes in ground space of forty acres—the greatest out-door hostelry in the world, stretching from the center of Avalon, back into Avalon Canyon and up over East Avalon Terrace.

Avalon itself has three churches, a modern public school, a bank and business houses of every description. A local telephone system connects all business houses, residences and hotels. The wonder of the twentieth century is the wireless telephone which connects Catalina with every city on the North American continent. This is the first and, at present, the only wireless telephone system in the world open to commercial use.

SPORTS GALORE.

Whether visitors come to Catalina for a day, a week or season, there is always a variety of outdoor sports which makes the beautiful isle of the Pacific the people's playground all through the four seasons of the year. Bridle trails lead through fern-covered canyons to mountain crests from which may be seen the dashing, roaring surf on one side of the island and the placid waters of Avalon Bay on the other.

ESTABLISH NEW TRIBUNALS.

Small Claims Court Expected to Accomplish Much Toward Reducing Dissatisfaction.

BY HARRY A. CHAMBERLIN,
Attorney and State Senator.

Prominent among the achievements of the 1921 session of the California Legislature is the establishment of "small claims" courts which became an integral and important part of the judicial system of California last Friday. Their aim is to afford a flexible, simple and speedy machinery for the adjudication without costs of claims not exceeding $50, preventing the delay so prevalent in other courts, eliminating court costs and removing the present technical procedure necessitating the services of attorneys. Their creation, it is believed by those who sponsored the bill providing for their establishment, will accomplish much towards mitigating the feeling of dissatisfaction so prevalent today with the present judicial system, particularly as it is reflected in petty cases.

The establishment of "small claims" courts is based upon the conclusion that the machinery that has been heretofore afforded for the administration of the law has been inadequate, and that as a result, justice has, to many poor persons, been denied, and to many more, delayed.

SEVERE CRITICISM.

While the substantive law has not consciously, or otherwise, discriminated against the poor man, but on the contrary, has scrupulously preserved the balance between the poor man and his more fortunate neighbor, the remedial law, that which prescribes the method of enforcing rights and obtaining redress for wrongs, has been subjected to severe criticism, especially in the administrationof those classes of cases which will fall within the jurisdiction of the "small claims" courts. Much has been done during the last few years in the enactment of substantive law that has a tendency to ameliorate the lot of the poor man. But little has been done to afford him speedy and adequate relief for a violation of rights.

There has been unnecessary and unjustified delay in the prosecution of small claims. Court costs, payable in advance, and in many cases out of proportion to the amount of the claim involved, and the necessity of employing attorneys to combat the efforts of counsel for the judgment debtor, have made it practically impossible for many poor persons to secure redress for wrongs done them.

DENIED JUSTICE.

All of these factors have resulted, in a great many cases, either in denied justice, or delayed justice, which is the same thing. Either the claimant, unable to suffer the long delay or pay the court costs and employ an attorney does not start his case, but gives it up, or is forced to accept an unfair settlement or discount of his claim.

That there is a denial of justice to poor litigants and much need for the "small claims" court, with its informal, speedy and inexpensive procedure, is evidence by statistics gathered through legal aid societies.

The "small claims" court is one of the main alleviating agencies which have been adopted to overcome the injustice of the present judicial system as to those claims which will fall within its jurisdiction. They may be said to be an outgrowth of the philanthropic and extra-legal institution, the legal aid society, which, with the aid of members of the bar, has been carrying on a great deal of the work which will now come before the "small claims" court. But with the legal aid societies it has been a matter of charity, while now the aid will be received as a right of citizenship.

There are "small claims" courts now in Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Topeka, Kansas and Cleveland. A close study of their operation and effect has resulted in the conclusion that they are accomplishing substantial good and are an essential agency in removing the injustices and defects of the technical, involved and cumbersome procedure of the regularly constituted courts.

While it is true that their jurisdiction is limited to claims of $50 or under, statistics reveal the fact that 90 per cent of the petty claims in the United States fall within this scope.

The establishment of the "small claims" courts does not contemplate the organization of separate courts. They are made a part of the justice's courts, and the justices of the peace of the various townships will preside over them.

METHOD IS SIMPLE.

The method of prosecuting a claim before the "small claims" court is made extremely simple and expeditious.

Any person having a claim against another, not exceeding $50, may go to court and make an affidavit setting forth the transaction upon which the claim is predicated. The justice then fixes a time for a hearing, which must not be less than five, nor more than ten days thereafter. A copy of the affidavit or claim is then sent by registered mail to the alleged debtor. On the date fixed, both parties appear before the justice with any witnesses that they may have, and formally proceed to a hearing of the claim and any defense that may exist against it. Attorneys are expressly prohibited from appearing in the court and no one but the original owner can present any claim. This would eliminate the collection agencies and the possibility of a stranger sharing in the proceeds of the recovery.

No formal pleadings or technicalities will be allowed in the "small claims" court and none of the provisional remedies such as attachment or garnishment are given to litigants. Such rights are retained in the present procedure in justice's courts in which there has been no change and may be available there should the claimant not elect to proceed in the "small claims" court.

METHOD OF PAYMENT.

If the justice, after hearing the evidence and investigating the claim, finds that it is well founded and ought to be paid, he can order its payment forthwith, or if the defendant be a poor debtor, he may grant him the right to pay the claim in installments, a power which is entirely lacking in other courts.

A claimant, having elected his method of endeavoring to make a collection through the "small claims" court, is given no appeal from any judgment rendered against him. If he loses the case, he is through. The debtor, however, having been brought into this informal kind of a tribunal, is given a right of appeal to the Superior Court.

All the blanks necessary for the prosecution of a claim are to be furnished by the Board of Supervisors and no fees are to be charged either party in connection with the case.

Good vision is security for health and happiness.

Of all the senses given by God to man, sight is the one most greatly treasured. What a world of varied form and color and widely-ranged activity it opens! It is through our eyes that we "see" our way to success and happiness, the greatest of all attainments.

Success is not the complex proposition it is generally regarded. To gain it is not consequent only upon superhuman effort. Most of us make success more difficult to achieve because we think the road a hard one and overlook the easy way.

Just as success depends upon clear thinking and hard work so does clear thinking and hard work depend upon faultless eyesight.

Neglect mankind's most precious treasure, vision, and you will have time for repentance—after health and happiness have faded beyond your reach.

PAGEANT AT SAN GABRIEL.

Bishop Cantwell to Open Celebration of Mission's Founding Today.

Bishop Cantwell will this morning begin the events that will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Mission of San Gabriel and of the city of Los Angeles. The entire day will be given over to religious observances and to the celebration. This morning the bishop will hold a pontifical high mass, during which a statue of Fra Junipero Serra by Julia Bracken Wendt will be unveiled by a little Indian boy.

Following this there will be a barbecue, and at 3 p.m. in the open space near the Mission Theater will be presented free, the pageant of San Gabriel, written and staged by Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith.

Both in the letter of the pageant and in the costumes and staging, the habits and customs of the early days of the padres will be followed with accuracy. Many of the costumes are heirlooms in the families of the descendants of some of our earliest Spanish settlers, and grandchildren of these same pioneers are among those in the cast.

Carroll Nye, who won distinction as dramatic interpreter at the University of California, will speak the prologue and will also take the important part of the third Governor of California, under the King of Spain.

Following the prologue, the pageant will show the coming of the two padres from San Diego to found the mission, the conquest of the redskins, Spanish soldiers and caballeros mounted and in gorgeous costume. Most picturesque is the Spanish wedding of the period ten years after the founding of the mission. This will be followed by the departure of the bride and bridegroom on horseback. Soldiers starting out to found the city of Los Angeles, to which none wanted to go, so that it was necessary to draft our first citizens, will be shown.

TO SHOW PURE-BRED SWINE.

Special activity was started among swine breeders last week, owing to the indorsement of the San Fernando Valley Fair by the Board of Supervisors as the official Los Angeles county fair. It will be held September 13 to 18, and will include one of the finest live-stock shows ever staged in Southern California. H. L. Graham, manager of the swine department, has chosen H. F. Holloman of Burbank as his assistant. These men say that in spite of the splendid reservations and important entries already secured by the cattlemen, they will have such a showing of pure-bred swine as will easily carry off first honors in the live-stock division.

Some of the finest swine in the world are raised in this State and Messrs. Graham and Holloman say that if they succeed in getting a showing representative of the industry in the West, they will have one of the most interesting and educational, as well as one of the largest exhibits at the fair.

The management has received applications for concessions of every description. The hot dog, pink lemonade and balloon men will be there. The merry-go-'round, Ferris wheel and bowls of joy, together with the giant, dwarf, snake-charmer and all the other side shows will have their places. Preparations for a wonderful midway and dancing pavilion are being made.

Arizona Society to Hold Annual Picnic at Beach.

The Arizona Society of Southern California will hold its annual basket picnic and reunion on Pickering pier, Ocean Park, on next August 4. A program of music and dancing is in preparation. Gov. Campbell of Arizona is expected to deliver an address.

Capt. Charles A. Montgomery, president of the society, has arranged with the concessionaires of the pier to throw everything open to the Hassayampa's at a nominal fee.

Prof. I. Colodny, for ten years connected with the schools of Arizona, will have charge of the program.

Capt. Montgomery, and others, will tell of the old Territorial days. Several thousand people are expected to attend.

YOU may have your favorite dish, well cooked and nicely served, at Gus Mann's Pot and Spigot Grill, 611 South Spring.

LAFAYETTE DAY PLANS FORMED.

Patriot, Marne Heroes to be Honored in September.

Franco-American Friendship Will be Keynote.

All Local Orders, Societies Are to Participate.

BY LUCIEN N. BRUNSWIG.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Lafayette Society of California was held last Friday noon at the Maurice restaurant. The object was the election of officers for the ensuing year and planning the program for the Lafayette-Marne Day, September 6.

Each year on the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, Sept. 6, 1914, when the order was given by Gen. Joffre to his troops (retreating for ten days) to turn around, face the enemy and die if necessary, but give no ground, this memorial day, which corresponds with the birth of the great Lafayette, is celebrated jointly in all French and American patriotic movements.

The French government is erecting a commemorative monument, a memento of the intervention of America in the great war. It was on Sept. 6, 1919, at Pointe de Grave, near Bordeaux, where 142 years previously the little ship La Victoire, carrying a few hundred volunteers to aid the thirteen colonies fighting for independence, set sail for America, that Raymond Poincare, President of the French republic, and the American Ambassador laid the corner-stone of the monument destined to commemorate the entrance of America into the World War.

WORK COLLECTIVE.

The execution of the monument was confided to the master Bartholme, but it was his desire that the work should be joint and collective, inspired by the efforts and collaboration of the young sculptors and artists who had themselves fought with the French armies, participating in the great conflict, and such of the survivors as returned to their homes contributed largely to the designing of the monument.

One million francs was appropriated by the French government for the purpose, and municipalities throughout France contributed a similar amount, in order that this should be representative of all France.

This monument will be to some extent a replica of the Statue of Liberty at New York Harbor. Ships leaving France for America will have the monument last in view, just as American ships arriving at Bordeaux will look upon the monument as first greeting, and it will be symbolic of the work of the American soldiers in France, perpetuating their chivalry and heroism for all time.

TO REFLECT AMITY.

It is contemplated to have the celebration of September 6 a commemoration and manifestation of the French-American amity and friendship which have endured a century and a half.

The Lafayette Society of California is an offspring of the Sons of the Revolution, organized in their midst, and includes many of their members.

The American Legion is likewise largely interested in participating in this movement, as well as the Boy Scouts, Grand Army of the Republic, the Spanish War Veterans, and representatives of the Army and Navy.

As a result of the meeting committees were appointed to care for the executive and honorary portions of the program.

Mayor Cryer will be requested to deliver an address.

FITTS INVITED.

State Commander Fitts of the American Legion has been asked to make an address on behalf of the Legion. The Knights of Columbus are expected to participate. The Grand Army of the Republic will take part. The old G.A.R. trumpeteer, a Civil War veteran, with his bugle will, as always, call the salute at the raising and lowering of the flag. The octogenarian descendant of Lafayette—Christian, will be an honored guest. The admiral, commander of the Pacific Fleet, the commander of the Submarine Base, the colonel commanding Fort MacArthur, the colonel commanding the Balloon School at Arcadia, as well as notabilities, representatives of the Federal and State governments, as also representatives of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce will be among the honored guests. Delegates from the Daughters of the Revolution, also the Sons of the Revolution will be present.

The celebration will be, as in previous years, at Lafayette Park, through courtesy of the Park Commission. Altogether it will be an epochal celebration, and as an outcome a movement for the organization of branches of the society in all parts of California will be started. This Lafayette-Marne celebration will be the avant-coureur of the anticipated visit of Marechal Foch, and to an extent its introduction.

In these days of chicanery in the chancellories of the old and new world, as the outcome of the treaty of peace, we cannot too strongly urge the forging of the links of the alliance between the French and American republics, to the end that this may endure into eternity.

Osborne Arranges Tests Here to Select Three Alternates.

Representative Osborne has arranged with the Civil Service Commission to hold an examination to guide him in the selection of the three alternates he has been asked to name as midshipmen candidates for the United States Naval Academy. The examination will be held October 29, in Los Angeles.

C.

Landing of the Pilgrims Will Be Celebrated.

The three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers will be celebrated next Saturday by the Massachusetts State Society with a picnic in Sycamore Grove, which will be an echo of the anniversary week celebration back in the Bay State.

A program will open about 3 p.m. It will have special significance for the young people from Massachusetts. Rev. "Bob" Shuler will offer the invocation. Misses Thelma and Velma Schwartz will entertain with vocal and instrumental music. Judge R. L. Hubbard will be among the speakers. The Playground Commission will present a special feature and there will be community singing with song books supplied. President Paul W. Zimmerman will have charge of the exercises.

Hot coffee will be provided free for all who secure the souvenir badges, but each one should bring a basket for the 5 o'clock supper.

Bay State folk and their friends are assured a hearty welcome, it is announced.

LOSES BAND BY UNION

The Chicago lodge of Elks appeared at the Los Angeles convention without a band because of labor union meddling, according to the Chicago Elks' News. The article says there are two bands in Chicago suitable for such an excursion, the Chicago Band and the Great Lakes Naval Training School Band. The Chicago lodge "has stood solidly at all times for union bands," and gives approximately $10,000 a year to the musician union's members, says the Elks' journal. But it was found impossible to raise the $16,000 needed to bring the Chicago Band to Los Angeles, and the navy band was engaged.

"Congress has passed a law which reads substantially that no band of enlisted men or employees of the government can compete against union musicians, if a protest is made by the union," explains the Elks' News.

"The Chicago Federation of Musicians hastened to avail themselves of this technicality of the law and play the part of the dog in the manger.

"Chicago lodge is a big lodge, it is an influential lodge, and it does not forget a technical, small, cheap, unscrupulous trick, even if it is played by a supposedly union.

"Chicago lodge in Los Angeles, 'scrub' band of but it would rather in the streets of Los music than to resort things it could have make a showing."

HIT PIECEMEAL ROAD BUILDING.

Auto Club Officials Tell of Waste in Imperial.

Failure of Some Parts Ties Up Highway, Says Report.

Many Pavement Breakdowns Laid to State Policy.

Failure of the State Highway Commission to complete the important highway between Los Angeles and Imperial Valley is cited by the Automobile Club of Southern California in a statement issued yesterday as an example of the economic waste due to the piecemeal construction policy of the State.

This policy has been repeatedly criticised, the statement continues, for the reason that no road begins to function until it has been completed. Permission to sell highway bonds during the war was denied by the Capital Issues Committee for the stated reason of piecemeal construction policy. The government committee, however, specifically stated that it would consider an application to sell bonds for the purpose of completing a trunk line or important lateral.

CITES HEAVY LOSS.

By its failure to complete important highways, the club says, the State has failed to meet extensive economic needs and has entailed heavy economic loss.

"The total area of farm land under cultivation in Imperial Valley in 1920," says the club's statement, "was 547,485 acres. The estimated production for the year was 1,386,074 tons. Nearly two-thirds of a million dollars have been expended and the people are still denied the use of a completed road. On the portions of highway constructed many failures have occurred. Between Trifolium and the north line of Imepiral county, eleven miles will be reconstructed and widened next fall. This work will virtually close this road until some time during the summer of 1922. No surveys have been made for that portion of the road between Trifolium Waste and El Centro.

"Pavement is completed from San Diego to the west foot of Descanso Mountain, and from El Centro to Myers Canyon bridge, and from the top of Mountain Springs grade to the Tecate divide.

"The result of the piecemeal construction policy in Imperial Valley is emphasized by the fact that portions of the highway have failed and will be reconstructed before the people have ever had the use of the completed highway.

TELLS OF FAILURES.

"Between Kane Springs and the north line of Imperial county about thirty failures in the concrete pavement were noted recently. Six miles of this pavement was completed in 1920 and is four inches in thickness by fifteen feet wide and reinforced with steel rods. Fourteen miles out of a total of twenty observed were completed in 1921 and is five inches in thickness by fifteen feet wide, reinforced with steel bars.

"Other examples of failure in recently completed pavement is found in the Mint Canyon Road near Vincent and in the pavement through the city of Oceanside, built in 1918.

FAILURES SIGNIFICANT.

"The above failures are significant in the face of recent assertions made by the California Highway Commission, that it could not anticipate the heavy traffic to which these roads would be subjected. It is noted that these payments were built six to nine years after initial failures in State pavements had occurred."

BEAUTY TO RULE SATURDAY.

All the theater managers of this city, who spend 364 days of the year in planning and scheming various ways to entertain the public, will take a night off next Saturday for a big studio party and dance; a nice supper; a novel theater performance and a good time generally.

All this will happen at the new Cinderella Roof, the big new ballroom located at Sixth and Olive streets. A special committee, headed by Sid Grauman, the chairman, with Fred A. Miller, William T. Wyatt, Sol Lesser, Carl J. Walker, Nat Holt, Frank C. Egan, Theodore M. Newman, Harry David and Francis R. E. Woodward, the secretary of the Los Angeles Theaters' Association, is making the arrangements. One of the most elaborate and gorgeous affairs ever seen in the city is promised.

The big feature of the night will be an oriental durbar, staged by Sid Grauman, who will give a rehearsal of the girls, who will participate in it, at Grauman's Theater on Thursday night, August 4.

The funds realized from this party will be placed in the association treasury to be used for charity, for fighting blue legislation, for the All-Year advertising fund to bring summer residents here, and other similar purposes.

SAYS HUSBAND BROKE DISHES.

Wife Asking Divorce Avers He Threw Bowl of Hot Soup at Her.

Max Diskin evidently allowed his temper to take the expensive trend of breaking dishes and bric-a-brac, according to the story told by Mrs. Clara Kiskin in divorce proceedings filed yesterday. When he became violently enraged, she says, he threw dishes and other articles on the floor where they were shattered.

He is also charged with hurling a bowl of hot soup at her and also calling her cruel names. As a result of his purported acts, Mrs. Diskin says her health suffered. She was married last April 2 and the separation occurred last Sunday.

EDUCATED SIMIAN DOES EVERYTHING BUT TALK.

Mary, Prize Chimpanzee of Selig Zoo, Understands English, Sews and is Champion of Children.

BY GEORGIA ROSE.

(Pictures illustrating this article will be found in the rotogravure section of The Times today.)

Do monkeys think?

Digging for the roots of our family tree, the possible finding of something tangible about the ape-man is a subject that has universal appeal to the imagination. The causes that led to man's evolution from the apes, how evolution was first accomplished, what primitive man looked like and how he lived—about all this there is much theory and but very little fact. Just what man's place among the primates was, we do not know, but that there is a relation very real and very close between man and the chimpanzee seems indubitable, especially after having seen Mary, Cy De Vry's pet chimpanzee. In his opinion she understands every word he says. And he is an authority. For the doubting Thomas who desires corroborative evidence there is Mary, herself.

My slight acquaintance with the monkey family, consisting of a casual moment in front of a cage in a zoo, or an amused passing glance at the antics of an organ grinder's pet, had never led me to believe that I could bestow the affection on one of the tribe that I would on some other pet. The intimate hour, however, spent with Mary and Mike at the Selig Zoo, in the company of genial Cy De Vry, has caused a complete reversal of judgment. Mr. De Vry has a national reputation as a zoo man and one fortunate enough to see him with the animals he loves, understands why his power over them seems uncanny. Previous to the year and a half he has been with Mr. Selig, he spent thirty-one years in charge of the animals at Lincoln Park. He says there is no place in the world like Los Angeles for a zoo. He has, heretofore, been unable to raise any little ones of the cat family—tigers, lions and the like. And here he can raise them "like flies."

MARY ACCOMPLISHED.

As we walked toward Mary's place of abode, Mr. De Vry spoke of her many accomplishments, and I listened—politely. After I had been with her an hour I had become so enthusiastic that I felt I must rush out and find some one into whose willing ears I could pour a recital of the many and varied attainments of this remarkable chimpanzee.

The cage was unlocked and we sat down, Mr. De Vry and myself on two chairs, and Mary, an interested and entertaining third, on the table between us. After we had shaken hands, "Mary, give the lady your name and address." Whereupon she found the pencil in Mr. De Vry's pocket and made some marks as would a child, on a piece of paper. "Why, you didn't put down your address." She looked at it and I actually expected her to say, "Sure enough," as she scribbled some more and handed it to me.

She likes to smoke and has a preference for cigars. She will take a dozen out of Mr. De Vry's mouth a day and smoke them with great enjoyment. During the entire visit I could not rid myself of the idea that soon she would make some remark relevant to our conversation.

"I don't know whether my watch is running or not," said Mr. De Vry.

Mary quickly took the timepiece out of his pocket and listened for the tick, wound it and carefully replaced it.

"It certainly it hot today."

Mary took his handkerchief and solicitously wiped his face, head, ears and behind them, as you have seen mothers do countless times. She untied his shoestring, unlaced his shoes and laced them up again. And at a careless remark about their being dusty, found a cloth and carefully cleaned them. Upon being given a towel that was a bit soiled she took it to the sink and began washing it. After a close inspection she vigorously rubbed soap on some of the spots. "Perhaps," suggested Mr. De Vry, with a twinkle in his eye, "she will be a laundress in some future reincarnation."

CAN SEW, BLOW NOSE.

In order to make me feel more at home, possibly, she removed my hat, took out some hairpins and replaced them more to her liking.

She will take two pieces of cloth and neatly sew them together.

At a casual allusion that she seemed to have a cold, Mary quickly took a handkerchief and blew her nose, very plainly intimating by her manner that she was quite capable of taking care of that sort of thing.

She loves to use the telephone, and if she happens to be in the office when Mrs. De Vry calls up, the receiver is given to Mary and she listens delightedly to all the sweet things Mrs. De Vry has to say to her.

Mr. Selig had purchased another pair of "chimps," Betty and Bill. Betty has been sold to a circus, and when it was discovered that Bill had bronchitis he was sent to Arizona, as it was feared that he might develop tuberculosis if he remained here. The four were together in Chicago, as Mr. Selig left them in Mr. DeVry's charge when he bought them.

"And many an hour has Theodore Roosevelt spent with me and those four chimps in Chicago," said Mr. De Vry reminiscently. "He loved them, too."

A momentary shadow flecked his usual smile as he recalled for a moment the lasting absence of one in the possession of whose friendship had been so greatly honored.

Mary and Betty and Bill and Mike were won't to have tea at 3 o'clock. The four sat around a little table and ate meat, potatoes, jelly, bread and butter, and drank tea or coffee. For breakfast they might have grapefruit and a cooked cereal. In fact, they seemed to eat much the same things that you and I do. He assured me with much pride that their table manners were as perfect as those of the nicest children that I had ever seen. After I had seen Mary I had not the slightest doubt of the truth of his assertion.

KNOW ROYALTY.

The chimpanzees have met governors and princes and widely known European notables. No one of any moment ever came to Chicago, I venture to think, without being entertained by Mary. Anna Fitzhugh, the opera singer, offered $10,000 for her. She felt that some sort of an operation would surely enable her to talk. But that, of course, is impossible, the vocal cords simply are not there.

Inasmuch as this story was to be about Mary and Mike, he should at least have passing mention. He, too, is unusually intelligent, will do as Mr. De Vry tells him, and is almost as much of a star in the movies as is Mary. She, somehow, seems to have pre-empted the story. That may be typical of the female of the species.

One of the most remarkable traits of a chimpanzee is its love for a little child. When, as often happens in the pictures, Mary is called upon to bathe, dress or undress a baby, after the set is finished no one can take the baby from her except Mr. De Vry. She would kill anyone else, he told me, who made the attempt. It seems such a pity that chimpanzees do not breed in captivity. Mary with a little Mary would be most entertaining.

COURTEOUS HOSTESS.

Reluctantly I arose. Mary straightened up and held out her hand, courteous little hostess. When Mary dies and a post mortem is held, as Mr. De Vry has always had over his extraordinary pets, it will be interesting to learn what sort of a brain has governed the actions of this likeable little creature.

When one has seen what this chimpanzee can do, how she responds to or acts upon every suggestion, it is not difficult to understand the enthusiasm with which men start out for the Orient to follow that indistinct trail that leads to the facts in the evoluion of man and the migration of the human race. The gold prospector, who sets out to dig in the desert in a hunt for wealth, the quick-witted detective, who matches his skill with the cleverest, in his search for master criminals, cannot feel the thrill of the man who delves for the secret of the mystery of life when the world was young.

The expression that we "descended from monkeys" has been so often repeated, partially in fun and a bit in earnest, that it is generally believed to be the theory of evolution. It is not. The belief today holds that man, or the ape-man, as he is sometimes called, was one of the primates, among monkeys, gorillas, baboons and others of that ilk.

All about us we can see the living man and his activities. We have records that hold into the past for centuries, but as we delve deeper into remote ages, the trail becomes less distinct, and finally apparently lost.

ON THE BACK TRAIL.

In order to discover, if possible, something tangible concerning the evolution and development of man, and the migration of the human race, an expedition departed for the Orient late last May. It is the most stupendous thing of this kind that has ever been attempted. It entails an expense of $250,000 to cover a period of five years.

Some present-day scientists have held to the idea that when our common ancestor left the trees, he must have taken to the seashore; that the recognition of shell fish as foot demanded some intelligence, and here was the beginning of brain development. The appearance of the body gradually changed, because shell fish could neither fight nor run, and so there was no call for great teeth, swift legs or any other powerful organs of attack or defense.

It has been extremely difficult to determine accurately the comparative intelligence of animals, ranging from the protozoa, the lowest form to man, the highest. The late Dr. R L. Garner, who spent twenty-five years of methodic study along those lines, states that investigation amply substantiates the fact that the man-like apes possess higher mental power than any other group below man. Of this group the chimpanzee occupies the highest level. To prove this it has been necessary to educate a great many chimpanzees, differentiating always between education and training. He has proved indubitably that the chimpanzee mind is endowed with many powers formerly accorded to man alone. He trained a little ape to distinguish concrete geometrical forms, and to learn by name five different colors. Her crowning accomplishment was to count small objects that she could handle—beads, nuts, etc.

While careful investigation has proved that the chimpanzee is next to man in mental ability, it can be seen that this genos of ape resembles him very closely physiologically. Excepting the slight difference in the sacrum and sternum, the skeletons of man and a chimpanzee are alike. And naturally, the greater the physical likeness the nearer approach to mental likeness.

The diet is another reliable index of the mental horizon of any animal. Those animals that have the greatest variety in their diet and exercise the most care in the selection of their food are found to have the highest mentality. (Mary and Mike seem to eat pretty much what we do.)

A great many experiments were performed at the University of Pennsylvania demonstrating that the blood crystals of the chimpanzee and man were nearly identical. The system was the same, but some of the angles in the ape crystal were somewhat more obtuse.

While there has been much speculation, there has been very little fact. Possibly five years from now or at some time during the interim, Roy Chapman Andrews and his expedition, may discover something definite, as to the beginnings of the human race in those far-off yesterdays.

Bullock's August Clearance

Monday! August 1

will be the first day of Bullock's August Clearance—"The One Sale of the Year."

—For years past, the announcement has been the signal. Recollecting Bullock's last August Clearance, the writer firmly believes that again the mere announcement will awaken throngs of women to decision—

—Still—with a privilege such as has been the writer's, to be an observer of this year's preparations—and having had the same privilege in former years—it is but a natural outcome of the enthusiasm aroused by comparisons to want to tell in more lengthy form some of the unusual features of

"The One Sale of the Year"

— ale that is more than a sale—that is different from ordinary sales as Bullock Purpose aims above mere salesmaking—a big, annual institution that gains each year in impetus from the good will of friends gathering and increasing and spreading the news of Opportunity at Bullock's in August—

—Your neighbor may know—your neighbor may have shared and saved in years gone by and may be looking forward and waiting—you may not; perhaps you may underestimate, and numerous are the reasons why no one should underestimate. Year after year has established precedent more inspiring, and Bullock's August Clearance of 1921 promises to "carry forward" to a mark hitherto unreached; to build up Business Friendships through Value, Service and Sincerity.

—Never were August possibilities so great from the standpoint of Merchandise. Stock room capacity has been taxed to overflowing, and great enthusiasm has been evidenced by those who know Quality, Character and Sources of Merchandise—

Which Brings Us Directly to the Subject of VALUES

—A subject involving so much at this moment that the most impressive part is one's inability to express one's feeling. Values prominent from sheer weight of numbers alone, but ever so much more interesting from the viewpoint of the savings they represent. Values in every section of the store. Take the Silks for instance, so desirable of themselves alone. Particularly, gorgeous Brocades from France.

—Or let one's thought drift to neckwear. One line alone consists of hundreds of sample pieces. Turn to Women's Style Sections so well prepared with Suits, Coats and Dresses that it looks as if an entirely new aspect may be given to apparel economy. All of which is as apropos regarding Hats, Blouses, Underwear (including Women's Silk Underwear,) Gloves, Hosiery, Sweaters, Negligees, Misses' and Children's Wear.

—Explorations in Bullock's Section of Shoes for Women have revealed much remarkable Footwear, embracing almost every good style and material. Bullock's Sportswear Store will stress Value in its own good way, and Bullock's Art Needlework and Gift Store is overflowing with Temptation—while Bullock's Store of Motor, Travel and Gol will be at the forefront of activity. In fact, every section is so rich with news—fine clearance news, that even a whole newspaper would hardly suffice. Why, just think of the space it would take to tell of all in Bullock's Basement Store alone.

—The energy of Bullock's concentrated for a long period—Determination set upon a goal—Vision and Sincerity linked together—Bullock Purpose to try to do all things well—have all had their part in bringing Bullock's August Clearance to the point of readiness. Many manufacturers who regard this sale as the outlet for their own surplus stocks have co-operated, magnifying Opportunity. The moment is almost here.

Tomorrow—Monday, August 1—the First Day

—Bullock's August Clearance—"The One Sale of the Year"—

—Values in every section of the store—continuing through every shopping day of August—Be early if you can.

Suggesting the Range of Opportunity

—First Floor Clearance Values will include Gloves, Stockings, Handkerchiefs, Hand Bags, Toilet Goods, Neckwear, Veilings, Ribbons, Jewelry, Silverware, Stationery, Men's Shirts, Hosiery, Pajamas, Underwear, Ties, etc., Art Needlework, Gifts; Women's Sportswear; Travel, Motor and Golf Supplies.

—Second Floor Clearance Values—Silks, Woolens, Cottons, Linens, Flannels, Trimmings and Books.

—Third Floor Clearance Values—Women's and Misses' Suits, Coats, Dresses, Skirts, Furs, Capes, Millinery and Blouses. Bridgeway—Wash Dresses, Negligees, Petticoats, Robes, etc.

—Fourth Floor Clearance Values—Women's Shoes. High School Girls' Dresses, Suits, Coats, etc. Women's Underwear. Children's and Infants' Wear. Corsets.

—Fifth Floor Clearance Values—Young Men's and Boys' Clothing, Boys' and Girls' Shoes, Stockings, Gloves, Children's Underwear. Women's and Children's Knit Underwear. Wheel Goods, Toys, etc.

—Sixth Floor Clearance Values—Draperies, Lamps, Cedar Chests, Rugs, Bedding.

—Seventh Floor Clearance Values will consist of some very attractive offerings in Furniture.

MUSICAL.

ENSEMBLE BUSY HERE.

MAY GIVE CONCERT PRIOR TO DEPARTURE

Devotees of the musical art may have an early opportunity of hearing the Chamber Music Society of San Francisco in concert before this organization, which has been summering at Manhattan Beach, leaves for the north. Arrangements having this in view are to be made shortly, and, if opportune, it is probable that programs will be given in September.

The chamber music society is composed of Louis Persinger first violinist; Louis Ford, second violinist; Nathan Firestone, viola, and Walter Ferner, 'cellist. Each summer the members have gone to a different locality to rehearse and this year they selected Manhattan Beach. They are to remain there until October 1, and then will go north to resume their season.

Special programs are to be rendered by them during the year with Harold Bauer, Myra Hess, the London String Quartet, E. Robert Schmitz, the pianist; May Mukle, the 'cellist, and Arthur Rubinstein. With Mr. Smitz the ensemble will play the piano quintet by Florent Schmitt.

In addition to the members of the quartet, Elias Hecht, flutist, is associated with the ensemble musically and in the capacity of business manager.

Tandler Honored.

Quite a distinct honor has been conferred on Adolf Tandler, formerly director of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, who is at present traveling in Europe.

Knowing of Mr. Tandler's presence the directors of the Mozart Festival in Salzburg invited him to conduct one of the orchestral concerts, according to word received by members of his family here. The orchestra was the Vienna Philharmonic. The invitation was extended by the president of the Mozarteum and the Mayor of Salzburg.

Mr. Tandler left May 1 for Europe. He has attended a number of important musical affairs, chief among which was a music festival in Zurich. At this he met Pierne, Charpentier, Sir Henry Wood and other noted composers. He was the house guest of Sir Henry Wood.

Have Star Soloists.

The soloists of the Philharmonic Orchestra promise to attract more than usual interest this season. Some of the most prominent musical artists are being engaged.

Already scheduled to appear are John McCormack, the tenor; Florence Macbeth, the soprano; Harold Bauer, the pianist; Arthur Hackett, tenor, and Kathleen Parlow, the violinist.

Cadman Songs.

A program of Cadman songs was given at a public recital at the residence-studio of Myra Belle Vickers, 1812 Morgan Place, Hollywood, Wednesday evening. Mr. Cadman himself was present and accompanied several of the numbers.

Grunn Pupils.

Homer Grunn, director of the piano department of Egan School, will present his pupils in recital Friday evening in the ballroom of the Little Theater. The program is to be given by Marguerite Porter, Frances Cole, Grace Raley and Homer Simmons.

Grauman Concert.

Ota Gygi, the violin virtuoso, will appear at the Russian-Polish concert at Grauman's Theater this morning. Mr. Gygi, who has toured the country several times on both concert and Orpheum circuits, is a favorite of Chicago and New York musical circles. He will render the Concerto in D Minor, by Wieniawski.

The names of Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Glinka and others are ever sufficient promise of beautiful music, and are included on the orchestra program—"Prelude," Opus 28, No. 4," (Chopin;) "Sleeping Beauty" waltz, Tschaikowsky;) Introduction to the "Nut Cracker" suite, (Tschaikowsky;) "Melodie," (Rachmaninoff;) "Cosachock," (Glinka;) and Moussorgsky selections.

She is studying new songs and operas, and will feature several songs by Miss Freebey on her programs.

"SLPPY McGEE" CAST HERE FOR FINALS.

Headed by Director Wesley Ruggles, members of the Morosco cast who have been in the South the last seven weeks filming "Slippy McGee," called "Home James," arrived in Los Angeles last night to finish several interior scenes at the Mayer studio.

The final week in Natches was the busiest of all for the players for in addition to the hustle to complete the location "shots" there were numerous social farewell engagements including dances, dinners and lawn parties. Each of the Morosco players declare that it was the most wonderful location trip they ever had.

Twenty-five players and technical men accompanied Director Ruggles home, including Wheeler Oakman, Colleen Moore, Pat O'Malley, Sam DeGrasse, Alfred Allen, Miss Edith Yorke, Charles Force and Joe Sawayl. Those of the cast who had already returned are Edwin Stevens, Lloyd Whitlock, Nellie Peck Saunders, Robert Dunbar and Charles E. Evans.

Meantime, in New York, General Manager George R. Bentel has been conferring with Oliver Morosco and his associates on the third and fourth productions which will be started here soon after Bentel's return. With the "Half Breed" film already delivered, Director Ruggles expects to have "Slippy McGee" in its final cutting stage in three weeks.

MIDDLE-CLASS COMEDY.

"Keeping Up with Lizzie" Full of Laughs at Clune's.

Irving Bacheller's novel, "Keeping Up with Lizzie," has been photodramatized and is to be the attraction at Clune's Broadway for the week beginning today, with Enid Bennett in one of her favorite comedy roles.

Despite its titles, Bacheller's comedy is not a story of a flivver race. Much has been written about the country girl who goes off to college and returns to her small-town environment a totally different person, but Bacheller treats it from a comedy angle and uncovers a mine of wholesome fun in his story of the grocer's daughter who made the town sit up and take notice.

The novel was one of the really humorous best sellers of its years, and Lloyd Ingraham, who directed its screen version, is said to have extracted every bit of fun from its ingenious situations.

Enid Bennett's talents as a comedienne find wide scope in the part of Lizzie. Despite the fact that Miss Bennett is to portray a grocer's daughter, the situations of the play provide her with opportunity to wear examples of her wardrobe of beautiful clothes.

A cast of well knowns supports the star. Edward Hearne has the leading role, and Otis Harlan, dean of American stage comedians, is the chief funmaker. Others in the cast are Harry Todd, J. Landers Stevens, Lila Leslie, Victory Bateman and Lottie Williams.

Will M. Ritchey, production manager for the Rockett company, adapted the story for the screen.

HERE'S CUCKOO YARN.

A cuckoo clock used in Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's new Paramount picture, "Freight Prepaid," directed by James Cruze, had to be taken in close up for an insert. It had to be cuckooing 12 o'clock, and it required some time to adjust the lights and so on. The members of the company sat about waiting for this bit to be finished and presently all began mimicking the bird in the timepiece—"Cuck-oo!" After a while it was caught up all over the big Lasky stage and a regular army of cuckoo's seemed to be telling the world the time of day. "I'm getting cuckoo myself!" declared Roscoe finally. "All on account of that darned clock."

NOT GOOD HUBBY PICKERS.

When two doting old men take it upon themselves to select a husband for a pretty and capricious young lady without her enthusiastic approval, they are destined to run into a real snag, as demonstrated by Constance Talmadge in her picture, "Lessons in Love," which has been booked for there days at the DeLuxe Theater, beginning today. "Lessons in Love" is an adaptation of Douglas Murray's successful play, "The Man from Toronto." It was directed by Chet Withey. Kenneth Harlan is Constance Talmadge's leading man.

Gilbert Parker Story Shown at California.

"A Wise Fool," George Melford's picturization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master," will have its first local showing at the California, beginning today.

That Sir Gilbert Parker's books lend themselves readily to screen production has already been exemplified by the success of "Behold My Wife," also produced by Melford from the author's novel, "The Translation of a Savage."

"A Wise Fool" is a dramatic and exciting study of the events in the life of Jean Jacques Barbille, an egotist, who, by his cheap philosophy, nearly destroys his career, and of Carmen, his wife, born in Spain, who does not fit into the life of Quebec.

Some of the incidents in the picture are sensational, and some extremely touching, and the humor is provided by the father of Carmen, and the temperamental villagers.

It is a film drama of pathos, humor and humanity. It has all the compactness of a play, with a vivid emphasis which only the screen can give, and it is a veritable reflection of the life of Quebec and its people.

James Kirkwood has the leading role of the philosophical, and much beloved, though highly egotistical "important personage" of the little parish of St. Saviour's, in Quebec. It is Jean's false philosophy that gets him into trouble, and his true philosophy that saves him in the end.

A supporting cast of fine players, including Alice Hollister, Ann Forrest, Fred Huntly, Charles Ogle, Harry Duffield, Alan Hale, Truly Shattuck and Lillian Leighton, appear in the picture with Mr. Kirkwood.

Carli D. Elinor has arranged a tuneful catchy musical score for this feature, and will also offer Thomas's "Raymond" as his overture. A special stage feature called "A Whirlwind of Life and Color," introduces a number of clever dancers and performers, among them Faye Parrish, a little beauty, who won a big movie contest, and is to be featured in King Vidor's next big production.

Ota Gygi,

Violin soloist at Grauman popular concert.

GYGI SOLOIST AT GRAUMAN'S.

Ota Gygi, violinist, will render the Concerto in D Minor, by Wieniawski, at the Grauman concert this morning. This beautiful number is in three parts, Allegro Moderato, Romance and A la Zingara. The orchestral program, as arranged by Mischa Guterson, will include Prelude, Opus 28, No. 4 (Chopin;) "Sleeping Beauty" waltz (Tschaikowsky;) Melodie (Rachmaninoff;) "Cosachock" (Glinka;) the Introduction to The Nutcracker Suite (Tschaikowsky,) and Moussorgsky selections.

FROM RADIATOR TO POND.

Katharine Lewis, Eugenie Forde and Ward Caulfield have been added to the cast of the new picture which Al Christie has just started featuring Dorothy Devore, with Earl Rodney. The picture opens with Miss Devore sitting on a radiator in a New York apartment in the winter time, and concludes with Rodney fishing her out of a lily pond in California.

"TOO MUCH SPEED" FLASHED AT GARRICK.

Wallace Reid, race driver and athelete, that ever popular Paramount star, puts over another victory in "Too Much Speed," opening at the Garrick today.

In his latest auto-racing comedy he is as full of pep and nerve as a regular speed demon should be. The Duesenberg racer that he drives in "Too Much Speed" has probably won more victories than any other car in existence during the short time it has been in the field. It carried away the first prize at the opening of the Speedway at Beverly Hills, Feb. 20, 1920, making a total of 250 miles without a stop, averaging 103 4-5 miles per hour. With Wallie at the wheel, in filming "Too Much Speed," the old bus proved that it could still do better than 100 per without much trouble.

Besides Reid's splendid work, Theodore Roberts opens the cutout and steps on her for a neck-and-neck down the home stretch for high-sped comedy team work. With the inevitable cigar, the grand old man makes 'em sit up and take notice as he never did before.

Agnes Ayers, playing the female lead, hits the ball every minute.

Another feature of the picture is the notable gathering consisting of Cecil B. De Mille, Jesse Lasky, Sid Grauman, Betty Compson and Gloria Swanson all of whom are seen filling a box at the track-side watching the kings of the race track, Roscoe Sarles, Jimmie Murphy, Eddie Hofferman, Harry Hartz, Ira Vale and Al Soules, make "Too Much Speed."

IRREPRESSIBLE EVA.

Famous Daughter of the Tanguays at New Pantages.

Eva Tanguay—greatest of eccentric commediennes—will be personally presented as the headline attraction at the New Pantages for the coming week. Miss Tanguay is the premiere attraction offered on the Pantages circuit, and on her westward trip her supremacy has been recognized by record-breaking business at every theater on the circuit.

Headliners come and headliners go—but Eva Tanguay continues to reign as Queen of the Fraternity.

"Cyclonic" Eva Tanguay is one of the enigmas of the stage—the greatest attraction in vaudeville. Her name alone seems sufficient to fill to capacity any theater where she appears, but no critic analyst or psychologist has been able to adequately explain her hold upon the public. Her voice is not wonderful for any great artistic quality. Her face is not surpassingly beautiful, nor do her graces conform to the classic lines of the ideal type. With sheer magnetic personality and human sympathy in all that she does and says, Miss Tanguay holds her audience with a power possessed by few and envied by all who make the stage their profession.

Her repertoire for the coming week includes her famous songs "Hello, Eva," "I'll Get Famous Yet," "Sambo," "She Gets Away With Murder," and "I Don't Care." Her wardrobe—always magnificent—is more dazzling than ever.

Supporting Miss Tanguay will be shown a six-feature program of vaudeville.

The film feature will be Owen Moore's latest comedy, "A Divorce of Convenience," in which he appears with his recently acquired bride. The picture concludes with a prophetic scene showing Owen Moore and Kathryn Perry setting off on their honeymoon.

CONNIE AS COUNTRY GIRL.

Kenneth Harlan will be Constance Talmadge's leading man, and John Emerson will personally direct Connie's newest picture, "Good For Nothing," an original John Emerson-Anita Loos story. Others in the cast are Frank Lalor, George Fawcett, Nita Naldi, Theresa Maxwell Conover and Thomas Carr. "Good For Nothing" deals with a small-town girl who runs away to New York, and, instead of experiencing the proverbial bitter struggle, has the time of her life.

SUPPLY HUMOR TIDBITS.

Theodore Roberts and T. Roy Barnes are supplying a large amount of humorous action in Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, "Exit the Vamp," by Clara Beranger. Mr. Roberts as a crochety invalid in a wheel chair gives an example of the fine art of grumbling, while T. Roy Barnes counters him with sarcastic comment. Fontaine LaRue as the vamp and Ethel Clayton as the wife supply the drama and the charm of the story.

In Tierra del Fuego news is conveyed and conversation carried on between the different tribes inhabiting the islands by means of fires on the high peaks of the mountains. The natives are always on the lookout for these fires, and know just what they are intended to mean.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY

NEW YORK, July 30.—Over in Europe there appears a mild sort of competition for new principal singers between the respective managements of New York's Metropolitan Opera Company and that of the Chicago Opera Association. Mr. Giulio Gatti-Casazza vs. Miss Mary Garden—and may the cleverer one win. Of course, the object of each impresario is to secure only a reasonable number of new singers, and perhaps two or three opera novelties. Such is about the sum total of the possible accomplishment. There is no excess supply either of great singers or even near-great operas. The latter seem not to be manufactured any more. Composers sit down with pens in hand, run their fingers through long hair (unless they happen to have not enough hair to engage musical digits) and proceed to record fragments of operatic masterpieces. It is perhaps well that this practice so frequently prevails, otherwise the poor critics would raise a complaint at being deprived of one of their favorite indoor sports of finding fault with the composers for "borrowing."

Miss Garden has just signed contracts with an American contralto, Miss Eleanor Reynolds, who is said to be a remarkable singer. We confess to having heard very little about Miss Reynolds's accomplishments. Perhaps that is a good sign; most singers we hear as being exceptional turn out oftener than not to be exceptionally bad. So Miss Reynolds may come along and win us with her voice, at the same time putting a trifle more conspicuously upon the world's musical map the United States of America.

Miss Garden also has engaged a tenor named Tini Pattiera, a Dalmatian, said to be one of the most engaging in appearance of any tenor who has visited this country. Pattiera will make his debut as Rhadames in "Aida" in Chicago's Auditorium Theater along in November.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan has annexed for German operas the Berlin star, Josef Mann. This tenor has a big reputation, which will be helped or modified according to his accomplishments here next season.

OUR MUSIC CONSERVATORIES.

How many people, I wonder, have paused long enough to take into account the significance reflected by the growth in attendance at the music conservatories of this country, their improved quality and the constructive work they are doing. I do not mean, in this matter, to omit the equally important achievements of the music departments of the universities, colleges and private schools, nor of the capable private teachers of music. All are exerting a strong influence upon our national life, and it is time we took proper notice of the fact.

We have had music conservatories and private teachers for many years, but it is only within comparatively recent years that they have become powerful enough to point out to large numbers of young students the futility of any one's preparing, for a professional career who had not exceptional chances of succeeding.

I cannot commend too strongly the attitude of musical educators and educational institutions in emphasizing the value which comes to our young people in studying music for the sake of the benefits and culture it brings. It is not imperative to have a professional career in order to justify the study of singing, piano, violin or some other musical instrument . . . or composition. The more music we know and the more we know about it, the better we become as a nation.

Within the past few weeks thousands of graduates have been sent to their respective homes by the conservatories of music, and the private educators.

These young people will not follow music, even as an avocation. But their proficiency in whatever branch or branches they studied will be reflected in the communities where they live.

SUMMERTIME OPERA POPULAR.

Summertime opera is taking hold of the American people. I have recently received reports from correspondents residing in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis, and it is evident that the residents of these cities are indeed fortunate.

Ravinia Park has the most pretentious organization. Quite a number of the Metropolitan opera birds are caroling for goodly sums of money, and the performances are admirable.

This season's Ravinia performances have attracted good-sized audiences, and the critical opinion gives them a high percentage of artistic accomplishment. Geraldine Farrar thought enough of Ravinia's first "La Navarraise" to make the journey there from New York for the purpose of observing the presentation, and listening to it. Miss Farrar is to sing the leading soprano role in the Metropolitan's presentation of the Massenet opera this coming season, and she found her 2000-mile journey worth the time and expense.

Cincinnati is making an excellent impression with its performances at the Zoological Gardens, where Mr. Ralph Lyford, formerly at the Boston opera, is director.

The Cincinnati effort is along the same lines as Ravinia's, by which I mean that the organization is giving serious opera. St. Louis is confining its efforts—for the present, at any rate—to light opera. And the public is storming Forest Park where the natural setting for the performances is beautiful.

I expect in the course of a few years to be able to write of from twelve to twenty such enterprises throughout the country, for the movement is on, and once a movement in the United States takes root the progress is pretty sure to be rapid.

It is an excellent plan, for many reasons, and one of them is that it gives the young men and women singers of serious aspirations chances to appear publicly and secure some of the routine they so much need.

SOUTH AMERICAN OPERA.

Down in South America there is now being given some fine opera. The last news which reaches me has to do with the rivalry between those two big sopranos . . . Miss Rosa Raisa and Miss Claudia Muzio. They are singing with all the wealth of their dramatic soprano voices, with the South American public growing more and more enthusiastic, and insisting on more sound.

That is the trouble with having to appear before the people of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and other cities of the land to the far south. They like the long held high note, and the bigger the racket the more applause it brings forth.

We know that shouting in South America was largely responsible for the artistic lapses of Hipolito Lazaro, one of the best natural lyric tenors we remember having heard. But Lazaro came to this country with the modest advance heralding of being the greatest tenor in the world. Having a fair opinion of a tenor named Enrico Caruso, we sat back and waited to see what Lazaro should do. He disclosed a beautiful voice, badly used; and worse, he had one of the faults people in this country cannot endure . . . a tremolo.

Other South American favorites who have flivvered here owe their inability to get on to this habit of oversinging. Gabriella Besanzoni has not gone as far as she might, and there are others who have had South American experiences who have not been bettered artistically.

One of those who have come forth unscathed is Charles Hackett, the American tenor, who is singing at Ravinia Park this summer, and another is Tito Schipa.

We hope that the duel between the Misses Muzio and Raisa will not result in harming either one of these singers. Each has a beautiful voice, and both are needed in this country.

"GOLDEN GIFT" STARTS SWICKARD IN CAST.

Maxwell Karger has started production of "The Golden Gift," new Metro picture, starring Alice Lake. The story revolves about a young girl who, possessing a remarkable voice—"the golden gift"—suddenly loses the use of her vocal chords. As a result she finds herself a dancer, seeking a livelihood in a Mexican cafe. Her struggles to attain success and the ultimate realization of her hopes are pictured in a fascinating tale.

Josef Swickard, who, by his characterization of the role of Marcelo Desnoyers in Rex Ingram's production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," established himself as one of the most finished actors of the silent drama, has signed for an important part in support of Alice Lake. John Bowers is playing the male lead.

CARRY SUNBURN AS LOCATION SOUVENIR.

After a week on location under the blazing sun on the Hollywood hills, Ferdinand Earle and his entire "Rubaiyat" company returned to the studio covered with sunburn. Kathleen Key, the little leading lady, had a zebra effect on her arms from the multinudinous bracelets she wore. Frederick Warde was the least burnt, as he had taken precautions to don a straw hat when not actually in scenes.

The sunburnt victims were astonished to find after a day's work under the mercury vapor lights in the studio, that their sunburn was greatly alleviated.

This parallels experiments in the Broad-street Hospital in New York in which sunburn is healed by the action of ultra violet rays, which approximate sunlight.

AIREDALE MASCOT STAYS.

Peter, the Pilgrim, the big Airedale dog that adopted the "Pilgrimage Play" actors at El Camino Real Theater, has received many calls during the past week by people whose own dogs have been lost and who hoped that Peter would prove to be theirs. No rightful owner has arrived to claim him as yet, however, and he continues to regard the company as his own family, and to hold all the honors as mascot and chief pet of the cast.

MUSICAL.

ENSEMBLE BUSY HERE.

MAY GIVE CONCERT PRIOR TO DEPARTURE

Devotees of the musical art may have an early opportunity of hearing the Chamber Music Society of San Francisco in concert before this organization, which has been summering at Manhattan Beach, leaves for the north. Arrangements having this in view are to be made shortly, and, if opportune, it is probable that programs will be given in September.

The chamber music society is composed of Louis Persinger first violinist; Louis Ford, second violinist; Nathan Firestone, viola, and Walter Ferner, 'cellist. Each summer the members have gone to a different locality to rehearse and this year they selected Manhattan Beach. They are to remain there until October 1, and then will go north to resume their season.

Special programs are to be rendered by them during the year with Harold Bauer, Myra Hess, the London String Quartet, E. Robert Schmitz, the pianist; May Mukle, the 'cellist, and Arthur Rubinstein. With Mr. Smitz the ensemble will play the piano quintet by Florent Schmitt.

In addition to the members of the quartet, Elias Hecht, flutist, is associated with the ensemble musically and in the capacity of business manager.

Tandler Honored.

Quite a distinct honor has been conferred on Adolf Tandler, formerly director of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, who is at present traveling in Europe.

Knowing of Mr. Tandler's presence the directors of the Mozart Festival in Salzburg invited him to conduct one of the orchestral concerts, according to word received by members of his family here. The orchestra was the Vienna Philharmonic. The invitation was extended by the president of the Mozarteum and the Mayor of Salzburg.

Mr. Tandler left May 1 for Europe. He has attended a number of important musical affairs, chief among which was a music festival in Zurich. At this he met Pierne, Charpentier, Sir Henry Wood and other noted composers. He was the house guest of Sir Henry Wood.

Have Star Soloists.

The soloists of the Philharmonic Orchestra promise to attract more than usual interest this season. Some of the most prominent musical artists are being engaged.

Already scheduled to appear are John McCormack, the tenor; Florence Macbeth, the soprano; Harold Bauer, the pianist; Arthur Hackett, tenor, and Kathleen Parlow, the violinist.

Mr. Gygi, who has toured the country several times on both concert and Orpheum circuits, is a favorite of Chicago and New York musical circles. He will render the Concerto in D Minor, by Wieniawski.

The names of Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Glinka and others are ever sufficient promise of beautiful music, and are included on the orchestra program—"Prelude," Opus 28, No. 4," (Chopin;) "Sleeping Beauty" waltz, Tschaikowsky;) Introduction to the "Nut Cracker" suite, (Tschaikowsky;) "Melodie," (Rachmaninoff;) "Cosachock," (Glinka;) and Moussorgsky selections.

"SLPPY McGEE" CAST HERE FOR FINALS.

Headed by Director Wesley Ruggles, members of the Morosco cast who have been in the South the last seven weeks filming "Slippy McGee," called "Home James," arrived in Los Angeles last night to finish several interior scenes at the Mayer studio.

The final week in Natchez was the busiest of all for the players for in addition to the hustle to complete the location "shots" there were numerous social farewell engagements including dances, dinners and lawn parties. Each of the Morosco players declare that it was the most wonderful location trip they ever had.

Twenty-five players and technical men accompanied Director Ruggles home, including Wheeler Oakman, Colleen Moore, Pat O'Malley, Sam DeGrasse, Alfred Allen, Miss Edith Yorke, Charles Force and Joe Sawayl. Those of the cast who had already returned are Edwin Stevens, Lloyd Whitlock, Nellie Peck Saunders, Robert Dunbar and Charles E. Evans.

Meantime, in New York, General Manager George R. Bentel has been conferring with Oliver Morosco and his associates on the third and fourth productions which will be started here soon after Bentel's return. With the "Half Breed" film already delivered, Director Ruggles expects to have "Slippy McGee" in its final cutting stage in three weeks.

MIDDLE-CLASS COMEDY.

"Keeping Up with Lizzie" Full of Laughs at Clune's.

Irving Bacheller's novel, "Keeping Up with Lizzie," has been photodramatized and is to be the attraction at Clune's Broadway for the week beginning today, with Enid Bennett in one of her favorite comedy roles.

Despite its titles, Bacheller's comedy is not a story of a flivver race. Much has been written about the country girl who goes off to college and returns to her small-town environment a totally different person, but Bacheller treats it from a comedy angle and uncovers a mine of wholesome fun in his story of the grocer's daughter who made the town sit up and take notice.

The novel was one of the really humorous best sellers of its years, and Lloyd Ingraham, who directed its screen version, is said to have extracted every bit of fun from its ingenious situations.

Enid Bennett's talents as a comedienne find wide scope in the part of Lizzie. Despite the fact that Miss Bennett is to portray a grocer's daughter, the situations of the play provide her with opportunity to wear examples of her wardrobe of beautiful clothes.

A cast of well knowns supports the star. Edward Hearne has the leading role, and Otis Harlan, dean of American stage comedians, is the chief funmaker. Others in the cast are Harry Todd, J. Landers Stevens, Lila Leslie, Victory Bateman and Lottie Williams.

Will M. Ritchey, production manager for the Rockett company, adapted the story for the screen.

HERE'S CUCKOO YARN.

A cuckoo clock used in Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's new Paramount picture, "Freight Prepaid," directed by James Cruze, had to be taken in close up for an insert. It had to be cuckooing 12 o'clock, and it required some time to adjust the lights and so on. The members of the company sat about waiting for this bit to be finished and presently all began mimicking the bird in the timepiece—"Cuck-oo!" After a while it was caught up all over the big Lasky stage and a regular army of cuckoo's seemed to be telling the world the time of day. "I'm getting cuckoo myself!" declared Roscoe finally. "All on account of that darned clock."

NOT GOOD HUBBY PICKERS.

When two doting old men take it upon themselves to select a husband for a pretty and capricious young lady without her enthusiastic approval, they are destined to run into a real snag, as demonstrated by Constance Talmadge in her picture, "Lessons in Love," which has been booked for there days at the DeLuxe Theater, beginning today. "Lessons in Love" is an adaptation of Douglas Murray's successful play, "The Man from Toronto." It was directed by Chet Withey. Kenneth Harlan is Constance Talmadge's leading man.

Gilbert Parker Story Shown at California.

"A Wise Fool," George Melford's picturization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master," will have its first local showing at the California, beginning today.

That Sir Gilbert Parker's books lend themselves readily to screen production has already been exemplified by the success of "Behold My Wife," also produced by Melford from the author's novel, "The Translation of a Savage."

"A Wise Fool" is a dramatic and exciting study of the events in the life of Jean Jacques Barbille, an egotist, who, by his cheap philosophy, nearly destroys his career, and of Carmen, his wife, born in Spain, who does not fit into the life of Quebec.

Some of the incidents in the picture are sensational, and some extremely touching, and the humor is provided by the father of Carmen, and the temperamental villagers.

It is a film drama of pathos, humor and humanity. It has all the compactness of a play, with a vivid emphasis which only the screen can give, and it is a veritable reflection of the life of Quebec and its people.

James Kirkwood has the leading role of the philosophical, and much beloved, though highly egotistical "important personage" of the little parish of St. Saviour's, in Quebec. It is Jean's false philosophy that gets him into trouble, and his true philosophy that saves him in the end.

A supporting cast of fine players, including Alice Hollister, Ann Forrest, Fred Huntly, Charles Ogle, Harry Duffield, Alan Hale, Truly Shattuck and Lillian Leighton, appear in the picture with Mr. Kirkwood.

Carli D. Elinor has arranged a tuneful catchy musical score for this feature, and will also offer Thomas's "Raymond" as his overture. A special stage feature called "A Whirlwind of Life and Color," introduces a number of clever dancers and performers, among them Faye Parrish, a little beauty, who won a big movie contest, and is to be featured in King Vidor's next big production.

Ota Gygi,

Violin soloist at Grauman popular concert.

GYGI SOLOIST AT GRAUMAN'S.

Ota Gygi, violinist, will render the Concerto in D Minor, by Wieniawski, at the Grauman concert this morning. This beautiful number is in three parts, Allegro Moderato, Romance and A la Zingara. The orchestral program, as arranged by Mischa Guterson, will include Prelude, Opus 28, No. 4 (Chopin;) "Sleeping Beauty" waltz (Tschaikowsky;) Melodie (Rachmaninoff;) "Cosachock" (Glinka;) the Introduction to The Nutcracker Suite (Tschaikowsky,) and Moussorgsky selections.

FROM RADIATOR TO POND.

Katharine Lewis, Eugenie Forde and Ward Caulfield have been added to the cast of the new picture which Al Christie has just started featuring Dorothy Devore, with Earl Rodney. The picture opens with Miss Devore sitting on a radiator in a New York apartment in the winter time, and concludes with Rodney fishing her out of a lily pond in California.

"TOO MUCH SPEED" FLASHED AT GARRICK.

Wallace Reid, race driver and athelete, that ever popular Paramount star, puts over another victory in "Too Much Speed," opening at the Garrick today.

In his latest auto-racing comedy he is as full of pep and nerve as a regular speed demon should be. The Duesenberg racer that he drives in "Too Much Speed" has probably won more victories than any other car in existence during the short time it has been in the field. It carried away the first prize at the opening of the Speedway at Beverly Hills, Feb. 20, 1920, making a total of 250 miles without a stop, averaging 103 4-5 miles per hour. With Wallie at the wheel, in filming "Too Much Speed," the old bus proved that it could still do better than 100 per without much trouble.

Besides Reid's splendid work, Theodore Roberts opens the cutout and steps on her for a neck-and-neck down the home stretch for high-sped comedy team work. With the inevitable cigar, the grand old man makes 'em sit up and take notice as he never did before.

Agnes Ayers, playing the female lead, hits the ball every minute.

Another feature of the picture is the notable gathering consisting of Cecil B. De Mille, Jesse Lasky, Sid Grauman, Betty Compson and Gloria Swanson all of whom are seen filling a box at the track-side watching the kings of the race track, Roscoe Sarles, Jimmie Murphy, Eddie Hoffernan, Harry Hartz, Ira Vale and Al Soules, make "Too Much Speed."

IRREPRESSIBLE EVA.

Famous Daughter of the Tanguays at New Pantages.

Eva Tanguay—greatest of eccentric commediennes—will be personally presented as the headline attraction at the New Pantages for the coming week. Miss Tanguay is the premiere attraction offered on the Pantages circuit, and on her westward trip her supremacy has been recognized by record-breaking business at every theater on the circuit.

Headliners come and headliners go—but Eva Tanguay continues to reign as Queen of the Fraternity.

"Cyclonic" Eva Tanguay is one of the enigmas of the stage—the greatest attraction in vaudeville. Her name alone seems sufficient to fill to capacity any theater where she appears, but no critic analyst or psychologist has been able to adequately explain her hold upon the public. Her voice is not wonderful for any great artistic quality. Her face is not surpassingly beautiful, nor do her graces conform to the classic lines of the ideal type. With sheer magnetic personality and human sympathy in all that she does and says, Miss Tanguay holds her audience with a power possessed by few and envied by all who make the stage their profession.

Her repertoire for the coming week includes her famous songs "Hello, Eva," "I'll Get Famous Yet," "Sambo," "She Gets Away With Murder," and "I Don't Care." Her wardrobe—always magnificent—is more dazzling than ever.

Supporting Miss Tanguay will be shown a six-feature program of vaudeville.

The film feature will be Owen Moore's latest comedy, "A Divorce of Convenience," in which he appears with his recently acquired bride. The picture concludes with a prophetic scene showing Owen Moore and Kathryn Perry setting off on their honeymoon.

CONNIE AS COUNTRY GIRL.

Kenneth Harlan will be Constance Talmadge's leading man, and John Emerson will personally direct Connie's newest picture, "Good For Nothing," an original John Emerson-Anita Loos story. Others in the cast are Frank Lalor, George Fawcett, Nita Naldi, Theresa Maxwell Conover and Thomas Carr. "Good For Nothing" deals with a small-town girl who runs away to New York, and, instead of experiencing the proverbial bitter struggle, has the time of her life.

SUPPLY HUMOR TIDBITS.

Theodore Roberts and T. Roy Barnes are supplying a large amount of humorous action in Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, "Exit the Vamp," by Clara Beranger. Mr. Roberts as a crochety invalid in a wheel chair gives an example of the fine art of grumbling, while T. Roy Barnes counters him with sarcastic comment. Fontaine LaRue as the vamp and Ethel Clayton as the wife supply the drama and the charm of the story.

In Tierra del Fuego news is conveyed and conversation carried on between the different tribes inhabiting the islands by means of fires on the high peaks of the mountains. The natives are always on the lookout for these fires, and know just what they are intended to mean.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY

NEW YORK, July 30.—Over in Europe there appears a mild sort of competition for new principal singers between the respective managements of New York's Metropolitan Opera Company and that of the Chicago Opera Association. Mr. Giulio Gatti-Casazza vs. Miss Mary Garden—and may the cleverer one win. Of course, the object of each impresario is to secure only a reasonable number of new singers, and perhaps two or three opera novelties. Such is about the sum total of the possible accomplishment. There is no excess supply either of great singers or even near-great operas. The latter seem not to be manufactured any more. Composers sit down with pens in hand, run their fingers through long hair (unless they happen to have not enough hair to engage musical digits) and proceed to record fragments of operatic masterpieces. It is perhaps well that this practice so frequently prevails, otherwise the poor critics would raise a complaint at being deprived of one of their favorite indoor sports of finding fault with the composers for "borrowing."

Miss Garden has just signed contracts with an American contralto, Miss Eleanor Reynolds, who is said to be a remarkable singer. We confess to having heard very little about Miss Reynolds's accomplishments. Perhaps that is a good sign; most singers we hear as being exceptional turn out oftener than not to be exceptionally bad. So Miss Reynolds may come along and win us with her voice, at the same time putting a trifle more conspicuously upon the world's musical map the United States of America.

Miss Garden also has engaged a tenor named Tini Pattiera, a Dalmatian, said to be one of the most engaging in appearance of any tenor who has visited this country. Pattiera will make his debut as Rhadames in "Aida" in Chicago's Auditorium Theater along in November.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan has annexed for German operas the Berlin star, Josef Mann. This tenor has a big reputation, which will be helped or modified according to his accomplishments here next season.

OUR MUSIC CONSERVATORIES.

How many people, I wonder, have paused long enough to take into account the significance reflected by the growth in attendance at the music conversatories of this country, their improved quality and the constructive work they are doing. I do not mean, in this matter, to omit the equally important achievements of the music departments of the universities, colleges and private schools, nor of the capable private teachers of music. All are exerting a strong influence upon our national life, and it is time we took proper notice of the fact.

We have had music conservatories and private teachers for many years, but it is only within comparatively recent years that they have become powerful enough to point out to large numbers of young students the futility of any one's preparing, for a professional career who had not exceptional chances of succeeding.

I cannot commend too strongly the attitude of musical educators and educational institutions in emphasizing the value which comes to our young people in studying music for the sake of the benefits and culture it brings. It is not imperative to have a professional career in order to justify the study of singing, piano, violin or some other musical instrument. . . . or composition. The more music we know and the more we know about it, the better we become as a nation.

Within the past few weeks thousands of graduates have been sent to their respective homes by the conservatories of music, and the private educators.

These young people will not follow music, even as an avocation. But their proficiency in whatever branch or branches they studied will be reflected in the communities where they live.

SUMMERTIME OPERA POPULAR.

Summertime opera is taking hold of the American people. I have recently received reports from correspondents residing in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis, and it is evident that the residents of these cities are indeed fortunate.

Ravinia Park has the most pretentious organization. Quite a number of the Metropolitan opera birds are caroling for goodly sums of money, and the performances are admirable.

This season's Ravinia performances have attracted good-sized audiences, and the critical opinion gives them a high percentage of artistic accomplishment. Geraldine Farrar thought enough of Ravinia's first "La Navarraise" to make the journey there from New York for the purpose of observing the presentation, and listening to it. Miss Farrar is to sing the leading soprano role in the Metropolitan's presentation of the Massenet opera this coming season, and she found her 2000-mile journey worth the time and expense.

Cincinnati is making an excellent impression with its performances at the Zoological Gardens, where Mr. Ralph Lyford, formerly at the Boston opera, is director.

The Cincinnati effort is along the same lines as Ravinia's, by which I mean that the organization is giving serious opera. St. Louis is confining its efforts—for the present, at any rate—to light opera. And the public is storming Forest Park where the natural setting for the performances is beautiful.

I expect in the course of a few years to be able to write of from twelve to twenty such enterprises throughout the country, for the movement is on, and once a movement in the United States takes root the progress is pretty sure to be rapid.

It is an excellent plan, for many reasons, and one of them is that it gives the young men and women singers of serious aspirations chances to appear publicly and secure some of the routine they so much need.

SOUTH AMERICAN OPERA.

Down in South America there is now being given some fine opera. The last news which reaches me has to do with the rivalry between those two big sopranos . . . Miss Rosa Raisa and Miss Claudia Muzio. They are singing with all the wealth of their dramatic soprano voices, with the South American public growing more and more enthusiastic, and insisting on more sound.

That is the trouble with having to appear before the people of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and other cities of the land to the far south. They like the long held high note, and the bigger the racket the more applause it brings forth.

We know that shouting in South America was largely responsible for the artistic lapses of Hipolito Lazaro, one of the best natural lyric tenors we remember having heard. But Lazaro came to this country with the modest advance heralding of being the greatest tenor in the world. Having a fair opinion of a tenor named Enrico Caruso, we sat back and waited to see what Lazaro should do. He disclosed a beautiful voice, badly used; and worse, he had one of the faults people in this country cannot endure . . . a tremolo.

Other South American favorites who have flivvered here owe their inability to get on to this habit of oversinging. Gabriella Besanzoni has not gone as far as she might, and there are others who have had South American experiences who have not been bettered artistically.

One of those who have come forth unscathed is Charles Hackett, the American tenor, who is singing at Ravinia Park this summer, and another is Tito Schipa.

We hope that the duel between the Misses Muzio and Raisa will not result in harming either one of these singers. Each has a beautiful voice, and both are needed in this country.

"GOLDEN GIFT" STARTS SWICKARD IN CAST.

Maxwell Karger has started production of "The Golden Gift," new Metro picture, starring Alice Lake. The story revolves about a young girl who, possessing a remarkable voice—"the golden gift"—suddenly loses the use of her vocal chords. As a result she finds herself a dancer, seeking a livelihood in a Mexican cafe. Her struggles to attain success and the ultimate realization of her hopes are pictured in a fascinating tale.

Josef Swickard, who, by his characterization of the role of Marcelo Desnoyers in Rex Ingram's production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," established himself as one of the most finished actors of the silent drama, has signed for an important part in support of Alice Lake. John Bowers is playing the male lead.

CARRY SUNBURN AS LOCATION SOUVENIR.

After a week on location under the blazing sun on the Hollywood hills, Ferdinand Earle and his entire "Rubaiyat" company returned to the studio covered with sunburn. Kathleen Key, the little leading lady, had a zebra effect on her arms from the multinudinous bracelets she wore. Frederick Warde was the least burnt, as he had taken precautions to don a straw hat when not actually in scenes.

The sunburnt victims were astonished to find after a day's work under the mercury vapor lights in the studio, that their sunburn was greatly alleviated.

This parallels experiments in the Broad-street Hospital in New York in which sunburn is healed by the action of ultra violet rays, which approximate sunlight.

AIREDALE MASCOT STAYS.

Peter, the Pilgrim, the big Airedale dog that adopted the "Pilgrimage Play" actors at El Camino Real Theater, has received many calls during the past week by people whose own dogs have been lost and who hoped that Peter would prove to be theirs. No rightful owner has arrived to claim him as yet, however, and he continues to regard the company as his own family, and to hold all the honors as mascot and chief pet of the cast.

The Times Literary Page Books and Their Makers

By Thomas F. and Lillian C. Ford

KANSAS PRAIRIE IN FICTION.

In "Dust" Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius Give a Dramatic Study of Human Relations with a Mid-Western Farm as the Stage.

DUST. By Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius. Brentano's, New York.

The fertile soil of the Middle West is the inspiration for much of the outstanding fiction of the past year. "Main Street," Sinclair Lewis's novel of the Minnesota small town, which to him typifies all small towns, sweeps on in its remarkable career as a best seller; Henry Aikman in "Zell," by Henry Aikman, "Moon Calf," by Floyd Dell; "Poor White," by Sherwood Anderson, and Booth Tarkington's latest novel, "Alice Adams"—these are some of the novelists that have dug deep into the fertile soil of the West and unearthed there material teeming with life, made pregnant through man's struggle with nature, and significant because wholly American.

A novel of this class is "Dust," written by Mr. and Mrs. E. Haldeman-Julius, well known as radical writers. But nothing of radicalism appears in this first novel. It is a searching study of the human soul as affected by the hardships and the hard-won success that came to those who created rich farms out of the stifling yellow dust of the Kansas prairie.

The story tells how Jacob Wade, slowly dying of a lung wound received in the Civil War, made his way with his wife and children from Ohio in a prairie schooner, with the cow tied behind. He and his strong-willed, sharp-featured, hard-working wife endured every hardship, buoyed up by the determination to achieve independence through the conquest of the soil.

Martin, the sullen, self-centered son, grubbed and slaved and managed and at last, long after his parents were buried, found himself independent. Then, at the age of 34, he decided to build himself a house that should be a visible sign of his success, and to find a wife that would keep that house in order and do his bidding.

Unfortunately, chance threw in his way Rose Conroy, buxom and sweet-natured woman, who had succeeded her father as editor and proprietor of the Fallon newspaper. "Everything about Rose—every line, every tone of her coloring suggested warmth, generosity, bigness. She was as much above medium height for a woman as Martin for a man. About her temples the line of her bright golden-brown hair had an oddly pleasing irregularity. The rosy color in her cheeks brought out the rich creamy whiteness of her skin. Warm, gray-blue eyes were set far apart beneath a kind, broad forehead and her wide, generous mouth seemed made to smile."

But life with Martin gave her little cause to smile. His courtship was the concern of a day—he had no time to waste on foolery. Rose hesitated, but Martin was strong, bronzed, successful; the fine home he promised to build for her was enticing; she thought he must have long had a preference for her, whom he had known at school, and so she decided to marry him. Being generous and trusting, she was persuaded into marrying him before the new house was built. Here was where she made her first blunder. Once he had won his wife, Martin found it hard to spend so much money on the new house. He persuaded Rose to release him from his promise to build a two-storied house, with bath and conveniences.

A little dismayed, deeply disappointed, but trusting still, she consented. For she wanted above all else to please her husband, whom she found appallingly cold and indifferent to her.

Just as Hell is said to be paved with good intentions so Heaven and the insane asylum are filled with self-sacrificing women, whose spirit has been quelled and whose bodies have been worn out by hard-fisted males like Martin, who observed the Ten Commandments while driving a woman beyond her endurance.

The story is concerned not with the external events, the management of the farm, the increase of wealth, but with the inward struggle between Martin and Rose. To be sure it is the milking, the cooking, the washing and the caring for the hired men, the ceaseless drudgery that ground the life out of Rose and made her old before her time, but it was her inability to satisfy her husband, to win from him one word of love or appreciation that bruised her heart and rendered her life so utterly miserable.

It was Martin's hard, materialistic philosophy that warped his nature and undermined his humanity. That the authors make us understand throughout, and it is this penetration under the surface of things into their inward impulses and causes that gives the novel its distinction.

There is a fatalism, the conviction of the utter powerlessness of man in the face of circumstances, that colors the book and makes it more than a story. Such sincere work as this is not often found in a first novel, nor yet in a second or a tenth. Those who know the authors and their work are ascribing much of the peculiar merit of "Dust" to Mrs. Haldeman-Julius, which may or may not be giving the senior member of the firm full credit for his prowess in the realm of letters.

HISTORY OF PSYCHOLOGY.

Association psychology is a branch of the science which has been put to many practical uses, one of the most familiar being memory training. Prof. Howard C. Warren, in a book entitled "A History of the Association Psychology," covers the history of the origin and development of this theory from Aristotle down to modern times, and gives the results of hundreds of experiments. The book is one of the recent publications of Charles Scribner's Sons.

TAHITI RHYMED WITH NIGHTIE.

Carolyn Wells has twined a rather nice little limerick for "Life" roundabout the Century Company's hint that Tahiti of Frederick O'Brien's new book—"Mystic Isles of the South Seas"—is pronounced to rhyme with "nightie." She heads it: "Mystic Names of the Southe Seas."

"There was a young lady of Tahiti
Whose neighbors declared she was flahiti,
For they saw on her line
(If the Monday was fine)
An extremely diaphanous nahiti!"

GILBERT MURRAY'S BOOK.

Houghton Mifflin Company recently published "The Problem of Foreign Policy," by Gilbert Murray. Mr. Murray braves the illogical type of critics who believe that if you comment adversely on the conduct of affairs in Ireland you are ipso facto a Sinn Feiner, or that criticism of the Allies' peace settlement predicates that you are pro-German, pro-Bolshevist, or pro-something or other. He condemns without fear, and criticizes without favor. This small book has caused a storm of comment in England, and will undoubtedly be widely read and discussed in this country as well.

DR. WILLIAMS SAILS.

Dr. Blanche Colton Williams, chairman of the O. Henry Memorial Prize Committee, sailed for Europe recently. She has arranged, however, that the work of the committee shall be carried on during her absence and upon her return in September the selecting of the stories for the volume of O. Henry Memorial Stories for 1921 will be brought toward completion.

POEMS OF THE WEST.

"Bunch-Grass and Blue-Joint" is the title of a forthcoming book of poems of the West by Frank B. Linderman, author of "On a Passing Frontier" and the "Indian Why Stories." The poems are full of the color of the old, romantic West of the real cowboy and rancher. The book is announced for summer publication by Charles Scribner's Sons.

SAVE YOUR STROKES.

In "Golf Simplified" which Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published, Dave Hunter, the golf instructor of the Essex Country Club of West Orange, N. J., and one of the foremost authorities on the the game in America, tells how to reduce your score materially and save your stroke. He explains a new and simplified method of instruction whereby one idea corrects all the faults common to golfers.

Likes Oxford.

F. Scott Fitzgerald, author of "This Side of Paradise" (Scribner's) says in a letter to his publishers, "The most beautiful spot in the world is Oxford, without a doubt." He and Mrs. Fitzgerald are now in Italy after "a wonderful time in England and a rotten time in France," as he puts it. They intend to settle down in Italy for some months while the author begins work on a new novel.

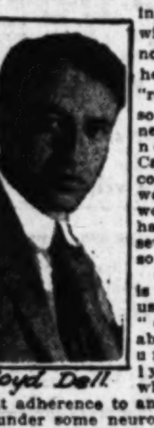
VISITING WRITER DEFINES REALISM.

Floyd Dell, Author of "Moon-Calf," Speaks to "Times" Readers.

BY FLOYD DTLL.



Floyd Dell

Some psychologist once remarked that you have only to listen to a word being repeated often enough, and it will cease to have any meaning for you—it will sound like nonsense. I have heard the word "realistic" used so often in connection with my novel, "Moon-Calf," that I have commenced to wonder what the word means. I have discovered several meanings, so far.

(1.) "Realistic" is sometimes used to mean "disagreeable." There are undoubtedly writers who, whether in defiant adherence to an ideal of truth, or under some neurotic compulsion, go into great detail concerning matters which most people would rather not read about. The ordinary reader is likely to find in such writings a morbid insistence on painful or disgusting subjects. I make no attempt to judge the writers of this school, but I do not share their predilections. I am not, at least, that kind of realist. It may be that I have unintentionally offended some sensitive readers—but they must have been very sensitive, and I did not do it on purpose. In every age there is a kind of social censorship, to which a writer must necessarily make his adjustment. One may be impatient of this censorship, but one must come to terms with it. We cannot write as the Elizabethans did, and still less as the Restoration dramatist did. We can, however, say all we have to say; we can tell the truth about life, in terms verbally inoffensive to the public of our generation. At the same time, our standards of what is permissible are not fixed; and just as a bathing costume which women may wear with perfect propriety on a California beach would cause a sensation and perhaps an arrest on some eastern beaches, so a book in which many readers may find no offense may seem outrageous to others. But an ordinary woman bather wants to swim, not to be stared at; and the ordinary novelist wants to tell a story, not to be considered sensational. And when he hears himself being called a realist, he hopes devoutly that this does not mean, as it sometimes appears to mean, that he has unintentionally offended somebody's notion of the proprieties!

(2.) Again, "realistic" is sometimes used as a synonym for "pessimistic." I have been called pessimistic many times, but chiefly, I think, by people who have not read anything I have writen. If pessimism is everything that is not a silly sentimental optimism, then, of course, I am a pessimist and glad of it. But a pessimist, I think, should be rightly defined as one who is hopeless about life, and who, when he writes about it, tries to prove how ugly, hateful, and impossible of improvement it is. There are such people, and there are such writers. They make me tired. They may be right in regarding this world as a vale of miseries; but that is not the way I personally feel about it. I regard the world as a very interesting place, even at its worst; I love life with an unphilosophic, unreasonable, romantic passion. I think I understand it— I may unblushingly admit—better than most people; and that is why I want to write about it. I think I can help people to understand their own lives better. I believe that knowledge is power, and that the more we understand life, the more happiness we can achieve. That's precisely the kind of pessimist I am. It is true, I don't believe in lying about life to make it seem better than it is; but I don't believe in trying to make it seem worse than it is, either. And it must be a sick soul indeed who cannot bear to hear about life as it is, who must have it prettified and romanticized! Such a person must think real life very terrible indeed—and such a person is, I think, the real pessimist.

By realistic, is sometimes meant an over-insistence upon commonplace detail. It all depends upon whether the detail serves a purpose. The writers of detective stories often describe a room in the utmost detail, bidding you remember that there is a chair here, a window there, a door somewhere else. These details are important, because the burglar enters by the windowa, stumbles over the chair, etc., and nobody accuses the writer of such yarns of undue insistence upon detail. But there is another use for detail. If I tell you that in a country district I visited the home of the lady schoolmarm, and saw on the wall a picture of "The Rock of Ages," that fact tells you something about the place, and presumably about the lady in question. If however, I tell you that on the opposite wall is a picture by Aubrey Beadrsley, you will commence to suspect that the schoolmarm is not a conventional schoolmarm, and you will not be surprised if I tell you that she secretly writes free verse and is yearning to go to Greenwich Village! Details of furniture and physical appearance can tell us a great deal about people, and where they perform this function they are not wasted. On the other hand, there are details which are meaningless, which merely clutter up the page, delay the story, exasperate the reader, and compel him to "skip" in order to "get to the story again." I am in the habit of skipping whenever I come to such meaningless descriptions, especially of landscape. "The sun was setting"—that is usually all I want to know. I can imagine the sunset for myself, and I don't want my story-teller to stop and try to paint a picture of a sunset. If I don't want long descriptions of beautiful things, still less do I want long descriptions of ugly things—unless they are ab-

CINEMA WRITER PROTESTS.

LOS ANGELES, July 13, 1921.

The Literary Editors of the Los Angeles Times:

While I regret that my novel, "Beauty," gave you such intense discomfort, I solace myself with the thought that far better authors than I have been far better abused by far better critics than you.

But I must protest against two of your comments. I seriously resent your attack on my alleged eroticism. I doubt if anyone ever wrote fiction in which erotic emotions play a smaller part than in my works. When in the course of certain stories certain characters encounter love experiences, I try to describe what happens, but never in an erotic spirit.

My whole effort is for unprejudiced observation and faithful description with a scientific analysis of motive and a historian's effort at proportion and perspective. I am very earnest after real truth, real decency and real honor, and you have no right to give the impression that I am a reckless retailer of smut. You owe yourself an apology as well as me.

It is my eagerness to describe life as it is that saves me from doing the horrible thing that you recommend—to punish villainy and reward virtue. You should quarrel with God, not with me, if life is not arranged as you think proper. It seems to me hideously immoral to write lies about the truth and to tell readers the idiotic fairy stories you refer to as "underlying verities." They are not verities and can only be made to appear so by overlying.

You refer, furthermore, to my novel as full of absurdly improbable incidents! I always document my work. There is not a single incident in it that has not happened or could not happen. The penniless cowboy's discovery of a cinnabar deposit worth $250,000 actually occurred as I described it; the incident of the pistol actually occurred, and while I thought I had invented the incident of the body in the ice, I had hardly written it when the Los Angeles papers carried a similar case in big headlines.

You say my painting of the Texan desert lacks reality, but I lived there for some time.

It is impossible to please everybody and I don't try to. You have the right to dislike my work and to say so, but it is vicious of you to hold me up in sensational headlines and yellow language as making an "effort in eroticism" and being "beyond the pale" for making vice beautiful and failing to reward virtue.

You use my name and the whole meaning of my long and laborious life as illiterately and inaccurately as you use the word "ilk" in your final slash at "Rupert Hughes and his ilk."

RUPERT HUGHES.

P.S.: I am sure you will be fair enough to publish this on the page where you pilloried me.

Mr. Hughes does not need to waste any regrets about "Beauty" having given us "intense discomfort." We neither said nor implied any such thing. The novel merely caused us to yawn and to wonder over its utter futility.

As to the irate author's doubts whether "anyone ever wrote fiction in which erotic emotions play a smaller part" than in his works, that is for the public to decide. The documents are available.

It was far from our intention to give the impression that Hr. Hughes is "a reckless retailer of smut." How he could have come to this conclusion after reading our review it is hard to say. We expressed the opinion that the novel is erotic. According to the dictionary "erotic" means amorous or amatory. Why does Mr. Hughes translate this as meaning smutty? Is it due to some quirk in his mind or nature? Are smut and love synonymous to him? Are we not justified in declaring, with all the grandiloquence we can muster, that Mr. Hughes owes himself as well as the reviewer an apology for using the quite ugly word "smut" to interpret our quite innocent use of the much more respectable word "eroticism?"

The dictionary defines the word "smut" as obscenity, which is a long way from eroticism.

We still think that what little momentum "Beauty" possesses is due to its erotic spirit. Larrack, its gimcrack hero, is merely the conventional cinema cowboy with the trappings until he jumps on the running board of Nancy Fleet's taxi. Here, possessed by an amorousness not unlike that of a cat on the back fence on a moonlight night, he reveals himself for what he is. Even at that, what he did is not half so offensive as is the way in which the author describes it. "He garnered her, flung her into his bosom, drew her round so that her face was turned to his, and kissed her full and fair." The mere fact that a man put his arm around a not-too-unwilling girl in a taxi would hardly shock even the prim reviewer of Mr. Hughes's classic novel, but the spirit of the encounter is not so easily excused.

The same spirit is found in many other passages of the book, notably in that one describing the dance. In fact, if anything could destroy the pleasure the average decent young man or woman derives from dancing it would be the reading of the interpretation of that art as given by the author of "Beauty" in chapter 10. Certainly, here is ammunition for the pastors that object to dancing, a class of men derided by our author. Mr. Hughes of course does not know this. If he did he would not argue as to the erotic spirit of the book. But may we suggest that the author is not the best judge of the spirit of his work?

But let us consider Mr. Hughes's eagerness to describe life as it is, and whither it leads him. Since no impartial and intelligent reader of the review that so displeased our distinguished author can find there any hint at a recommendation to punish villany and reward virtue, it is not necessary to discuss that point. Reading in his wrath, he evidently misunderstood what was said in tolerably plain English.

Mr. Hughes's logic, however, convinces himself. The verisimilitude of his painting of the Texas desert is proven, in his opinion, by the mere assertion that he lived there for some time. According to the literary standards implied, residence in a place is all that is necessary to insure its lifelike description in the pages of fiction.

As to our use of the word "ilk" in our "final slash," in which we referred to Mr. Hughes and his ilk, may we be allowed to explain that this is a word used by the Scotch to mean of the same name or clan, as "MacGregor of that ilk." Hence, by Mr. Hughes and his ilk we meant, and might better have said, and his clan or kind. However, the Century Dictionary recognizes this use of the word, making it "colloquial."

Those who have read "Beauty" must wonder at the author's sudden particularity as to a question of usage. Of the many other books we have read during the past twelvemonth, there is not one in which the English is as faulty as in "Beauty." The reader is often puzzled to know whether it is the illiterate hero of the story or the author himself who is so recklessly misusing the English language.

The following passages are selected, almost at random, to illustrate. More are not given, as Harper & Brothers, who hold the copyright to the book, might well object to having it quoted from at such great length.

"Mrs. Roantree always got mad first and afterward relapsed to courtesy." Page 8. And yet the author of this model sentence with the very colloquial use of "mad" sets himself up as a purist in the matter of language.

"He had never been able to negotiate it (his breakfast) in bed." Page 12.

"Still Larrick would never get over thinking of New Yorkesses in terms of Nancy Fleet." Page 17.

"First she sent a ransacking gaze into him and then she began on him." Page 19.

"Larrick . . . watching the transaction of remembered incidents." Page 25. He was looking at logs burning in a fireplace.

"Sleep followed by cold water and coffee and some well-needed food." Page 30.

"It is very hard to hate those that have taken a great deal of one's gifts." Page 31.

"And he could only wonder what he would do if he found them together—the girl he revered and desired and the man he had been more than a brother or a father to." In this instance the placing of the preposition at the end of the sentence is inexcusable. Page 31.

"She stood still in the loop of his arms and eyed him down as she spoke with more dignity than she had a right: 'Don't be a damneder fool than you have to.' "

They "both notoriously loathed each other."

"Larrick was glad he was Eastering with money instead of going West to make it." Why not be logical and say "Westering" instead of "going West?"

There are dozens more such gems for those who enjoy seeing the English language murdered. So sorry we used a good Scotch word colloquially. How it must have shocked this word garbler.

Since we have been singled out among reviewers as the target of Mr. Hughes's displeasure, it is but natural to ask how other critics have received "Beauty." Looking over the files of the papers and magazines that have a book section, we find but two reviews of this book. One is from the New York Times, of June 5. It is a well-known fact that this paper complacently takes what is set before it, seldom giving adverse criticism. But Louise Maunsell Field, who reviewed "Beauty," made an exception in this case. Of the book, which she treats in a light vein, she says in part:

"Larrick was extraordinarily attractive to women, though why the yawning reader, to whom he seems but an uncouth bore, finds it difficult to perceive. . . . Larrick's first attempt at embracing Clelia was not particularly successful, but one moonlight evening they went out together in a canoe, which presently ran aground beneath 'a vaulted arch of trees' in the most considerate manner. After some preliminary lovemaking on his part she pressed her lips to his with soft fire—moonfire, and when they returned at last to the house Norry seized Larrick by the shoulders, and, in a frenzy, shook him and snarled. These pleasant amusements were interrupted by warnings of a coming blizzard . . .

It is not only Clelia, alive or dead but always scantily clothed, whom Mr. Hughes describes at excessively great length. His accounts of meagerly clad women are as numerous as they are wearisome, and as wearisome as they are numerous. But although the book contains so many descriptions of physical charms, it does not contain one flesh-and-blood character, one human being who lives and whose fate is a matter of importance to the reader. Dissertations innumerable there are."

The other review that has come to our notice appeared in the Literary Review, a supplement of the New York Evening Post, of June 11. It begins thus:

"A reviewer of one of Mr. Hughes's novels of last year, in this newspaper, spoke of the author's 'dime novelty.'

"It is a good phrase and deserves to be repeated. The present book provides a suitable occasion. Ingenuity Mr. Hughes undoubtedly possesses, in even greater measure than the producers of dime novels, whose inventive powers were and are one of the marvels of this literate and literary age. To make up for the $1.90 which this volume costs over the price of the 10-cent work of fiction, Mr. Hughes piles on an extra amount of the improbable and impossible, stretches his story to 408 closely printed pages, and pads out his narrative with a tract upon, not for, the times. . . .

"Larrick, the cowboy, has saved the life of Frewin, wealthy and almost worthless son of a New York family, when the latter was rusticating in Texas. Larrick does this in approved dime-novel style—the upsetting of the desperado gunman's drink by the tenderfoot in the western saloon, the oath, the blue steel drawn, the hero interfering with calm bravery, etc.

. . . .

"The transition into a new civilization is annoyingly unconvincing in Mr. Hughes's hands. Within a few weeks, apparently, this cowboy, now in the garb of a New York clubman, is desperately involved (although Mr. Hughes apparently has different standards from the reviewer) in an affair with Nancy Fleet of the socially elect. His affections are just as inextricably and inexplicably entangled five minutes after he meets Clelia Blakeney, to whom he is devoted until her untimely end.

. . . .

"And only Mr. Hughes's ingenuity could make Larrick, back on the Texas wastes, uncover another lode of cinnabar and find riches again, before the story ends for Larrick and Nancy Fleet, in a finale which Mr Hughes borrows from many another story before him. Why on earth is Mr. Hughes obliged to clothe with what once was a good ability for writing so exasperatingly disappointing a skeleton of a novel? Not that Mr. Hughes would admit for a moment that his framework was inadequate. He seems to take a savage pleasure in the bluntness with which he tells the unexpected, the unbelievable, in his stark realism of the impossible, so to speak. No excuses, no explanations for him. The six reels flit on; if you don't believe such things could happen, just sit and watch the events described in frank detail.

"We have said that Mr. Hughes padded out his tale with a tract upon the times. It is a remarkable trick. Paragraph after paragraph, page after page, he turns out, often in rank newspaperese, upon the current events of last year, the morals and the dress of the day."

MYSTERY STORY.

THE MAN IN THE DARK. By Albert Payson Terhune. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

A mystery story placed in the West Virginia mountains, where moonshiners and night riders are as thick as are cinema actors in Hollywood. The hero is a sadly misunderstood man who has become embittered by the world's harsh treatment. It is the part of the heroine to save this man from all sorts of trouble and then to bring him back to that normalcy which is the order of the day. This Faith Landis does with no little grace, nicely escaping, by being just a bit mischievous, the character of Sunday-school heroine which she suggests now and then.

There are some real people in the book, despite its somewhat conventional leading characters, and there is a collie dog, Bruce, that is quite up to the other members of the canine world that Mr. Terhune has made live in his pages. By many readers the fight between Bruce and his counterpart will be voted the best part of a book that is as full of action and adventure as any sixteen-year-old boy could demand.

Those who like a tale of love and daring, through which masked men and other outlaws put up a losing fight with the upholders of law and order, will find "The Man in the Dark" thoroughly satisfactory.

A MALE MARGOT.

THE EDUCATION OF ERIC LANE. By Stephen McKenna. The George H. Doran Company, New York.

As a novelist of what might be termed the Margot set of London society, Stephen McKenna has won some little fame. His people are smart, independent, above all rules and decrees, sometimes clever and sometimes merely possessed of a quality best described as bravado.

The Lady Barbara, who undertook the education of the young and successful playwright, Eric Lane, used some rather strange methods in the course of her training. Some of these Eric found embarrassing. He was really quite perturbed over Barbara's dropping in uninvited at all hours of the day and night, as he was not sufficiently up-to-date to know that calling at a bachelor's apartment is quite de rigueur even in the case of a young and unchaperoned woman.

Lady Barbara is pictured as a spoiled and turbulent young woman, determined to have her own way. She is supposed to be fascinating, but that is a point that each reader must decide for himself. Some might go so far as to call her merely brazen.

At any rate she brought some unpleasant things about and succeeded in leaving Eric in the end a sadder if a wiser man, which is not always the case in a duel of the sexes.

The book is readable enough and clever enough, but it leaves the reader rather empty and a little puzzled in the end. Just a little sanity and self-control on the part of the very smart people Mr. McKenna creates would bring his plots tumbling down on their heads, as every incident related depends upon the whimsicality or abnormality of the characters involved for its possibility in time or place.

STORY OF ADVENTURE.

Brewer Corcoran's new novel, "The Princess Naida," a quick-moving tale of romance and adventure, is just published by The Page Company, Boston.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

HAIL, COLUMBIA! By W. L. George. Harper & Brothers.

Our compassionate European critics have repeatedly informed us that the sins against good taste which continuously beset the American are (1) that of asking visiting foreigners what they think of his country, and (2) an urgent inquiry as to their opinion of his womankind. If this accusation has verity then we are assuredly the most obtusely impatient of human beings. For we need only wait a few months after the traveler has taken leave of us—following a visit of several weeks—to be informed with engaging candor of absolutely all his opinions, impressions and conjectures concerning us, by way of the printed page.

Mr. W. L. George, however, tarried with us for six long months, time enough in all conscience to fathom the mental, moral and emotional reactions of a people so guilelessly desirous of being explained to themselves.

"Not to generalize, not to compare, and to accept things as they impress me." This is the triune vow by which Mr. George bound himself in advance. From the first two, his records more than once or twice fail; to the third he was doubtless true.

Americans, we are told, "are hypnotized by their own early history." Not indeed by the history of the early settlement of Virginia, but by that of New England. The author is doubtless right in claiming that he found reverence for New England even in Chicago and Oklahoma. From his experience with a few tuft-hunters in or about Boston he naively generalizes that the regard he found in various places for New England was due to the fact that its earliest settlers came from Old England, and were in some cases descendants of "county families," from whom they derived signet rings, old silver and other articles of "bigotry and virtue," brought to our shores by the self-exiled ancestors of their present owners. The fond exhibition of such relics is naturally flattering to the English visitor who "feels at home among heirs of an identical tradition." As the tourist travels west or south and still finds a special regard for New England he proceeds to record in his journal the supposed fact that the "Puritan tradition" and also the original Puritans' regard for their own national and genealogical ancestry still dominate the United States. As a matter of pure fact, not one American in a hundred thousand cares a rush for the Puritan as such; and as to the peculiar sanctity which Mr. George imagines we associate with them as pioneers, is he not aware that our American woods has always been full of this estimable class of persons? From Father Junipero Serra on the Pacific Coast to the self-sacrificing Free-Soilers, who, for the sake of their nonextension-of-slavery views, sang hymns and drove prairie-schooners across trackless prairies to Kansas, and the followers of Brigham Young, who trekked over leagues of desert, infested with hostile Indians, to Utah; and the latest band of Doboukhars to settle in North Dakota, we have always had emigrants for conscience's sake. Why then should we particularize? Not Plymouth Rock, but Concord Bridge, where embattled farmers fired the shot heard around the world" hallows New England for us. But this is not a tradition which visiting English men or women feel at home by sharing, and therefore the polite Bostonian displays his signet rings and old plate and discourses of the sacrifices of his ancestors for conscience sake.

Starting as he did, it was inevitable that Mr. George should have failed to discover us. But he found out a great many things about us that but for him we might never have known. For instance, he tells us that our women believe, or at least profess to believe, in "the divinity of sex." This agile phrase never before swam into the ken of the reviewer. But many and many a more or less faulty male would be delighted to have his wedded wife taught at least to believe in the divinity of the masculine sex. Will Mr. George oblige by giving the address of the spiritist, clairvoyant or other "New Thoughter" from whose repertoire he culled this remarkable, this truly illuminating, expression?

But let no man imagine that Mr. George spent a precious half-year solely in impressing his susceptible mind with the details of the purely imaginative objects of American idol-worship, nor yet in acquiring weird phrases in the homes and haunts of the devotees of [illegible] our real, as well as our [illegible] follies and faults and [illegible] as soundly as they [illegible] they are the [illegible] faults which have [illegible] in greed and [illegible] flunkeyism, so that [illegible] they are concerned [illegible] equally as well have [illegible] of the inhabitants of [illegible] Shanghai. But they are the common hum faults which have their roo in greed and selfishness and funkeyism, so that as far as they are concerned the book might equally as well have been writ of the inhabitants of Jerusalem or Shanghai. The only difference is that its writer believes that we can make or mar, sin, or do good actions, ener within a given time than any other people under heaven. If we really possess any distinctive qual it escaped him. He tried to understand us, for reasons of state, that is, in order that his nation might know how best to deal with us in preserving the peace of the world. His book is as entertaining and as vivid as one would naturally expect the production of so brilliant a writer to be. He tells us that in spite of opportunity he is too old and too set in his ways to "come live with us and be our love;" besides, we are living in a Tower of Babel which he fears will fall and crush us. If it should, the fault will not be in the Tower, nor in its architect, who long ago told Kipling: "And in the teeth of all the schools I shall save him at the last."

Transfers Only Issued at the Time Fare is Paid.

Street-Car Company Eliminates Financial Loss.

Passengers' Privileges Are Also Increased.

BY AZURIDE
Los Angeles Railway Company.

Have you heard the story of the man who went to heaven and when asked by St. Peter to move ahead, said: "Gimme a transfer?"

Well, that's neither here nor Hoboken, but just a habit that showed he was a street-car rider who followed the transfer rules almost as closely as a preacher with a building fund follows a stingy member of the congregation.

Under the old transfer system, the company lost about $1500 a day through abuse of free transfer privileges. Some persons riding extensively would travel all day on a single fare and a quart of transfers and even accumulate a reserve supply.

Car fares furnish the only money the company can procure for maintaining adequate service. Therefore, it is vital to the public that the losses be minimized.

The coupon transfer introduced May 1 has eliminated a large part of the loss and has increased transfer privileges. To accomplish these results it has been necessary to standardize the method of issuing and adhere to the rule that transfers are issued only at time fare is paid.

It is the only way the public and the company can know definitely that the transfers go to passengers entitled to them.

In these days when an affable stranger grabs you by the hand and insists that he is a half-cousin or three-fourths uncle, according to Einstein's theory of complex relativity, you naturally put your hand on your pocketbook before he has a chance to go further.

Maybe he will tell you how he helped fix the spring board at the old swimming hole and provided a shirt for the topsail of the old punt. But several hundred boys of different generations expended their engineering abilities on the famous diving board, so how is a man to know how many grains of salt to apply to these words.

Picture now the busy street-car conductor or safety car operator at 5:12 p.m. on any weekday. He has a real job watching that the nickels are placed in the fare box, issuing transfers, watching steps and attending to the hundred and one other things in his line of duty.

It is humanly impossible for him to make a mental note of every face and remember whether he received a cash fare, a full transfer, a coupon, a ticket, or was shown a pass or a police badge. Street-car riders use about fifty different forms of transportation.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

How the Other Half Lives.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

The magistrate who presides over a domestic relations court in New York has hit upon a novel way of dealing with wrong-stepping husbands. Instead of sentencing them to jail he sentences them to ten days at hard labor in their own kitchens, or three months of taking care of a teething baby, or six months of getting up and preparing the breakfast, and getting the family off to work and to school, or to some other form of household servitude in which the punishment can be made to fit the crime.

"If men had any idea of how never-ending a woman's work is, and of how nerve-wearing the ceaseless calls made upon her are, they would have more patience with their wives and treat them better. I am giving the husbands a chance to find out from actual experience how monotonous and dreary domestic drudgery is, and I expect it to work a reform in many cases," says the magistrate.

A Daniel. A Daniel, I say, a second Daniel come to judgment! Now if he will only push the good idea along by sentencing the shiftless, thriftless, nagging, whining wives to go out and labor at their husbands' jobs for a while, we shall have a reformation that will bring about a domestic millenium.

For there is no doubt that the old saying that "one-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives," is nowhere else so true as it is of the sexes. Men have no conception of the burdens women bear. Women do not dream of the crushing load, under which men stagger along. Each thinks that it is the sacrificial goat of the family, while the other has it easy, and out of this misunderstanding grows much of the discord that makes marriage so often a failure.

For husbands and wives would be drawn closer together in love and sympathy if they realized that they were fellow sufferers. It is only when one or the other imagines that he or she got the short end of the bargain, that he or she is filled with envy and bitterness and strife.

Every woman knows, for instance, that when, at the end of a day's work that has begun at 6 o'clock and finished at 9, she sinks into a chair, too weary even to think how tired she is, nothing rouses her to such fury as for her husband to say: "I don't see what you have to make you tired. I'd think myself pretty lucky if I didn't have anything to do but stay in a nice home, and do a little housework and look after my children."

And every man knows that nothing but being a perfect gentleman, and so incapable of raising his hand to strike a woman, no matter how much he would like to, keeps him from giving his wife a punch in the jaw when she says: "I don't see why you won't go out to the Smither's dance. I am sure if I had nothing to do except sit at a mahogany desk in a fine office all day I would be fresh as a daisy at night and glad to go around and get a little exercise and fresh air."

And there you are, with two people each thinking the other's occupation is a picnic, and their own job grinding work because neither has ever tried to shoulder the other's burden. Furthermore, it is perfectly logical that they should take this opposite point of view because they have always seen each other's lot from different angles.

Home means to the man a place of rest and relaxation, of good food, and cleanliness, and order—the most desirable and comfortable spot in the world in which to be, and he has no conception of the endless labor it takes to produce this result. He never stops to think of the hours it takes to prepare the dinner that is eaten in half an hour, of the weariness that has gone into the washing of dishes and clothes, and the sweeping of floors that are soiled and littered up again as soon as cleaned.

Nor can his wildest flight of fancy picture what a drain on the vitality is the care of even the most angel children with their incessant activities, their fights and quarrels, and wailings, and ceaseless call on mo-o-o-ther. He knows that a single Sunday afternoon alone with a 2-year-old kiddie wears him to a frazzle, but he labors under the illusion that a woman doesn't even weary of her babies, and that it is just fun for her to be on the jump with them all day and half the night.

And women have the same hallucination about a man's work being all beer and skittles because going downtown means a spree to them. It means the thrill of shopping, or being in crowds, a lunch, and perhaps a matinee or picture show, and they have a vague idea that a business man passes his time in a round of pleasure.

They know nothing of the wearing grind of the daily treadmill, where, sick or well, a man must toil on or lose his job. They never dream of the overbearing insolence of the man higher up, or the exasperation of employees who have no interest or loyalty in their work, of the heart-breaking, nerve-wearing anxiety of the man who sees his whole fortune trembling in the balance in some trade. They do not know that every dollar is bought with blood and sweat.

Business women, who have been in the thick of the fight themselves, know this, and that is why they make the best wives, and the most considerate wives in the world. They know what men have to endure, and they sympathize with them, but men have never had a chance to find out how hard is woman's lot, and that is why the average husband cannot make the proper allowance for his wife when she is nerve fagged and tearful, or cross.

Certainly men and women would pity each other more, and be more patient and gentler with each other if one-half knew how the other half lived.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Let 'Em Thunder.

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I want to add my voice to the chorus of approval to your editorial on "The Next War." Like so many others, I hope you will keep it up. A correspondent has suggested letting the pulpits "thunder." Well, if they only would, they might be doing a real service. Instead of which they worry about dogmas or devote their energies to trying to get some kind of blue-law enactment. Your editorial on the subject of "Blue Laws" and also the one in yesterday's Times on the subject of "Intolerance" are real treasures. There seems to be a continual state of war existing between narrow-minded bigotry on one side and extreme, iconoclastic, radicalism on the other; and we, who try to occupy a reasonable middle ground, will have to try to conserve our sanity, and do whatever we may to allay the heat and fury of the belligerents, and, if possible, bring them to their senses.

It has been stated publicly that the forces seeking to enact the "Blue Sunday laws" are to use the same machinery in bringing it about as was used by the Anti-Saloon League in securing national prohibition. But one wonders if they have no discrimination, and if they do not realize that the people of the nation came to realize that the American saloon was a nuisance and a menace to our free American institutions, whereas, on the other hand the very laws they are seeking to have enacted are themselves a menace to those same institutions, and the people will never support the enactment of such laws, as in the case of prohibition.

Gentlemen, you'd better conserve your energies and devote them to the palpable, crying evils instead of going so far afield hunting for issues to divide the forces of righteousness, and letting vice run riot and the sinister influences of suspicion and distrust continue to prepare for another armed conflict that would wreck civilization, or destroy the remnant of it.

J. R. YOUNG.

We Must Make Good.

PACIFIC GROVE, July 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Years ago a medal was struck for the winning crew in a well-known boat race with the legend, "They are able because they deem themselves able." If this international disarmament conference is to achieve success, a similar determination must rule in the souls of all the delegates, plenipotentiaries, or whatever they may be called.

Diplomacy of the old school, by ambassadors "sent abroad to lie for the good of their country," must be thrown to the winds, together with all international "pork-barrel politics." In place of national selfishness and arrogance, there must be international altruism and real regard for the Golden Rule, fully applied.

So full of promise is the occasion that it must not be permitted to become simply a higgling and haggling by rival militarists to retain the greates possible armies and navies for their particular nation. It is the day of all days for real peacemakers, who of late have been scorned and banned as "pacifists," though of old they were blessed as "Children of God."

Whatever else our repfesantatives may be they must be men determined to fully attain the object for which they are meeting. For them there must be "no such word as fail!"

Monroe scored a success for disarmament on our northern border 100 years ago; let Harding's administration achieve a success commensurate for the twentieth century, universal disarmament! Monroe characterized militarism as "dangerous to the peace and safety" of America; it has proved equally dangerous to the peace and safety of the world. Why not end it?

EDWARD BERWICK.

"Who Killed Jesus?"

VENTURA, July 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Refering to the question raised by Rabbi Myers as to who killed Jesus, the facts of history are plain. At the time of the great tragedy the Roman empire was a world-wide confederation of aristocracies for the perpetuation of human servitude.

The aristocracy of Rome had formed a coalition with those of its own class in the surrounding nations for the open and avowed purpose of exploiting the common people of all nations.

To that end great military campaigns were conducted into the outlying province from which the conquerors, returning with great pomp and pageantry, brought back the spoils of war, including always long trains of human captives.

The whole scheme of Roman government was based on slavery and exploitation. As Rome thus rose in luxury and power, two-thirds of her population was in chains. The then known world was a vast slave pen—millions of slaves toiling on the silver mines of the Athenians, in the vast brickfields of the Roman capital, in the gold mines of Egypt, in the galleys of the Mediterranean and the vineyards of Italy.

Meanwhile, their Roman masters, amid scenes of the most dazzling splendor, were revelling in idleness and ease. But ever, the skeleton which sat at the Roman feasts, was a hidden fear that this vast slave population might some day find its strength, and rising in revolt, strike back. This once occurred in the great revolt led by the noble Spartacus, which lasted two years and a little longer. It was finally suppressed; Spartacus was overcome and 6000 slaves among his followers were publicly crucified as a warning to others of their class.

Suddenly into the midst of such appalling world conditions, came the Carpenter of Nazareth, with a wonderful new vision of the redeemed race yet to be, and a great new gospel of justice equality and human brotherhood. He boldly championed the cause of the weak and oppressed and the eyes of the captives were turned to him with a new-born hope. Wherever he went the people followed in great numbers, and the social sea began to heave with a mighty unrest. But those who sat in the seats of power were not well pleased; for in this young Nazarene, with his consuming passion for humanity and his almost fierce opposition to oppression in all forms they saw a menace to the then existing order.

So, after the fashion of modern politics, when something is to be put over, they "got together" and decreed his death. The charge against him was, "He stirreth up the people"—not that his accusers cared for what might happen to the people, they only cared for what might happen to themselves when once the people had been properly stirred up.

The trial of Jesus was a travesty conducted behind "closed doors" at night, and before his many friends were aware as to what was transpiring and could rush to his defense, the world's greatest agitator was railroaded to his death. He died at the instigation of the ruling class of Rome, acting in connivance with a few Jewish officials who were dependent for place and help on Roman favor. He was put to death on the cross, which was the Roman mode of execution (the Jews stoned their convicted criminals to death,) and it was a Roman soldier, who, with his spear, delivered the coup de grace.

To charge the Jewish people with this most infamous crime of history is not only an injustice, but is subversive of the facts.

It was the Roman government that killed Jesus, and he was killed not because he went about meekly preaching a few beatitudes, but because he fearlessly attacked a system that was responsible for the miseries of the many and because his growing influence with the toiling masses spelled trouble for the Roman empire.

MAE GUTHRIE TONGIBR.

Stand by Council.

LOS ANGELES, July 26. — [To the Editor of The Times:] You published a series of letters several days ago, under your column entitled "Safety First," concerning a certain ordinance now before the Council, requiring speedometers. Letter No. 1 in substance says, "Why use a speedometer?" and then describes some patented article which is claimed to be better. Letter No. 2 says in substance a few days later, "Where can we find such an article as mentioned by the writer of the first letter and why doesn't the Council approve it and pass an ordinance requiring its use?" Those letters warrant a suspicion that they were written by some one connected with those financially interested in the patented article mentioned.

It seems to the writer that the Council is liable to sufficient criticism without urging them to legislate the use of some special patented device. That could not be done.

Let us give the Council credit every time it passes any reasonable measure designed to give us who walk the streets more safety. If the majority of drivers did not use speedometers, could it be said that conditions would not be worse than at present? To me there is no question that they would be worse and I am one of many who think the same. Let us have the ordinance, and furthermore, let the few who object yield to the common good.

HAMISH B. EDDIE.

Objects to Campers.

SAN FERNANDO, July 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have watched your paper for quite a while, hoping to see a protest, sent in by some one else beside myself, concerning the campers who are spoiling the entrance to Cahuenga Pass. Is there not a way in which those who wish to live in tents can be made to live further away from the thoroughfare? Garbage, tin cans and clothes hanging on the lines are not specially attractive to those traveling through the pass.

I hope this may be looked into by the proper authorities. I have heard many who travel through on their cars complain about it.

O. C. SAXTON.

Favors Prohibition.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] There are still a great many people craving for booze, but if they would read the government vital statistics they would learn that there are more people dying at middle-age, from organic diseases caused by drinking booze, than ever before in the history of the world.

The best authorities affirm that beer is more injurious than whisky. It causes stupidity and clumsiness. Christ made wine, but the wine he made was not fermented. The science of fermentation was discovered a thousand years after Christ by monks of Bavaria. They had a monopoly of that trade for centuries, according to German history.

Prohibition is God's blessing, and the world is progressive and not retrogressive. In spite of all the retrogressive elements in this world to hamper its progress, the world is getting better from day to day. "Thy kingdom come in earth" has not been spoken in vain.

F. A. NELSON.

Tujunga is Thriving.

TUJUNGA, July 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In recent issues of your paper, we notice that in reporting the result of a recent trial in Judge York's court, regarding Manzieta Park and its ownership, the location, of that park was placed as being in Sunland, Cal., which is an error. It is not now and never has been a park of Sunland. Evidently your people have never heard of Tujunga, Cal.

We have a population here of over 2500 and the largest Chamber of Commerce in the United States, for a town of its size. We have 282 members now and at our next meeting will have over 360 members.

Trusting that in the future we will not be ignored in your columns when any news item might be credited to us.

GEORGE F. KIPP.

A Bit of Ivory.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I note with pleasure, in The Times of the 14th inst., that F. Mansfield is renewing the agitation for a wet parade. By all means such a parade should be held, and this is the psychological moment, while parades are the order of the day. New York City has recently held a monster wet demonstration, and there were nearly 15,000 persons in line by actual count, including a small bunch of women and the necessary police officers to keep order.

If a town like New York, that is such a hotbed of puritanical fanaticism, can line up almost 15,000 on such an occasion, surely a liberty-loving city like Los Angeles can stage a demonstration that would make the fanatics shiver with fear for the life of their pet eighteenth amendment.

The right of entry in the parade should not be confined entirely to the thirsty ones, but let all join who feel that their personal liberty has in any manner been abridged or their rights denied.

Let all participate who want to spit on the sidewalks, dump their garbage on the streets, burn their brush and rubbish when they get ready, speed their autos, kiss their neighbor's wives, or do a hundred other things that are now prohibited by our meddlesome laws and vexatious city ordinances. There is altogether too much law in this "land of liberty," and such a display of strength would give pause to our silly agitators and crazy legislators. We could easily get a strong delegation from our city and county jails, as those fellows are always strong for personal liberty, and they have undoubtedly something real to kick about. The women can properly take part also, as someone is continually fussing about the way they dress.

If a woman wants to go shopping on Broadway on a hot day, dressed only in a bathing suit—or without it, for that matter—it is entirely her own affair, or if she wants to show her legs—and some of them evidently do—whose business is it? Automobile owners have many grievances, also, and they should get out in force. What is an auto for, anyway, if you cannot get there and back the same day?

The City Council should pass an ordinance prohibiting cripples, children and old people from using the streets while autos are running, and they would then be safe. If a man wants to kiss his neighbor's wife, and she wants to be kissed, whose business is it?

Is the liberty we now enjoy (?) the variety that our forefathers fought, bled and died for? Not by a jugfull—of anything.

Let every liberty-loving patriot get in line and show his or her sentiments.

Repeating the famous words of Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death." CHAS. JONES.

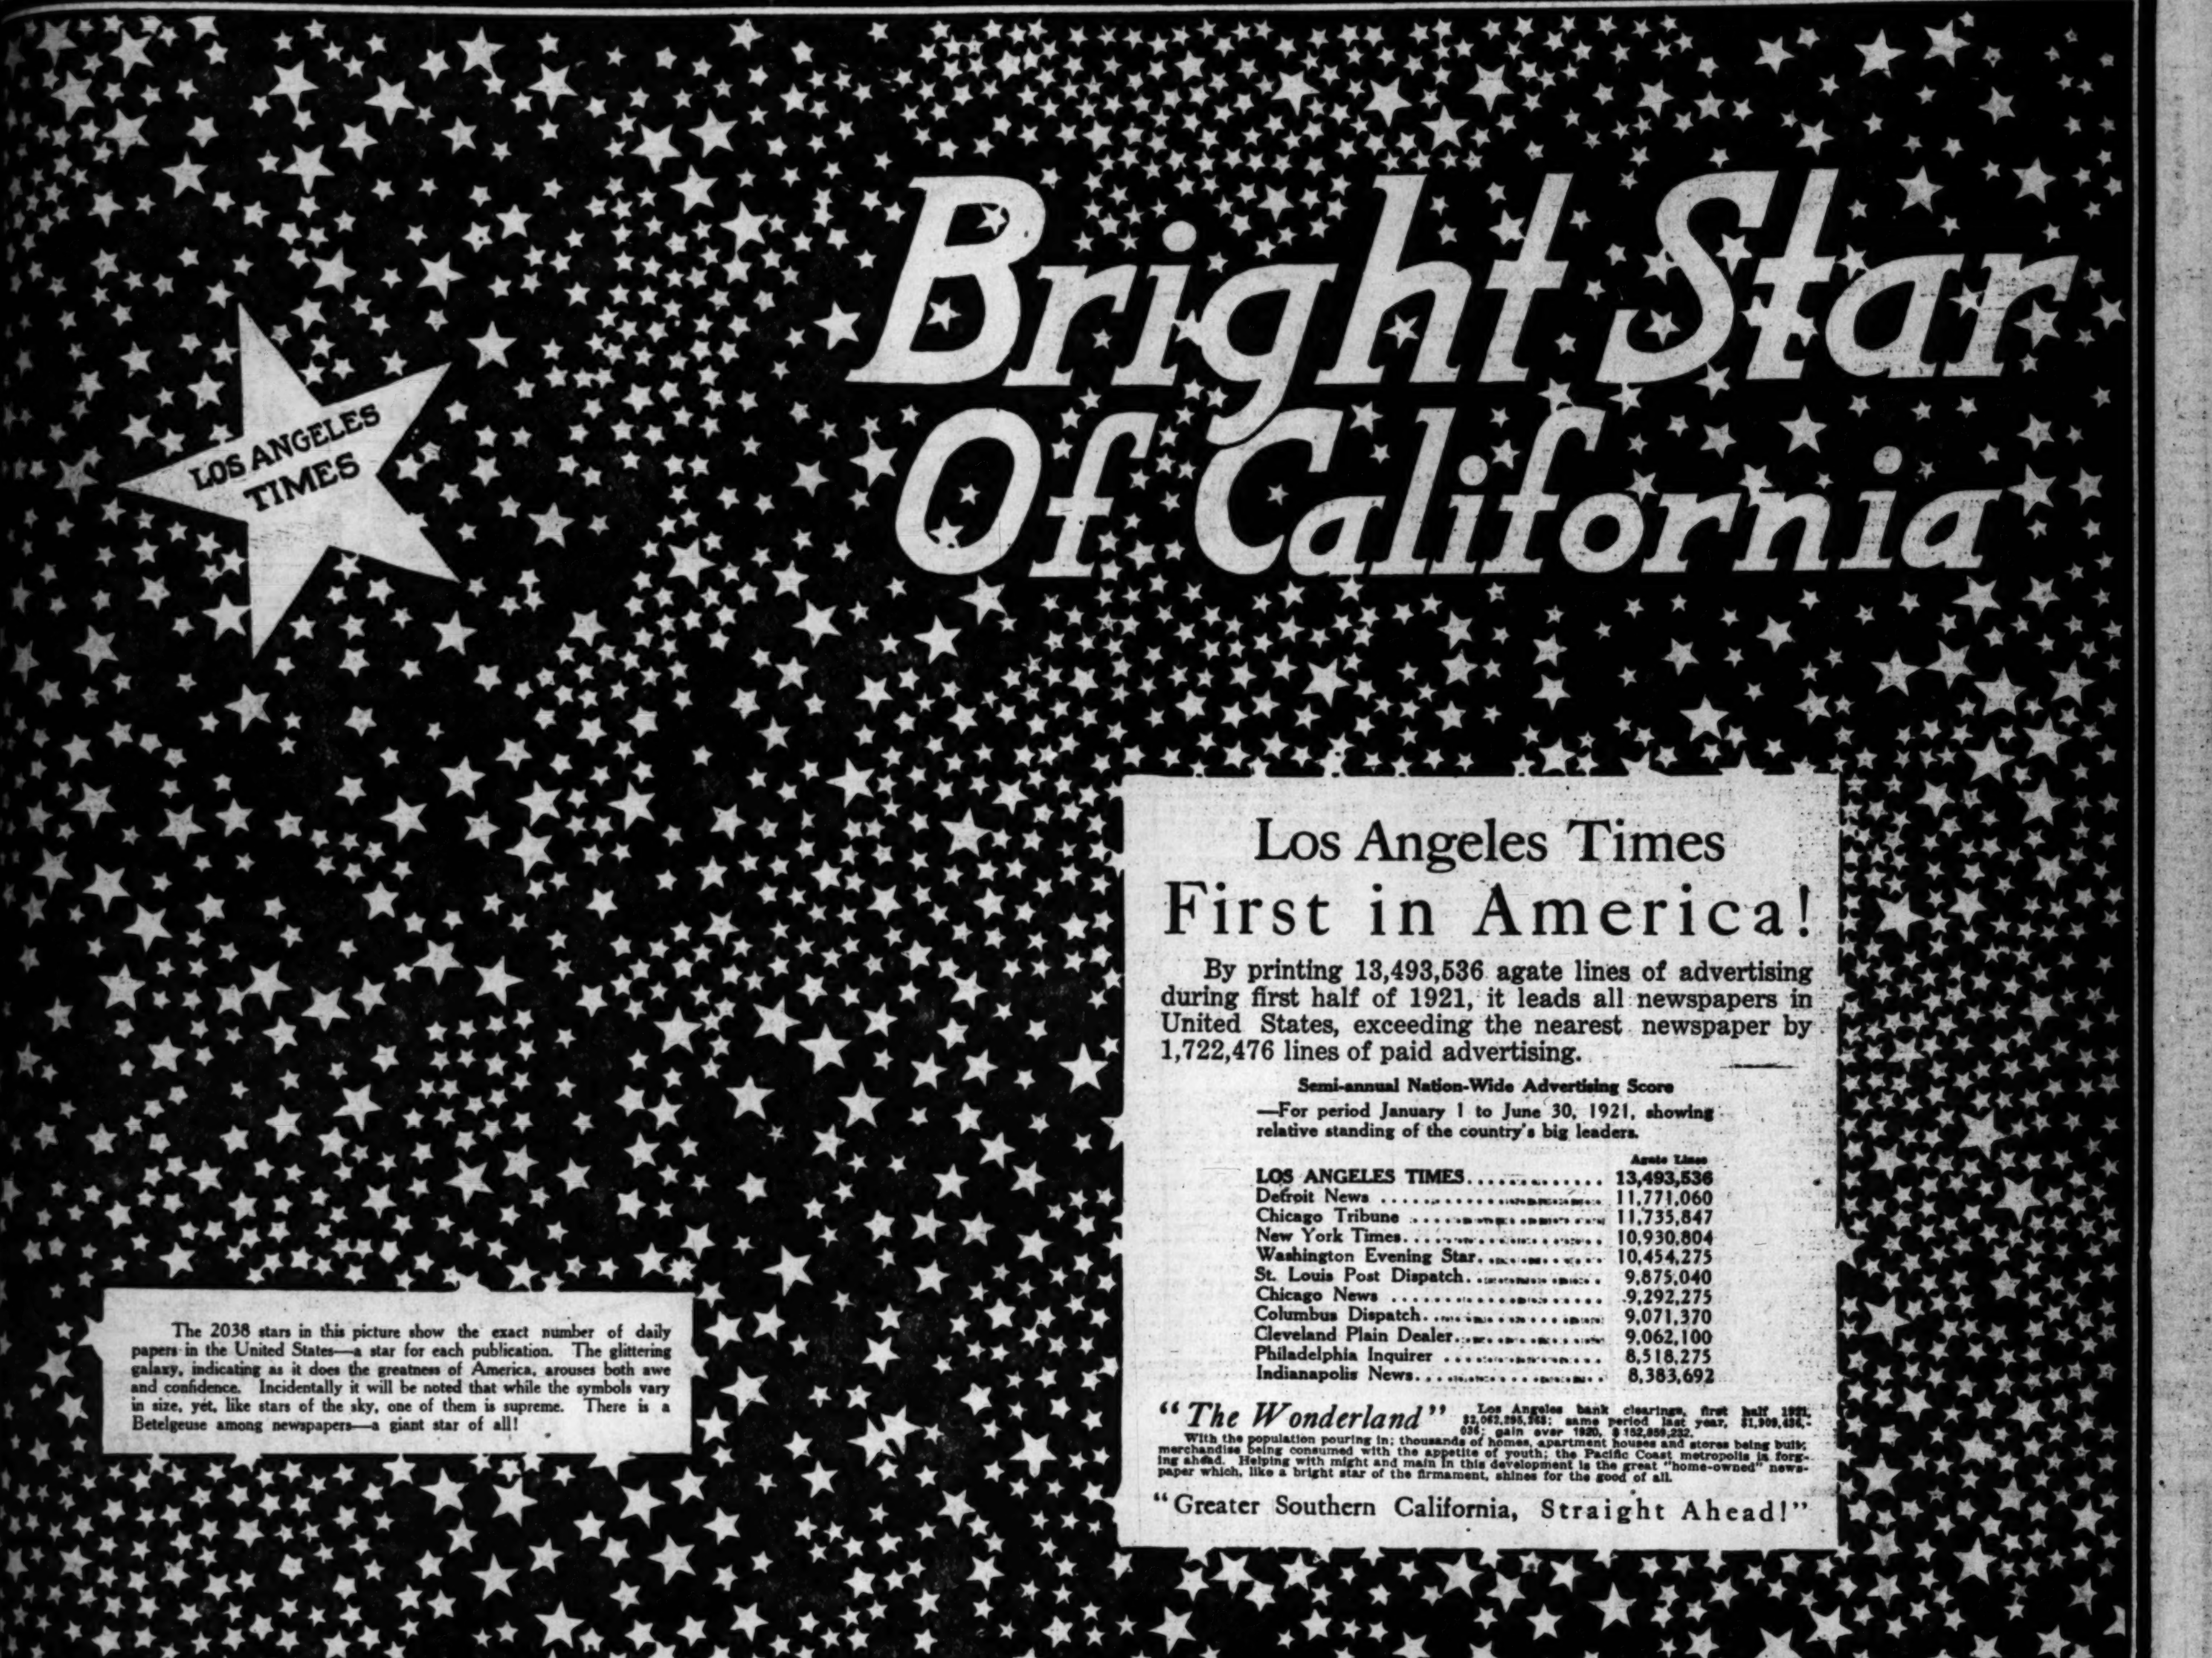
Bright Star Of California



The 2038 stars in this picture show the exact number of daily papers in the United States—a star for each publication. The glittering galaxy, indicating as it does the greatness of America, arouses both awe and confidence. Incidentally it will be noted that while the symbols vary in size, yet, like stars of the sky, one of them is supreme. There is a Betelgeuse among newspapers—a giant star of all!

With the population pouring in; thousands of homes, apartment houses and stores being built; merchandise being consumed with the appetite of youth; the Pacific Coast metropolis is forging ahead. Helping with might and main in this development is the great "home-owned" newspaper which, like a bright star of the firmament, shines for the good of all.

"Greater Southern California, Straight Ahead!"

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Club women in all parts of the Southland are tremendously interested in the historic pageant to be given this afternoon in a picturesque spot near the Mission Playhouse at San Gabriel. Some one has said, that, "in a historical pageant a person visits and shakes hands with his ancestors."

Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, the writer and producer of this historic spectacle, believes that the pageant as a religious ritual and as a picture of California before the white man came and later in the gallent days of the dons could have no more beautiful setting than the one chosen by the local committee at San Gabriel. Speaking before the Alhambra's Women's Club, she recently stated that a pageant properly produced socializes a community and raises the efficiency of the race by organizing public leisure for public benefit; in other words pageantry as a human festival has an obvious bearing upon democratic government.

Among the club women interested in the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Mission of San Gabriel are Mrs. Clarence Van Graham, Mrs. W. W. Keck, Mrs. Charlotte Gleason Stearns, Mrs. Walter Temple, Mrs. C. Bean, Mrs. Leland Muller, Miss Francis Hannon, Mrs. Judd Notter, Mrs. Andrew Klein, Mrs. Hugh Lowther, Mrs. Pauline Hope, Mrs. M. E. Crawford, Mrs. John Stephen McGroarty and Mrs. J. A. Schneider.

One of the most important roles in the pageant is that of El Gobernardor Don Felipe, third Governor of California, to be impersonated by Carroll Nye. He won distinction as a dramatic interpreter at the University of California and, besides playing the part of the Governer, has been chosen to speak the important lines in the prologue entitled "The Prophecy." Frank Staples, prominently identified for eight years with the Mission Play, will impersonate Padre Cambon. Mr. Falder will appear as Padre Somera, Elmer Potter as the medicine man, Joseph T. Jones as the Indian chief and Ida La Maas Corfield as Theodora. Annett DeFoe, Doris Ashton, Mrs. Hugh Lowther, Mrs. Joseph Bonhaus, Mrs. Bernice Johnson, Mrs. C. S. Delano, Miss Edith Lindsay, Miss Agnes Temple, Mrs. Esta Carr, Jack Cosgrave and John Gough will have prominent roles in the wedding fiesta.

Many descendants of the old Spanish families will ride in the bridal procession and several will wear gorgeous Spanish costumes, which are heirlooms. Misses Laurito and Clara Lugo, Miss Rosa Rosas, Miss Marjory Sears, Miss Cecilia Olivares and Miss Elvira Rowland will accompany the bride, Miss Temple. All will be gowned in priceless and rare costumes, inherited from great grandmothers. The "Pageant of San Gabriel" will be an ideal one in this respect, that it is given free and that it will present dramatically and simply in the open fields and sunshine of San Gabriel, two historic episodes, most important and far-reaching in the history of California.

Venetian Center.

Nearly 100 guests were present at an attractive studio reception and dansant last Sunday evening when Miss Kathleen Shippen and Mrs. Lillian Payne were hostesses to artists, musicians, writers and patrons of art who are meeting regularly for the advancement of music, dancing, drama and the fine arts.

"Venetian Center" was the charming name given to this gathering. In a modest way this studio gathering, overlooking Westlake Park, reminded the guests of a corner of Paris, reminiscent of Parc Monceau, near Mont Martre.

During the evening Miss Shippen played "On the Wings of Song" (Mendelssohn,) displaying her splendid tone work and fine interpretation of this lovely melody to advantage. Viola Wasterlain gave the Romanza from Wieniecewski's second concerto, her playing showing brilliancy and power.

Helene Peabody sang two Italian songs thoroughly in keeping with the atmosphere of the Venetian program. They were "Serenata" by Tosh and "Sole Mio." Mme. Joan Warren spoke of the welfare of artists, indorsing the plan of the Los Angeles Art Lover Association to give musicales of worth next season, the entire proceeds to be donated to the artists taking part. Others who gave pleasure to the studio group were Sidney Sprague, Charles Burton and Donald Hillis.

As September 16 is the six hundredth anniversary of the death of Dante, this date was chosen for the next meeting, when prominent people will take part in the program.

Gleason Club.

The Gleason Parliamentary Club, which represents fifty organizations, recently held a picnic-business meeting at the home of Mrs. R. G. Du Puy at Point Fermin, on the bluff overlooking Los Angeles Harbor.

Mrs. Charles S. McKelvey, Los Angeles district parliamentarian, in a bright address illustrating the practical use of parliamentary law, installed the officers for the coming year. Mrs. J. A. Osgood, pioneer parliamentarian of city clubs, told of interesting personal experiences. Mrs. Harry Shultz and Mrs. Ellen French Aldrich spoke on "Parliamentary Points and Usage" as noted at the State convention at Yosemite Park, and Mrs. Du Puy on "Impressions of the Convention." Mrs. J. J. Lawton, as head of the legislative council, spoke of the necessity for study in order to understand the work and need of parliamentary training.

Officers for the coming year are: Mrs. I. W. Gleason, president; Mrs. Fred W. Fuller, first vice-president; Mrs. W. E. Bruce, second vice-president; Mrs. C. C. Kribbs, third vice-president; Mrs. Harry Washburn, recording secretary; Mrs. W. R. Day, corresponding secretary; Miss Amelia Hieber, treasurer.

The following committees have been appointed by the president: Mrs. Harry H. Culver, parliamentarian; Mrs. T. G. Lewis, auditor; Mesdames Neil Scott Lucas and I. W. Gleason, examining; Mesdames H. B. Sweet, J. R. Dudley and P. S. McNutt, membership; regular offices with Mrs. Fred H. Fuller, chairman, programs; Mrs. R. G. Du Puy, federation secretary; Mrs. F. T. Bicknell, press chairman; Mesdames I. W. Gleason, Harry Washburn and W. R. Day, printing. Mmes. Joel Smith and Allie S. Wheeler, housing. Mmes. Harry Shultz, Normal M. Day, W. W. Krebbs, Chester Smith and Miss Mae Armstrong, hospitality.

Noted Woman Coming.

Mme. Olivia Agresti is coming to Los Angeles next winter. Perhaps clubwomen generally do not know who Mme. Agresti is, but California women especially should know of her, because of her relationship to David Lubin, the father of the International Institute of Agriculture, who was a Californian.

David Lubin was not selfishly interested in agriculture, but possessing a wide knowledge of conditions here and in Europe he went from cabinet to cabinet and from crowned head to crowned head until he got the institute set up. The King of Italy became his enthusiastic backer in the enterprise, and Rome is the seat of the institute. The Boston Transcript says, "Though the King of Italy was quite willing to stand behind him, Lubin's 'right hand man' was Olivia Agresti. She grasped his great idea—grasped it not only, but became instrumental in carrying it out. For sixteen years she served Lubin in this enterprise—served him until he died. She is a sisterhood of nations in one woman."

Mme. Agresti is the daughter of William Rosetti, neice of Dante Gabrielle Rosetti and grand-daughter on her mother's side of the English painter, Ford Maddox Brown. In her lectures in the East last spring she told of this institute of agriculture and its work. Thinking that clubwomen would be more interested in art than in economic subjects, she included in her repertoire "Italian Gardens and Fountains," "The Pre-Rhaphaelite Movement and Brotherhood" and "Recent Industrial Developments in Italy." She illustrated her lectures with films and slides.

Three Arts Club.

At its home, 1001 West Washington street, the Three Arts Club will entertain in honor of the press of Los Angeles, from 3 to 6 p.m., August 5.

Club Briefs.

The Foreign Relief Committee, with Mrs. Willoughby Rodman as chairman and Mrs. Carrie S. Greene as secretary, has been asked to organize one of its famous sewing circles at the Brentwood Country Club. This will be done Tuesday, when several of the committee and their friends will meet at the club in the morning, lunch there, and sewing in the afternoon.

The final announcement of the proceeds from the garden fete in the Bernheimer gardens in Hollywood, is $2265 of which $1000 was sent to Hugh Gibson in Poland, in the form of orders for food from the warehouses of the American Relief Administration, with Herbert Hoover, chairman. Another $1000 was sent for Serbian welfare and to the Gojna Gorna district. The remainder will be used for materials for sewing, and the making of garments to be sent to the "Friends' Unit" in Europe.

A preview of the motion picture of the pageant, "California Land of Dreams," was recently given in Los Angeles, and those who saw it are enthusiastic over the picture. A State chairman of the pageant picture committee will be appointed shortly and arrangements will be made for presenting the picture in each of the six districts of the State. The pageant was given in the Yosemite Valley in May, by clubwomen from all over the State.

The oldest botanical work in the world is sculptured on the walls of a room in the great temple of Karnak at Thebes, in Egypt. It represents foreign plants brought home by an Egyptian sovereign, Thothmes III, on his return from a campaign in Arabia. The sculptures show not only the plant or tree, but the leaves, fruit and seed pods separately, after the fashion of a modern botanical exhibit.

PLANS MONUMENT FOR HIS DOGS.

Governor of Maine Will Have Names of His Pets on Bronze Tablets.

At the summer home of Gov. Baxter of Maine, on Mackworth Island, Casco Bay, are buried all of the dogs which died while owned by him since 1887. The Governor now is having made a bronze tablet giving the names and records of these animals. This will be placed upon the face of a granite boulder, around which the dogs have been interred.

These dogs are all of the same family of Irish setters. The first and great-grandmother of the family was Glencore. She was given the Governor in 1887 by his father, the late James P. Baxter of Portland, Me. The living representative of the line now is a young dog named Garry.

A feature of the group plan is that many uninsurable persons are thereby included for insurance who would otherwise be debarred.

BITS OF VERSE.

Rob, Bob and the Job.

Two friends have I, and one is poor,
Unkempt, unsteady and unsure.
I speak of him as "Poor old Bob!"
Pursued by some malignant fate,
His is a sad, unhappy state;
He is a man without a job.

('Tis not a lot to be desired
To be continuously fired.)

Two friends have I, and one is rich,
For money sticks to him like pitch.
I speak of him as "Poor old Rob!"
I thrill with pity through and through
For he has not one thing to do;
He is a man without a job.

(A man who calls himself "Retired"
Is much the same as one who's fired.)
—[Edmund Vance Cooke, in Leslie's.

Little Things.

He rang in a little sooner
Than the fellows in his shop;
And he stayed a little longer
When the whistle ordered "Stop;"
He worked a little harder
And he talked a little less;
He seemed but little hurried
And he showed but little stress,
For every little movement
His efficiency expressed.
Thus his envelope grew just
A little thicker than the rest.
He saved a little money
In a hundred little ways;
He banked a little extra
When he got a little raise.
A little "working model!"
Took his little "leisure" time;
He wrought each little part of it
With patience most sublime.
Now its very little wonder
That he murmurs with a smile,
As he clips his little coupons:
"Are the little thing worth while?"
—[Chesapeake and Ohio Employees' Magazine.

The Upland Road.

The road I love winds up a hill,
Past laughing brooks, through woods, until
Traversing it, my sipirit sings,
And my slow feet are tipped with wings.

The road I love, climbs up and up
To where a fir-clad mossy cup
Holds, in a loving green embrace,
The heart of home, dear resting place.

All of the way, my road beguiles
The wanderer, with happy miles,
Cool rain as guerdon, sun and breeze,
And dear protection of the trees.

O blessed road, O road we've trod
Up to the heights, the hills of God.
Grant us wide vision, make it clear,
There, where all heaven is so near.
—[M. T. B. in Boston Transcript.

COBWEBS.

Rise in the cool, dim dawn,
When the mist is hung on the pane—
The loose gray cobweb of the fog
Spun by the rain.

Where the sun's long golden fingers
Have brushed it away—then go
And watch the sky through the tree tops
Fall like snow.
And after, when you are tired
And twilight hangs on the leaves,
Listen—and the silence will tell you
Why it grieves.

For the fog, the sky and the twilight
Are the cobwebs that brush the eyes
When a man would enter the dusty door
Of paradise.
—[Oscar Williams in Poetry.

The Brothers With a Tail

A monkey to a comet spoke
"O brother with a tail,
Is it the same with starry folk
As in this earthly vale?
Do those who have come after you
Look down in jeering scorn
Because their evolution grew
Of caudal splendor shorn?"

The comet to the monkey spoke,
"O brother with a tail,
Respectfully do they invoke
My long and streaming flail
I make them think it comes again
To blow them into bits—
Just try my scheme on stars or men
And scare them into fits."
—[McLandburgh Wilson, in New York Herald.

Brought All.

"And eggs, Arthur—and eggs!" said the comedian.—[Tit-Bits.

gins at the top in hats of sable darkness, breaks the lack luster effect of its somber whole by leather ties and strapped pumps which vie, in brilliancy of surface, with the handle of the big front door in "Pinafore."

There is a pronounced taste, at the moment, for the cut-out sandal, which, if it were "built" of plebian elk skin would, we suspect, be called "ventilated" but which, in its high state of polish is frilly and fanciful enough to be in keeping with the most Victorian of distended silk skirts above it. There is, too, a new name for an old heel for the supporter we have, in our innocence, called "Cuban" and "military," calls itself, when covered in kid, "Spanish."

Any amount of patent leather brightness has not dimmed the beauty of black satin in our affections, however, and the high-heeled one-strap pump with its delicate tracery of glittering beads will reign supreme through the autumn and winter for wear with afternoon and dinner frocks with which it harmonizes. And we still love and continue to wear low-heeled sports shoes of beige and brown—the latter in all the tones of this highly fashionable color. There are some stunning new models of the brogue type which show heels of a flatness heretofore undreamed.

Fashion Flashes Are That:

The popular dotted swiss is often made up in the collarless, wide-sleeved style.

Sports suits feature the short coat, hanging loosely from the shoulders in back.

An organdie frock of salmon pink features a low, wide girdle of golden brown.

Loops of the material are the sole trimming on a dress of pastel blue organdie.

Fall coats have a slightly higher waist line and are girdled with the string belt in many cases.

A frock of black-and-white crepe has a girdle and side panels of muslin in the new Chinois red.

A white flannel sports dress is trimmed with yellow satin ribbon striped in green and black.

Taffeta and voile are charmingly combined in a dance frock. The voile drapes the skirt of taffeta.

An empire evening frock of flesh-pink taffeta is embroidered in iridescent beads and pearls.

A ruffled white organdie has a girdle of narrow black velvet caught with a huge bunch of red cherries.

A dress of white crepe de chine is girdled with emerald-green ribbon and embroidered with silver pailletees.

A simple frock of white crepe Georgette has double bands of begonia-red crepe Georgette on skirt and panels.

Fiction Provided For.

The husband was seeing his beloved wife off for a holiday.

"Maggie, dear," he said, "hadn't you better take some fiction with you to while away the time?"

"Oh, no George," she said, "you'll be sending me some letters."—[Western Christian Advocate.

LECTURER ADVISES FARMERS TO ACT.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION DIRECTOR SAYS THEY MUST DO THEIR PART.

Addressing an audience at the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., recently, G. I. Christie, extension director of Purdue University, Indiana, declared that the farmer isn't going to get far in meeting his present problems if he spends all his time thinking how hard his lot is . The farmer, like every one else, must do his part in getting the country "back to normalcy," Mr. Christie said.

Some of the great changes which have taken place in the last ten years were pointed out. These included the general use of automobiles by farmers, the growing use of tractors, the fighting of the World War, which sent millions of farmers into the service and into industry. The speaker said that, in view of these changes, it was not strange that times for the farmer, as well as for every one else, are a bit unsettled.

Mr. Christie said that when the farmer talks about getting back to normalcy he doesn't mean 5-cent pork and 35-cent corn and 15-cent eggs, because the farmer cannot run his business on such prices. Nor will many commodities go down to prewar prices, he said; some will come down and some will go up, until an equitable adjustment has been made.

At present it is not the farmer's inability to borrow money that is causing his trouble. It is because he cannot borrow money and pay it back at the prices he is getting for his products. Whereas, a year ago he could drive to the market with 500 bushels of corn and exchange the corn for a tractor; now he has got to give the corn and borrow $500 more before he can get the tractor.

Mr. Christie said that the persons who lay all the farmers' troubles to the Chicago Board of Trade, the railroads, the packers and all the other pet scapegoats are on the wrong track. In all of these abuses may have grown up, but still they are all performing a useful function, he said.

The way for the former to correct things is not by sitting down and waiting, he said, but by operating his farm at maximum capacity. Too many want to solve the problem by attention to big things instead of looking after the little details.

"The farmer," he said, "must look for more of his needd profit by cutting down the cost of production, just as does the manufacturer. He must see he cannot afford to keep cows and hens which do not pay their keep."

Better living conditions in the country were advocated by Mr. Christie. More attractions must be provided for the boys and girls, he said. He spoke of the old "best parlors," with their bay windows, known as "coffin windows," because they were used mainly to set the casket in when there was a funeral in the family — about the only time the best parlor was used. Not only do we need a vitalized agricultural taught in the rural school, he said, but a vitalized English and geography and mathematics, so that the boys and girls shal have interests in life other than the bread and butter one.—[New York Times.

Canada's Veterans.

A total of 19,771 returned soldiers have received loans from the Canadian government aggregating $80,371,750 to buy land, make improvements, and buy implements and stock. The cultivation of 4,854,799 acres of land was undertaken and in 1920 194,253 acres of virgin soil was broken. The men produced in 1920 crops valued at $18,958,178. More than five-sixths of the number of persons who received loans were men who settled in the four western provinces.—[Exchange.

HOW WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Escape the Dreaded Sufferings of That Period by Taking Mrs. Block's Advice

Hopkins, Minn.—"During Change of Life I had hot flashes and suffered for two years. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the paper and got good results from taking it. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish this fact as a testimonial."—Mrs. ROBERT BLOCK, Box 542, Hopkins, Minn.

It has been said that not one woman in a thousand passes this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, sinking spells, spots before the eyes, dizzy spells, nervousness, are only a few of the symptoms. Every woman at this age should profit by Mrs. Block's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., about your health.

WHITTIER.

Of all the lovely mid-summer marriages of the season, none surpassed in beauty of appointments that of Miss Edith Tebbets and Daniel Burgess Clark, which was solemnized in the garden of the Tebbets home on North Painter avenue, at 5:30 Thursday afternoon. Her garden has been one of Miss Tebbets's special delights, and it was here that she received Mr. Clark's proposal of marriage. The garden is one of the finest in the city, replete with rare ornamental shrubs and flowers. The marriage ceremony was read by Dr. Charles E. Tebbets, father of the bride, who came from Brooklyn, N. Y., where he is pastor of the Friends Church, to attend the marriage of his only daughter. Prof. Howard L. Hockett, head of the department of vocal music at Whittier College, sang "Because," and Miss Grace Dixon played "Simple Aveu" as the bridal party entered the garden. Little Eleanor Tebbets, a niece of the bride, carried the wedding ring, buried deep in the heart of a rose and little Peggy and Mildred Tebbets, also nieces, scattered rose petals in the path of the betrothed pair. Miss Lucille Rosenberger of Denton, Tex., a friend of many years' standing, was bridesmaid. The bride, a brunette with decidedly rich coloring, wore a gown of moonglow satin, embellished with handsome hand-made lace, priceless point lace which she purchased abroad a number of years ago. The mother wore black Chantilly over white satin, the trimmings being of pink rose buds and flowers. During the congratulations the Misses Helen Chamness, Virginia Williams and Opal Iris Hinshaw served punch; later an elaborate collation was served. Mr. and Mrs. Clark left immediately for Richmond, Ind., to visit Mr. Clark's people. Later they intend to make their home in Whittier. Mrs. Clark's going away gown and chapeau were from Florence, Italy. She comes of one of the best known Quaker families in the world, her father, Dr. Tebbets, having been president of Whittier College for a number of years and later secretary to the Friends Mission Board at Richmond, Ind. The family has traveled extensively in Europe, England and Ireland, Mexico, Cuba and Jamaica. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Tebbets and daughter Peggy, of Newark, N. J.; Mrs. Debora Haines, Iowa City, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Henry King, Miss Mary Wood, Miss Ellen Moore, Miss Harriet Pyle, Miss Eudora Kirk, Miss Catherine Townsend, Mr. Frank Charles, of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Winston, Mr. John Winston, Redlands; Miss Grace Williams, Huntington Park; Mr. Painter and Mrs. Michener, brother and sister of Mrs Charles Tebbets, of Los Angeles.

In honor of Mrs. Cass Arthur Reed, who, with her husband, Dr. Reed, is spending the summer in Southern California, Mrs. William Sutherland of Garden Grove, entertained at the beautiful home of her mother, Mrs. A. L. Reed, on North Friends avenue Tuesday afternoon with an informal affair. Co-honor guests with Mrs. Reed were Mrs. Frederick Smith of Rideout Heights and her sister, Mrs. Russell Bowers, whose home is in the East. An informal program of music and discussions relating to Turkey, where Dr. Reed is dean of the International College at Smyrna, was given. Mrs. A. L. Reed offered for inspection many curios pieces of Turkish art, and rare oriental rugs and draperies, which she had secured on one of her European visits. Mrs. Cass Reed told of the unique and interesting customs of the Turkish people in their everyday life. Vocal music was furnished by Miss Elizabeth Lum and Miss Laurette Smith, and a number of piano selections were given by Mrs. Frederick Smith and Mrs. Cass Reed. Thirty guests attended. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. T. L. McClellan, Miss Hattie Carpenter, Mrs. Rollin W. Dole, all of Los Angeles, and Miss Jean Hyde of Salt Lake City.

Miss Edythe and Master Bruce Pou entertained at the home of their mother, Mrs. Ida B. Pou Tuesday afternoon in compliment to their cousins, Miss Christina and Master George Cooper of Ontario. Games were played on the spacious lawns and later an attractive collation was served. The guests included Mary Louise, Pauline and Oliver Chaudy, Margaret and Georgia Lou Barron, Gream and Margaret Ramsey, Carlton Bailey, Margery Beaugardis, Robert and Tom Plotts and Elva and Floyd Votaw.

Why Stay Fat?
You Can Reduce

Fat women must take this injunction to heart if they want to be in style, for the new summer modes will not drape over a fat figure.

The fat has got to come off quickly, but without harm, of course, and this means only one thing can be depended upon. Exercising or dieting is too slow and weakening, especially during hot weather. The fat woman who wants to wear a form-clinging gown must make an immediate trip to her druggist and get a box of Marmola Prescription Tablets, which will cost her about one dollar.

Taking one of these after each meal and at bed time should be enough to bring her to the stage where she is losing two, three or four pounds a week before even the first box is used up. It is hardly believable that such delightful results can be obtained without harm and for such a small sum of money, but then, fact is stranger than fiction.

Test the effect of these tablets by getting a case yourself, either from the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., or from any druggist. They are made in exact accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, and consequently cannot have any ill effect even on the hottest summer days. —[Advertisement.

A CAUSE OF WOMEN'S ILLS

WOMEN OFTEN THINK THEY HAVE HEART TROUBLE, INDIGESTION, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, ETC., WHEN IT'S SIMPLY IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

Many women believe they are weak and nervous as a result of age, worry and overwork; they think that their disturbed digestion, headaches, heart palpitation, shortness of breath, pains across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the real cause—iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when many of these same women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living cells and tissue. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you do not get the strength out of it.]

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron—at once. But be sure it's organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic NUXATED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, wornout women in two weeks' time.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N.I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. At all druggists.—[Advertisement.

istorian Favors a Great Campanile With Expanding Wings, Great Clock and Chimes Where Fountain is Now

BY LUTHER A. INGERSOLL.

ing down Spring street the day, I ran into an old-time a thrifty taxpaying pioneer, said: "Hello, Ingersoll, what's hurry? Haven't seen you since when you induced me to for the Library bonds. It hurt the devil to do it, taxes are so but I admitted its necessity took the medicine."

ell, you won't regret it. You not have made a better in-ent."

s, but I see now that the Li-y Board, since they've got the y, are going into the real es-business and invest $1,000,000 lot to put a library building on."

That's interesting. Where did you that?"

The Times—didn't you read Lummis article in The Times three weeks ago? Some ap-history in it, food for thought."

think we have an exceptionally Library Board, rugged in prin-strong in individuality, and ably energetic, all of which ably equips them for the big usual job. It is unfair to pre-or assume that they will side-sworn duty in this or any matter entrusted to them. have and are worthy of the confidence of the people, and tizens of this community should y sparing of criticism, by in-do or otherwise, without due n."

ey well, but why don't they do thing? Are they dead, or just ing? I'd like to see something You told me when you were eering for the bonds, that was no time to lose in getting ilding, because the lease for nt quarters runs so short a and it costs so much to move all of that."

a, that's gospel truth, and I rumblings of a growing dis-action because of delay in get-busy. As an interested citizen spared no effort to carry the I took the liberty to inter-the president of the Library d. I was promptly told that positively nothing doing and ing is be said until after Octo-1 next, and then the board proceed to the business of se-ing and purchasing a location Central Library Building, and t up. Presumably, a central lo-n. He failed to volunteer any n for a five-month delay. I ed if he thought the referen-of 1904 locating, by a large ty, a library building in Cen-Park, now Pershing Square, has lation to the choice of a lo-now, and he replied that he t see why it should, and did hink that it does. He declined rther discuss the matter. In he seemed rather annoyed by uggestion."

s the present attitude of the nt of the Library Board is plain. But, since the presi-of a board is not essentially this board, I sought the atti-of other members, all of whom nd not committed to any pro-choice of location for a build-or plan of procedure. They open-minded, frank and cour-and determined to do what is ctly best for the reading and the Public Library, and maintain that attitude until people, to whom only, they feel sible, had made their wishes . I also learned that some rs are away portions of the but all will be "on deck" aft-tober 1, when business will and this matter will be taken with all the cards on the table. up. You see, therefore, that ve a truly democratic and not cratic library board, and our interests in the hands of tudent people, the public is from any insidious combined ds made up of profession-y shufflers, political para-and real estate sharks, such t all growing cities.

1904 ACTION HOLDS.

is the opinion of competent uthorities that the referen-of 1904 is still operative, is annot be set aside or nullified nother referendum so to and if such is the case, the board is happily relieved of be permitted to develop into ary over location. own by Dr. Lummis, the State Supreme Court has decreed that the referendum of 1904 was regular and that there is nothing in the bequest of the donor of Central Park (now Pershing Square) to the city, that precludes the location of a central library building therein, so that settles that.

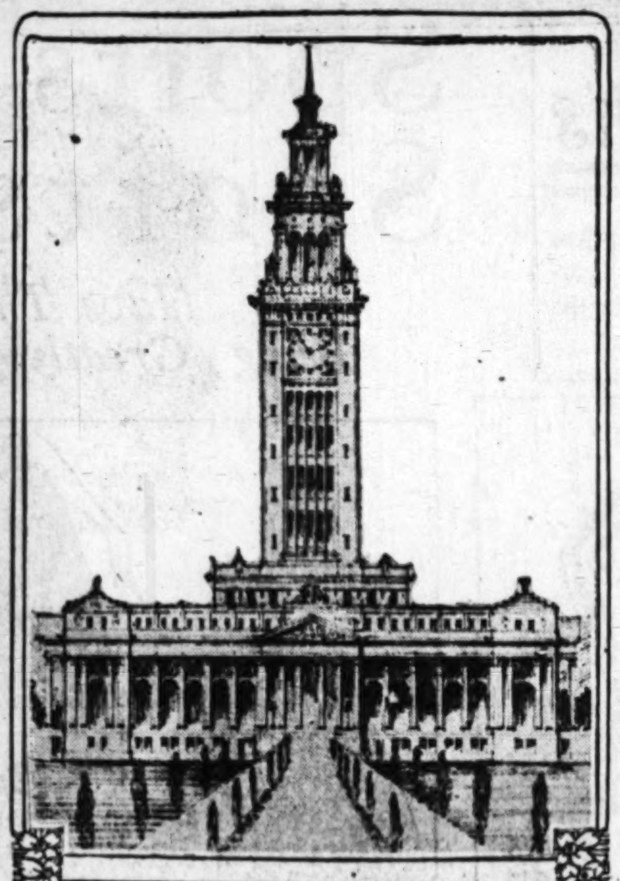
Admitting the fact that we have a definite location, the next move is to design a building in every way adapted to it that will best serve the requirements of a metropolitan public library, and sixth largest in volume of business transacted and in usefulness in the United States, and there is no logical reason why we should not erect it in Pershing Square, in the heart of what is now the most unique and beautiful city in the world, the most substantial, the most lofty, aspiring and inspiring public library building in the world. We have the location, the money, the enterprise, the ability and the unity of purpose to do it, and should not miss our opportunity to do it. At this time we have no public building to which we can point with pride that is typical of our beautiful city—its cultured and enterprising people. This is our one opportunity to make good, by eschewing all discord, all personal ambitions and greed, holding in mind the one fundamental thought of our present public welfare and future greatness. We, who are here today, will ere long be called to an endless retirement, and let us not fail, while we have so great a privilege, to measure up in full to our opportunity and our duty to those who are fast coming on to the stage of a marvelous future. Again, I say, place our splendid public library with its diligent and long-neglected staff of library workers in a fitting home as a fitting appreciation of their long years of tireless toil to make our great university of general knowledge what we proudly see it today. That would do our souls, our hearts and our pockets good. Let nothing stand in the way of this, since there is no public necessity that overshadows it.

HOW TO DO IT.

Pershing Square has a 600-foot frontage on Hill and Olive streets and 330 feet on Fifth and Sixth streets. The central brick plaza therein, with the out-of-date fountain, occupies a space 100 feet square, or 10,000 square feet. I would occupy this space with a classic campanile that shall tower heavenward, just a little higher than the Woolworth Building in New York City, said to be the tallest building in the world, a little more than 900 feet high. Architect Soper's drawing shows a tower considerably less high and the actual height may, of course, be regulated by circumstances. I would front this campanile on both Hill and Olive streets and extend wings on the north and south sides about 100 feet by 100 feet and four stories high. I would surmount these wing extensions with roof-garden reading rooms. This would afford a floor space of 150,000 square feet. Our library now pays rent on and occupies 60,000 square feet, but is much cramped as to space. As more space is required, the campanile can be utilized. I would provide accommodations in this campanile for various established nonadministrative organizations. Such, for instance, as the Historical Society of Southern California, the Los Angeles County Pioneer Society, the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, the Southern California Academy of Science, the Ellis Club, the Gamut Club, Federation of Woman's Clubs, Woman's Press Club, and others of like worthy objects and purposes.

I would install near the top of this campanile, the largest electric clock in the world, having a dial about thirty feet in diameter, with numerals and index hands lighted by electricity, that under favorable atmospheric conditions could be read on Santa Catalina Island, Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson. I would place under this mammoth clock a battery of the most powerful and the sweetest silver chimes in the world, to chime every hour, day and night the sweetest hymns, songs and ballads in the world and I would display the words to this music in electric letters on the four sides of the campanile that the people might sing them. This would be community uplift, singing with a big S. I would provide quarters in the topmost story of this campanile for the United States Government Weather Bureau Station, and surmount the whole with a steel flag staff, from which to float the largest Star Spangled Banner in the world, topped with a beacon flashlight to direct the fleets of the world into Los Angeles Harbor. We will then have the most wonderful library building in the world, that tourists will travel around the world to see. It will be for centuries to come a constantly thrilling inspiration to the people of the civilized world, and an enduring monument to our skill, enterprise and our loyalty to posterity.

Plan Would Utilize Downtown Park.



Design for Library on Pershing Square Site.

COST BUT TWO TREES.

The building I herein suggest will necessitate the removal of but two trees and no shrubbery of value. It will not deprive the leisure public of the use of a seat. I would remove the present corner-to-corner cross walks, build a like walk of some material around the inner margin of the park, against the curb and front, cement seats on both sides of this walk. The present cement corner entrances are artistic and dignified and should not be disturbed, but simply closed and entrances opened on the four sides of the park, midway between streets. The coping that now skirts the four sides of the park is good and substantial, and should not be disturbed, but heightened to form the back of seats that front on the inner walk. I am informed by competent authority that this structure, with all necessary equipment, can be erected in steel and concrete for $2,000,000, which would leave $500,000 for branch library purposes. I believe it the duty of every thoughtful citizen of Los Angeles to ponder this most important problem of the hour and lay the results thereof before our library board to aid them in a prompt and proper solution thereof.

I think Librarian Perry's invitation to citizens to suggest ideas for a library building should be accepted and acted upon. Some one might materially aid the library board in a solution of the problem of a library building. The board should not, however, delay an hour longer in getting busy. It is not essential that the matter be delayed to sell bonds and pile up idle money in some bank somewhere. Let the taxpayers keep and use their money until needed to put into a building. Our local architects' association, or members thereof, should be employed to submit plans and specifications with estimates of cost and well paid for their services.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

Nine hundred and five spinsters out of every 1000 who have reached the age of 25, live to be 45; 632 out of every 1000 reach 65; 119 reach 85, and 8 attain the age of 90.

All the leading colleges of pharmacy in England have women on their teaching staffs.

Vienna has some women hod carriers.

For seventy-five years women in the British textile industry have been protected by a law prohibiting night work.

One of the largest lacemakers in France has women working for him who have eight generations of lacemaking ancestors behind them.

When a girl was married in ancient Greece, the bride's mother carried the sacred fire from her own hearth to that of the new home.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Martin, formerly Miss Alice Potter, of Newport, has wearied of society, and is engaged in the photographic business in New York city, where she has a fashionable studio in Fifth avenue.

Statistics of women's colleges covering a period of sixty years show the average college girl of today is an inch taller than the college girl of 1860. The figures also prove that she is six or seven pounds heavier.

The supervisor of the Cascade national forest in Oregon has engaged a number of women for duty as fire lookouts. The women will dwell in lonely cabins on the high mountain peaks.

For more than 250 years the town of Guildford, in England, has followed an annual custom of distributing cash prizes among servant maids in the town who have kept their situations for two years or longer.

A boy who had heard Mme. Melba on the phonograph was rather skeptical as to whether the prima donna really sang all the trills. To settle the question he wrote to her for a ticket to her concert and got it by return mail.

No man is allowed to sow carrot seeds in Lithuania because of a superstition. The peasant woman puts an egg, some bread and a coin—symbols of fertility—in a wooden bowl and adds moistened seed. Then she puts the seed in her mouth, and, walking along, spits it into a furrow.

That Napoleon was the world's most generous husband has been discovered by Frederick Masson, of the Academie Francais, Paris. He found that in five years Josephine spent 225,000 francs (normally about $45,000) on laces; 312,000 francs ($62,400) on silks; 110,000 francs ($22,000) with her modiste; 102,000 francs ($20,400) on gowns; 57,000 francs ($11,400) on perfumes, and 50,000 francs ($10,000) on stockings and shoes. The franc then was worth ten times its present value.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Suffering, or the sight of it, often brings out in a man qualities in which he was supposed to be deficient. The cables say that in China, out of which the cry of the hungry has sounded across the Pacific and opened the generous purse of America, one of the most notorious bandits has turned from his evil ways to give himself and his five thousand followers to the cause of famine relief.

Niu Ch'ang P'ing is his name. That isn't as attractive as Robin Hood, or even Jesse James, yet what's in a name if its owner means well? Niu seems to be practicing some of those virtues which have made the highwayman of Sherwood Forest renowned in romance. The distress of the starving has softened his heart; from a bandit and terrorist he has changed to an active aid in the distribution of supplies and in the protection of the weak and the needy.

Reports credit him with guarding relief workers on their missions of mercy, and escorting to their homes natives who have received supplies of grain at the relief centers and with personally making distributions where it is difficult and hazardous for anybody except him and his armed guard to go. Goods and money that he took from rich travelers he has also divided among the poor, as Robin Hood used to do in the heyday of his fabled fame. So efficient has he been in his work and seemingly so sincere in his reformation that the Chinese government has forgiven him his past deeds and made him a lieutenant colonel, with authority to police the province in which he was once supreme as a bandit.

Italy is an interesting field of Junior Red Cross activity. In twenty-four schools of twenty cities the Junior American Red Cross is helping 1126 war orphans to secure training for a useful life. They are distributed as follows:

In a number of day nurseries 510 small children are given a nourishing noon meal and are taught primary subjects while their mothers are at work.

In vocational training schools 280 girls and boys are taught native trades and housekeeping.

In agricultural schools 170 girls and boys are taught modern scientific farming.

On two school ships, one in Venice and the other in Naples, 60 boys are given a home and trained as expert sailors and fishermen.

In a hospital school, 70 children are given special care, food and treatment as well as school work.

At an open-air school in Messina, 36 tubercular children are being restored to health and given regular school work.

Wounded veterans of the war furnish rich and varied opportunities to study the question of the ability of the human spirit to endure seemingly crushing disaster.

Take, for example, the case of Henry Bitter, former corporal in the United States Army. Corp. Bitter was so injured by a premature explosion of a hand grenade that he became totally blind, and had to have both hands amputated at the wrist. Yet Mr. Bitter, with the aid of training supplied by the Federal Board for Vocational Education, has got control over his physical troubles so that he has originated a formula for a patent medicine.

It is well spoken of by physicians of standing, and he and his brother are traveling together selling the medicine to wholesale dealers. Mr. Bitter has more business than he can handle, and is soon to incorporate.—[Baltimore American.

Such Carelessness.

It was visiting day at the jail and the uplifters were on deck.

"My good man," said one kindly lady, "I hope that since you have come here you have had time for meditation and have decided to correct your faults."

"I have that, mum," replied the prisoner in heartfelt tones. "Believe me, the next job I pull, this baby wears gloves."—[American Legion Weekly.

SECRET OF SOUTHLAND'S GROWTH IS "TEAM-WORK"

Walter Woehlke, Writing for "Sunset" Magazine, Tells of Factors That Bring Prosperity Here.

Climate may be moving the Middle West to the shores of the Pacific, but in an entertaining article on Los Angeles and Southern California, by Walter V. Woehlke, in the August number of the Sunset Magazine, there are many other good answers to the question, "Just how did Los Angeles manage to become the largest city west of the Missouri?"

Mr. Woehlke also in the course of his article answers another highly important query, "What factors are making Southern California the most prosperous spot in the country, despite universal depression?" He may not be altogether respectful in his humorously exaggerated references to local real estate activities and cafeterias, but on the whole he gives a graphic and valuable account of conditions in Los Angeles and elsewhere in Southern California.

For instance, he says:

"Los Angeles with 560,000 inhabitants, as counted by the 1920 census enumerators, is now the largest city in the Far West. If you will look at the map gotten out monthly by the United States Chamber of Commerce to show at a glance the condition of business in various parts of the country, you will notice that from the Atlantic to the Pacific every district is marked either 'fair' or 'poor.'

BUSINESS HERE "GOOD."

"There is only one spot where business is invariably indicated as 'good' and that spot is Southern California. And in Southern California in general, in Los Angeles in particular, business continues to be good despite the world-wide depression.

"There are few regions in this country that began their careers with less of the world's goods than the territory known as Southern California. Though the padres, coming from Mexico, started their long chain of missions at San Diego a century and a half ago, though the missions and the settlers that came with them soon had large herds, grapes, olives and grain, their fields and orchards were tiny dots in the wilderness of gray sagebrush.

"And when the gold fever broke out 500 miles to the north, the southern half-Spanish end of the Golden State, comprising perhaps one-fourth of the State's area and consisting of 90 per cent of desert and mountains, was completely forgotten. The State's central part had gold, timber, herds of cattle, enormous wheat fields, deep rivers, a great world harbor. The dry southern tail had nothing except lean cattle and a marvelously equable climate along a rather narrow coast strip.

"It was shut off from the gold-and-wheat region by mountain ranges, from the east by the country's dryest, most dangerous deserts. It had Mexico to the south and the empty Pacific to the west. For forty years it grew as fast as a newly-laid egg; in forty years its only claim to momentary fame was the lynching of some twenty inoffensive Chinese on a drunken Saturday. The California, the region of Bret Harte, and Mark Twain and Frank Norris of Huntington and Hanford, of John Muir and Joaquin Miller, ignored its poor, shabby relation and was rather ashamed of it."

Following this drab picture, which certainly is not particularly promising, Mr. Woehlke plunges into a different kind of narrative:

SOUTHLAND "DISCOVERED."

"And then," he writes, "Iowa discovered the virtues of Southern California's climate. Kansas and Nebraska heard of the discovery; the news traveled north to Manitoba, east to Indiana, all over the Corn Belt and the Wheat Buckle. There was no holding them.

"They came in droves, flocks and shoals. The rush was on. It's still on. It will continue to be on until Southern California has disposed of its last available drop of water. And then they'll begin to condense the ocean.

"You see, the climate that restored health and prolonged life also proved to be a vast outdoor nursery for tender, sensitive plants. Given water and transportation, Southern California could produce huge quantities of oranges, lemons, olives, walnuts, grapes, tomatoes, lima beans, lettuce, onions, celery, dates, figs and cantaloupes per acre. It did produce then to such an extent that Los Angeles could afford to bring a young river 230 miles from the north across the Mojave Desert and through the backbone of the Sierra Madre to have an assured supply for at least a million people. Just now that forehanded, foresighted city is getting ready to obtain water enough for two million people—from the somnolent Bret Harte-Mark Twain part of California."

Mr. Woehlke then proceeds, without recourse to the files of Frank Wiggins, to explain:

"The rush of the middle-aged Middle West to Southern California's climate continued without pause or halt for twenty years. Right here I desire to stop long enough to correct a popular misapprehension.

"That rush was not the result of, nor was it kept up by, an expensive, well-planned and systematic advertising campaign hatched and financed by Los Angeles. On the contrary, with the exception of maintaining a few exhibits of large pumpkins, embalmed fruits and walnut elephants, balmed fruits and walnut elephants, its effective advertising to the irreduceable minimum.

BEST ADVERTISEMENT.

"The real advertising Southern California received cost nothing; it came from contented buyers, from the thousands of men and women so startled by the contrast between snowbound, blizzard-swept prairies and the orange-scented valleys of their new home that their letters to stay-behinds teemed with adoration and wonder, overflowed with the marvels of a painless winter and a dry summer.

"It was the word-of-mouth, take-my-pen-in-hand advertising that filled the westbound trains wherever the excursion rates were in effect. And after this volunteer advertising had brought the newcomers, Southern California got up at 5 a.m., worked and schemed till midnight to entertain them, feed them and make them comfortable at a minimum cost. Look at the cafeterias! If Los Angeles did not invent them, at least it made the idea of wrestling with a tray to save and work up an appetite so popular that nowadays the self-help palacios everywhere are crowded even though the item of saving has been eliminated while the gratuitous tray-wrestling remains, aggravated by the saccharine strains of the save-yourself orchestra.

"Southern California built hotels of all sizes and grades to suit every purse, erected miles of light, medium and heavyweight housekeeping apartments, signposted every main road for motorists, arranged inexpensive one and two-day rides to all points of interest, built half a dozen Coney Islands for the frivolous and thousands of churches for the devout, pioneered the way in the length and quality of motor roads, laid out golf links by the score, just to keep the visiting climate-seekers and sightseers amused and entertained for the longest possible time. Its real estaters did the rest.

"They sold 'em. Most certainly they did sell 'em. Not only did they sell the lots, but they made it easy for the new lot owners to build the cosiest, most attractive and convenient bungalows, houses that revolutionized American domestic architecture, for $500 down and the balance like rent—plus little items like taxes, repairs, insurance, etc. Of course, these lots at the time of their sale were priced too high, but nobody cared. While the influx of newcomers lasted and the population grew like the number of books by the members of the American peace commission, land values climbed so fast that even the most audaciously brazen lot merchant couldn't keep more than four or five years ahead of them. So in the end both seller and buyer profited and both were content."

TEAMWORK RESPONSIBLE.

Teamwork, Mr. Woehlke asserts, turned the desert into a garden and helped to make Los Angeles the greatest city west of Chicago. He continues:

"Thrift, intelligent perseverance, foresighted enterprise and teamwork have enabled the new element to transform the despised desert end of the Golden State into a Hesperidian garden, to build in a spot lacking even ordinary commercial advantages the largest city west of Chicago, to create harbors out of dry land and, Sunday-schools and the single standard notwithstanding, to hatch and rear the greatest film-producing center on the planet. Which is going some.

"I mentioned teamwork in the preceding paragraph. There are a million persons practicing it in Southern California, the real estaters in the lead. They actually boost the other fellow's subdivision! Honestly, they do. If one of them discovers that he can't get the prospect's signature on the dotted line, he'll turn right around and praise the tract of the competitor. It isn't altruism. It's merely a clear recognition of the fact that population is the basis of land values, that every new resident, no matter where he settles, helps to lift the selling value of land everywhere in Southern California.

"Teamwork, though, is not confined to the land game. The ability to travel in double harness, to give up a part of the individual's right to do as he pleases in his own business, is the foundation of the prosperity Southern California's horticulturists have enjoyed for many years.

"For its own water supply the city of Los Angeles built the famous aqueduct that carries the Owens River from the east slope of the Sierra Nevada 225 miles south across deserts and mountain ranges to the city limits.

DESERT MADE FRUITFUL.

"They said twenty years ago that the big cities of Southern California, Los Angeles and San Diego, had no 'back country,' no far-flung rural territory to support the city industries. That was true. Realizing this weakness, the Southern California cities proceeded to eliminate it. Their capital diverted the waters of the Colorado River into the Colorado Desert, fiercest, most dreaded of all the Southwest's desert regions. When the first scraper started on the big ditch the Colorado Desert was literally as bare of human life as the north pole. Today, less than twenty years later, the excess products of this reclaimed desert, now the Imperial Valley, fill 120,000 freight cars every year; it supports almost 50,000 people and it will double that population by 1930. Its products range from dates, grapefruit, Pima long-staple cotton and milo maize to melons, butter and midwinter lettuce.

In the palmiest day of its greatest prosperity, say ten years ago, Los Angeles thought it had reached the limit when it erected buildings with a total value of $30,000,000 in one year. In 1920 the value of its new buildings exceeded $60,000,000; except New York and Chicago, no other American community showed a greater building activity than the Angel City. This year the gait is even faster. During the first five months the value of new buildings reached almost $28,000,000 or $70,000,000 for the year. San Diego and Long Beach, with less than 100,000 population, were showing greater building activity, both in the number and total value of permits, than St. Louis with 773,000 inhabitants, than St. Paul, Kansas City and Buffalo.

For fifteen years Los Angeles capital has been building hydroelectric plants to bring power from ever-increasing distances, yet there has never been enough and it has always been necessary to enlarge the steam plants using crude oil as fuel. Now Los Angeles proposes to solve the power problem for all time by developing the hydroelectric possibilities of the Colorado River below the Grand Canyon, where one dam is to develop 900,000 horse power, an amount equal to the entire output of all the hydroelectric plants now operating in California.

Of course the wise, practical men of the West lift their eyebrows elegantly when the project is mentioned. "Some more hot air from the Climate factory," they say with a patronizing smile. They lifted the eyebrows in the same expressive way when the big ditch from the Colorado River into the Colorado Desert was started; they smiled knowingly when Los Angeles first proposed to build an aqueduct 225 miles long to bring to the city water which was not needed at the time. They forgot that foresight, perseverance and intelligent teamwork can move mountains; they overlook the fact that Southern California was the most unpromising part of the Golden State and has by the work of its inhabitants been pushed into the front rank among Pacific Coast communities.

Performance, after all, is the factor that counts in the life of communities as well as of individuals. Southern California has been the most consistent performer in the Far West, the envy of its rivals, the pacemaker and ribbon-winner. And while the blizzards blow over the prairies of Iowa and Kansas, while the broad Mississippi Valley continues to produce corn and wheat, to swelter in summer and freeze in winter, Southern California will continue to perform.

OBSTRUCTED BY GRAVES.

Road-building in China is a difficult task. Along the great coastal strip of this republic it is next to impossible to find a stone for the foundation and top dressing of roads. Furthermore, the Chinese graves seriously interfere with road-building programs.

The Chinese worship the spirits of their ancestors. They do not bury their dead. The coffin is simply placed on the ground in the open field and earth heaped over it until the mound reaches a height of five feet or more. The cone-shaped graves, sometimes as high as fifteen feet, are so numerous that they often touch at the base and cover miles of territory. The Chinese will remove their graves only after much argument and mental anguish. Obviously, this makes it extremely difficult to get the right of way to build a straight road.

However, it is inevitable that this condition of affairs will not endure forever. "Better roads" is a slogan frequently heard in China these days. The untapped resources of China will some day find an outlet, and the republic will take its place as one of the most powerful nations in the world.—[Japan Advertiser.

Gray sky which bends above the blue-gray hills
And curtains them in filmy clouds of rain;
Soft winds which rise and fall, to rise again
Scented with clover blooms; the cool air thrills
To hidden harmonies; a bird note fills
Ethereal vistas where one's feet would fain
Explore, and so exploring, there remain
To wander on amid the fields and rills.
Midsummer's gentle spirit broods anew
Over the silvery reaches stretching far,
And ere day passes like a soft caress
Comes twilight with its touch of tenderness
Turning the clouds to roses; one clear star,
A golden love-light shines from out the blue!

SIBERIA BOTH HOT AND COLD.

Temperatures Range from the Highest to Lowest.

Mystery Land Has Less Snow Than United States.

Tropical Tiger, Arctic Reindeer Seen Together.

BY FREDERIC McCORMICK.

[Copyright, 1921.]

I left the coast of British Columbia at the end of May, and am below Attu, approaching Kamchatka. Russia is the land of rich embarrassment and extreme variety, and in Siberia has almost any offering one may want from the laboratory of nature. The impression is that of limitless summer resort possibilities in East Siberia for the whole Pacific area north of the equator. The Arctic regions have the North Pole, the magnetic pole, and the pole of cold. North America has the magnetic pole, but East Siberia has the pole of cold for all Asia and probably of the whole of the Northern Hemisphere. This pole is only about 1500 miles to the northwest. It is a little above the Arctic Circle, and its temperature for the three winter months averages 51 deg. below zero.

As if to prove that there was no uninhabitable place in all Russia, a settlement has been maintained here under the name of Verkhoyansk. It was made famous by being put in the list of resorts to which to send political exiles. The supposition was that it would be most undesirable to them. Two scientific records show 81, 83 and 87 deg. below zero at Verkhoyansk, and it is a gruesome witticism that, not content with this, the Czar went to the other extreme and made it hot for the exiles there. It was both a winter and a summer resort.

In summer it is very hot in the latitude of Verkhoyansk—only a little farther north than Fort Yukon, in Alaska, where the thermometer at noon, not in the direct rays of the sun, may be seen standing at 112, and where spirit thermometers graduated up to 120 deg. often burst under the scorching sun of Arctic midsummer. The heat which comes with spring melts ice and snow into floods, which overflow fields and often destroy crops, as in Alaska.

PEASANTS' FREEZING KISS.

I have seen child-like Siberian peasants take very affectionate farewells made up of the national kiss immoderately extended. When they linger over these amenities their beards freeze together, which is rather unpleasant, but can be remedied with a sharp knife or a pair of scissors. Applying a similar mechanism to remove the ice bogey from popular prejudice regarding Siberia, there is left a country on our own frontier and border here in the North Pacific very much like our own Northwest and the Canadian West. But with striking and embarrassing superiorities.

Siberia, taken altogether, is hot compared with Canada. Canada is several sorts of a country in one, Siberia is a dozen. There is less snow in Siberia than in America. In East Siberia, south of the latitude corresponding to Labrador in Canada, there is almost no snow. It is warmer than Alaska and the Canadian Northwest. At least in the arable belt no evidence that it has experienced an ice age has been found. It has not been scoured by glaciers in any recent geological period as have the Northern States of America. Study of the soil by the Russian Emigration Bureau shows that the country has been eroded by water rather than by ice. There are no round rock surfaces, nor rounded, ice-worn forms. Alaska, Western Canada and Northern United States is the land of glaciers. Siberia has been found to be entirely free from glaciers, although in 1899 the existence of glaciers was finally shown in two places in Kamchatka.

Canadians say that we, to the south, regard Canada as an Arctic wilderness and write letters to our newspapers stating it is nothing of the kind. If Siberians knew what we think of their country they would do the same.

BOTH HOT AND COLD.

Siberia has tropical products. The tropical tiger and the Arctic reindeer often are brought together by man, but only once by nature, and then it is in East Siberia. The tiger clings to East Siberia and evidently is waiting the return of the equatorial climate. He meets there the Arctic reindeer, while the northern bear takes his winter sleep alongside the trail of the southern camel.

Truly, East Siberia has no lack of refrigeration; a cold current from the Sea of Okhotsk supplies the coast of Saghalin with chilling fogs and flows along the whole Siberian shore southward. The soil of all East Siberia freezes. The thickest freeze is permanent, and is below the earth's surface. When first studied, in 1908, borings were made to a depth of 180 feet north of the Amur River. In one place the frost descended 125 feet. In another the permanent freeze was only twenty-six feet—three of moss, ten of peat, six of pure ice, and again frozen peat. The thaw descends only three feet unless the ground is cultivated, when it reaches six feet. But it never can conquer the freeze. The winter air is coldest, and therefore, heaviest. It descends where the earth is porous or has been opened, to almost unlimited depths, freezing everything until it reaches the point where it is overcome by the earth's interior temperature. All holes or pockets in the earth below the three-foot mark are perpetual natural refrigerators. If water seeps in, an ice cellar is immediately formed where the temperature remains permanently low, summer and winter.

There are other evidences of a cool temperature in East Siberia. For nine months of the year the full-dress costume for men and women in the northern part includes two thicknesses of fur skins from head to foot. Added to this is an article of dress which probably has no counterpart in the rest of the world. It is archaniks—black tippets from the tails of Siberian squirrels. They are caught between the teeth to protect the lower part of the face when going against the cold wind.

CHIN-MUFF NECESSARY.

We have the muffler and the ear-muff. This is the chin-muff and lip-protector. The kotlanka or main garment is of reindeer skin. It has a hood bordered with soft dog or wolf fur. The boots, corresponding to the Alaskan mukaluk, are soled with bear—or seal skin. Pants are of buckskin, and there are fur mittens. Such a costume formerly suggested nothing but the Arctic region and Siberia. Fur was associated only with polar cold. In Kakutsk, however, in East Siberia's coldest province, the native costume besides cap, trousers and boots, sometimes is only a shirt and one sheepskin coat. And in this a native will stand on a street corner in a temperature of 46 deg. below zero, laughing, joking, and thinking of anything but the weather. Or, if he thinks of the weather, regards it as a part of the incomparable capital of his ancestors—the haunt of balmy days.

The variety in East Siberia's climate is due to the "roof of the world" in Central Asia on the south of which flow cold winds in winter, to the vast Arctic incline whence come polar gales, to the Pacific Ocean's warm and cold currents, to the transparent atmosphere through which the sun pours, and to the Stanovoi Mountains running entirely across East Siberia, breaking the Arctic winds of winter and giving protection to the southern arable zone.

As a result, the American coast of Kamchatka is apparently colder than our shore opposite, but it is relatively free from ice. The limit of the ice pack is much farther north on the Siberian side than on the American, and the Siberian shore is open to navigation two months earlier than is the American. The fur traders and whalers already have passed up along the Kamchatkan shore on their way to Bering Sea and the Arctic Ocean.

CLIMATE VARIABLE.

The south Siberian coast has cold winters and wet summers. The southern arable belt is nearly snowless and there is nothing to even suggest the climate of the Arctic. It has a summer temperature six degrees higher than that of England. The mean temperature at Irkutsk is higher than that of London. Vladivostok corresponds in temperature with Portland, Me., Habarovsk with Boston and Blagovestchensk with Buffalo.

East Siberia has both a tropical heat and a cold that burns. It has not "the doubtful blessing of a warm climate." It has transparent skies and cold invigorating air. All northern East Siberia is not less promising than the territory of the Upper Yukon. Even at Verkhoyansk the mean annual temperature is 4 deg. above zero. And Verkhoyansk probably has seen more of civilization than any place on earth of a similar temperature. It had the cultivated political exiles; it was visited by the American relief party sent to rescue De Long and his companions. The polar route always has been a water route, because the water is warmer than the land. This is perhaps the only instance on record where the return from an Arctic expedition was made by way of the pole of cold.

Winter in East Siberia is like that in Minesota. It gets hot in June, with clear blue skies. The country is flooded with sunshine; the air is soft as in California and the Southwest. Everywhere are flowering acacia, wild cherry, rhodrodendron and wild flowers. In some parts there is brilliant sunshine almost throughout the year. When "northward empire takes its way," as it has in the past, its next home doubtless will be in East Siberia, the near country. What leads me to believe this I will tell in my succeeding letters.

INDIA GETS RARE GEMS.

Two famous Mogul jewels which have shared adventures with the celebrated Kohinoor diamond are to be sent from London to India to be restored to one of its great museums.

It was at Delhi that the jewels were probably made for the Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan, about 1650. One is an emerald bow ring designed to protect the left thumb when a strained bowstring is released, and the other is an emerald toilet cup, mounted in gold jeweled with rubies, the foot being chased and partly overlaid with translucent gold enamel. Each jewel is carved from a single stone.

After the sack of Delhi in 1739 these treasures—and others—were carried off by Nadir Shah, ruler of Persia and Afghanistan, and they were restored by the fugitive, Shah Sujah, to Ranjit Sing at Lahore in 1813. They were found with the regalia in the Lahore royal treasury at the end of the second Siku War in 1849 and were bought by the Governor-General of that day, Lord Dalhousie.

They passed to his daughter, and after her death were for several years on loan in the Victoria and Albert Museum. During the war they were put under cover for safety.—[Detroit News.

DELL DEFINES REALISM CULT.

solutely necessary to enable me to understand the story. And feeling this way myself, I can sympathize with the reader who does not want every button on the hero's coat, every brick in every wall, every knife and fork and spoon in every meal, described at length. What is more, I do not want every departure of our spoken language from grammatical and historical perfection called to my attention. "Whaddaya want?" "I've gotta go"—this kind of faithfulness to the manner of spoken speech seems to me merely banal—and it is inaccurate besides. If we are going to phoneticize the spelling of quoted speech we shall have to use a special phonetic alphabet. As to slang, I know of no American writers who faithfully report it—and it would bore us to death if they did. These things are not of the essence of truth.

Some very great books, and some very true books, have been written in which there was no attempt at any literal rendering of people's speech, or any photographic picture of the circumstances amidst which they dwelt. It has been the custom for about 100 years to "set" the stage of fiction rather elaborately; but it is a thing that can easily be overdone. It defeats its own end when it is thus overdone, because the reader is obliged in any case to depend upon his own memory. You cannot make a reader see something he has never seen before. You can only stimulate his imagination so that he will remember, or piece together out of scattered memories, appropriate facts. When you tell him that Rose-Ann was beautiful, he does not see your Rose-Ann; he sees his own Mary, Jane or Alice. And unless the color of your heroine's hair is made somehow significant, he will forget it, and see it as the color of Mary's, Alice's or Jane's! He is, in a word, not interested in accidental facts; he is interested in essential truths. And unless you have something to tell him about his Alice, Jane or Mary, he will never listen to what you have to say about your Rose-Ann. He will yawn, look at his watch and put the book aside—no matter how "realistically," with what photographic exactness, you have described the way her gold-bronze hair falls over her equisitely modeled temples!

What, then, is realism? I suspect that it is simply writing about things we all know something about—familiar American life. Unless we have something to reveal concerning that life, all our exactness will not save us. But if we can show the strange in the familiar, the beautiful in the commonplace, the glorious and perhaps tragic loveliness of everyday life, then we shall not be asked to write romantic fables about the Yukon or the South Seas or the three musketeers—for all the things which we find in stories of these remote and romantic places and times will be revealed to us, truthfully, in our own daily lives, here and now. The life of an ordinary man, if the truth were told, is quite as interesting as that of any fabled hero of romance. And that truth—the interesting, the exciting, the thrilling truth about ordinary life, is what we are trying to learn and tell.

LOVE BUYS GYPSY BRIDE.

Although it is the custom among the gypsies to have the parents of the prospective bridegroom purchase a wife for their son, covetous wealthy candidates are not always successful even when bidding larger sums for the maiden's hand.

When the mother of a girl among the gypsies takes a liking to a young man and considers him suitable for her daughter, a nominal price will always get the bride-to-be, even though there are other offers much higher by men not so well liked.

Under the traditional customs of the gypsies, the younger generation has no voice in determining their mates and the matching is a matter for the parents only.

Generally the mother of a young man, usually around his nineteenth year, picks out a girl, dickers with her parents, and buys her outright.

Then they are married, according to gypsy law, after which the groom's parents, in almost every case, start him in business of some kind to make a livelihood.—[Detroit News.

BATTLE OF KOSSOVO.

An Important But Almost Forgotten Event.

On Kossovo plain in Central Serbia 532 years ago today was fought a battle which, though its name is all but unknown in America, has profoundly affected the course of life of practically every American. On that distant 28th of June the last remaining independent ruler in the Balkans went down in defeat, though he did not surrender, before the invading hosts of Islam. Seven years ago, in the course of the celebrations with which the Serbs have always kept alive the memory of that fateful anniversary, a Serbian from the unredeemed districts of Austria-Hungary assassinated the Hapsburg heir, who, in an ill-advised moment had been sent to participate in the ceremonies at Sarajevo.

The step across those 500 years is not less clear than the step across the seven-year gap that separates us today from that momentous event at Sarajevo. The Serbs who remembered their past glories through five centuries of Turkish night and who never lost their determination that some day, somehow, they would again be free are the same Serbs who caught the gleam at the beginning of the great war and never lost sight of it through years of defeat. Kossovo Day has a new meaning since the war. It reminds us of the inexorable logic with which time works out its problems, despite the planning of statesmen and the will of strong peoples. It tells us quietly that we may barricade ourselves behind Sandy Hook and lock the Golden Gate, but that Americans cannot guarantee themselves immunity from consequences flowing out of the struggle between Serbs and Turks on the Field of the Blackbirds centuries before Pershing set sail for France.—[New York Evening Post.

SAD SMILE IS COMEDY STYLE.

Lila Lee Uses Hers to Win Gallant Arbuckle.

How Tweenie's Destiny Now Leads to Pie-Dodging.

An Apoplectic Wedding and a Dainty Bride.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

A trim little dark-eyed girl, holding a shower bouquet, stood beside a very stout man in a gray suit. The girl wore a frightened look, while the man's face registered the hectic flush of excitement. Both were apparently greatly upset over the presence of a coatless individual who had planted himself in front of them, regarding them with intense disapproval. The stout man was flustered. With one hand he clutched the girl by the arm, and with the other he made a vain effort to probe his pockets. He grew more apoplectic as the moments went on, his search apparently fruitless. Suddenly an inspiration dawned on him and he grasped his suspenders just above the button, and with a sudden smile managed to extract a thin circular band of gold that was held there.

If you had been watching the enacting of this scene you would have said to yourself that it was all out of proportion—the fat man, and the tiny girl, the minister in his shirt-sleeves, the wedding ring on the suspenders. Yes, undoubtedly. But then it had to be, because the scene was for the picture, "Freight Prepaid," in which Roscoe Arbuckle is now starring at Lasky studio. You'd hate just as much as I would to see "Fatty" in anything as regular as a drama, and he's not giving himself a chance to go that way at all, for he's put the loud pedal on the jazz, and the soft pedal on the slow music in all his later pictures.

And Lila Lee, who is his leading woman, has to act accordingly. Which means not only acting as such, but perhaps a little dodging as well, for it is not beyond the probabilities that this clever little girl may have to sidestep a charlotte russe or a chocolate eclaire before she is through with her career as the leading woman for Mr. Arbuckle.

Maybe you've wondered, as I have, just how it happened that Miss Lee happened to engage in the venturesome business of playing opposite such a slapstick virtuoso as Arbuckle, especially since the arrangement has now held through quite a series of pictures. You might apply the rule of proportions quite satisfactorily, of course. It's easy to see that Fatty looks fatter with a small leading woman than he would with a large one.

But really what is back of the whole thing is probably Miss Lee's success as Tweenie in "Male and Female." The connection might seem a little vague, but this is more apparent than real. You see, anyone who happened to play the lead opposite Arbuckle regularly would have to be something of a pathetic heroine. It means looking at life in a big way, and if you've followed modern literature, you know, that looking at life in a big way has induced a lot of pessimism in many authors. And the same probably applies to playing opposite so large a star as Arbuckle.

Anyway, it was the pathetic strain in Miss Lee's work that made her suited to this type of character. But she doesn't adhere to that one line all the time. She's varying her program quite nicely in the latest picture, called "Freight Prepaid," for she does a dual role.

"It is the first dual role I ever played," said Miss Lee. "In one part I am a very demure, very innocent and ingenuous little girl from the country—one of those shy maidens whose rosy cheeks and shining eyes proclaim her rural birth and breeding.

"In the other part I am a society

Kinema's Bill for Next Week "Remodeling."

Bertie was not such a mollycoddle as his father would believe him to be. As a matter of fact, Bertie was a gay boy. He also has an uncle who thinks all the girls are wonderful. Bertie and uncle get together, and meet one girl. Then their troubles begin.

Carter de Haven essays Bertie, in his own breezy style. De Haven knows enough of New York and New York ways, theater, cabaret, and taxi bills to fully comprehend the possibilities which are offered in the cinematization of Stanislaus Stange's "The Girl in the Taxi," so he is sure to afford, with his pretty wife as leading partner, Kinema audiences two days of clean and wholesome fun while the picture is playing.

"The Girl in the Taxi" will be shown for the last times tonight, because the Kinema is to be closed for five days for an extensive remodeling and redecorating program.

The gala reopening will fall on Saturday, August 6, with Charles Ray in his own picturization of Charles E. Van Loan's story, "Scrap Iron," as the feature attraction.

One of the most brilliant events in the history of Los Angeles motion-picture presentation will be the surrounding program for reopening week, now under rehearsal under the direction of Edward A. Smith, managing director.

MADE HER FAME IN POLITICS.

But Acting Came Naturally to Mary Newcomb.

Her Powers of Persuasion and Her Roguish Smile.

How She Played Star Role in Robert Edeson's Life.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

That tired feeling passes the minute you meet Mary Newcomb, otherwise known as the interviewer's delight. That tired feeling simply can't exist anywhere around her; the atmosphere is too full of pep, physical and mental. But that's not all. She has done more interesting things in her short life than most of us accomplish in a whole big bunch of years.

So you just sit tight and let Mary do it. You feel sure in the first place that you'll never quite get a chance to peep around all the corners of her mind. Then you find out her career is so fascinating that you sit right down again and sharpen up your pencil, letting Totty Two-Shoe, with whom you have an engagement later, wait.

Maybe you've said catty things about her getting her job because she's Bob Edeson's wife, but pretty soon you've forgotten she's anybody except just Marry Newcomb.

"No, no," said Mary Newcomb, "as she sat down in her airproof dressing-room at the Majestic, the other morning, "I really don't mind at all getting down to meet you here at the theater at 10 o'clock!"

You've got to be something of a politician to say that convincingly, haven't you, after you've worked until 12 the night before, even if you do look fresh and peachy-skinned?

Afterward you find out that Mary's dad was Josiah T. Newcomb—he has a regular name, hasn't he?—for ten years State Senator to the New York Legislature, and then it occurs to you that Mary is something of a politician herself.

Oh, she's proven it! She's one of the host of lovely young New York women who looked so darned pretty on talking about suffrage that she persuaded every cold, steelly, logical masculine being who heard her that women ought to vote.

Can you imagine any male refusing her anything from suffrage to soda water? And she really made a wonderful talk, too. Everybody says that who heard her.

In fact, Anna Shaw wanted to make a Unitarian minister of her, and her father tried to persuade her to study law. She did it, too, the latter, I mean.

But, after all, what could Blackstone mean in a young girl's life? Even an earnest, brilliant young lady like Mary? For one thing, law's too static an occupation. But at that she did put in several months poking over those funny old books.

Father Newcomb was very strong for women's freedom. He was one of the strongest advocates for feminism in the country. But when his own daughter, following the precepts she had heard preached since childhood, proposed going out to talk for suffrage—well, that was different. But she faced him down with his own arguments, so he let her go. She wrote to Mrs. Carrie Catt, not telling who her father was, wishing to get along on her own, and Mrs. Catt invited her to help in the suffrange ranks.

SUFFRAGE AND SPEECHES.

So she became a suffrage organizer at the age of 17, and worked for three years. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale taught her how to speak in public; her father helped coach her in her ideas—that is, he helped her, some.

But she had lived so long in the atmosphere of suffrage doctrines that she really didn't need much help. She made speeches all over the East. They even sent her up to the Adirondacks to practice on the mountain folk.

"And, oh, the lady antis!" she

"CLOSED DOORS" AT HIPPODROME TODAY.

The charming Vitagraph star, Alice Calhoun, comes to the Hippodrome today in "Closed Doors," an absorbing tale of a neglected wife and how she brought her husband to a realization of his neglect. Critics are unanimous in their praise of Miss Calhoun for her natural and true-to-life portrayals.

A clever six-act vaudeville bill will provide warm-weather amusement. Johnson Brothers and Johnson offer a few moments of minstrelsy, while Marie Kell and Brower Brothers present a study in syncopation.

Gene and Minetti are a pair of charming versatile girlies in a merry cycle of music, melodies and harmony. Fred Schwartz and company offer "The Broken Mirror," a comic oddity with many laughable surprises. Margaret Merle, dainty prima donna and comedienne, and Palmero's Canine Circus complete a great bill, but with vastly different offerings.

RECORD FOR "KID."

"The Kid," Chaplin's comedy riot, showed approximately to 56,700,000 persons in the first twelve weeks after its release, it is announced. This is a total of 115,400 performances. "Judged by the life of other Chaplin pictures," says George Eavis of the Cleveland press, "this one still will be going strong in 1931."

FORMS COMEDY CAST.

In addition to Dorothy Devore, who carries the leading role, Al Christie is adding Earl Rodney, Eugenie Forde, Ward Caulfield and others to the cast of his new comedy. Christie has just returned from New York.

"CLEAR AND CLOUDY" AT OLD PANTAGES.

"Clear and Cloudy" are the three words which mean fun galore for the patrons of the Broadway Pantages, for it is the title of the new offering which Oklahoma Bob Albright is presenting, with Henry Sherr and the popular Broadway Follies company for the coming week, starting Monday.

Henry Sherr, as Abie Cohen, shows what a tame man can do when he goes wild, for, after inducing Mrs. Nifty Luke (Ethel Gray) to assist him in mixing a horse's neck (dead language) they both proceed to turn things upside down.

Special song numbers have been selected by Mr. Kemper, featuring all of the Broadway favorites. Oklahoma Bob has a special number that he has been saving for this show.

Grace Darling will be seen on the screen in "Every Man's Price."

DOG HAD OWN IDEAS.

Bert Lytell is taking a personal interest in the selection of the animals that appear with him in future pictures, following a recent experience that cost him an important part of a pair of trousers. In the filming of "Ladyfingers," a trained bulldog was scheduled to seize a chicken. But the dog, trained in comedies, in the excitement of the moment, performed the big trick of his professional career—rushed at Lytell and grasped the seat of his trousers, which gave way under the strain.

"PETER" PROMISES TO STAY WITH US.

That Robert Edeson's return to the speaking stage after a year's absence is keenly appreciated by theater-goers of this city is shown by the crowded houses that have witnessed his performance in Marian Wightman's comedy, "Peter," which commences the second week of its run at the Majestic this afternoon.

"Peter," which is being played for the first time in this city, is delightfully entertaining and tells a great human story. The dialogue is brilliant, the situations humorous, and the characters are types that one meets with in everyday life.

Mr. Edeson's performance is notable, while Mary Newcomb, as the wife, brings into the role all the charm that has endeared her to patrons of the house.

Some fine humor is furnished by Franklin Pangborn and Fred Cummings as the crooks. Marie Curtis give an excellent character portrayal, while Sara Sothern, as the wife of the would-be criminal, lends a touch of pathos to a very fine third act.

Good bits are contributed by Forrest Seabury, Henry Hall, Stanley Taylor, Clark Marshall, Master Stanton Williams and Helen Pitt.

JOINS "RUBAIYAT" CAST.

Richard Sterling has been signed by Ferdinand Pinney Earle to play the part of the general on the military staff of Nazim-ul-Mulk, grand vizier, in the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, now nearing completion at the Hollywood studio.

Interior Decorating—
The Art of Important Trifles

The masterpiece is the result of painstaking attention to seemingly unimportant details. It is a matter requiring no great study to decide that a davenport is out of place in a certain spot or that the upholstery design clashes with the color of the draperies.

Many of us know these things. But at the California Furniture Company is a group of experts who have made the study of interior decorating a life work. The result of this study is not alone the acquiring of an exquisite taste. This qualification is to be expected. It has also acquainted them with the importance of what many would consider trifles, slight nuances, delicate shadings that would be overlooked by any other than highly specialized knowledge.

The drape of a curtain perhaps tempers the severity of an awkward angle; the color of the draperies gives depth to a room too shallow; a properly placed rug lends generous proportions to a furniture crowded sa'on; a thoughtfully conceived angle of light relieves a lurking shadow that stalks beauty like a specter.

The interiors of many homes you have admired are undoubtedly the handiwork of this group of experts at the "California". The knowledge, advice and suggestions of these specialists are cheerfully offered you. And whether it be the decorating of one modest room or the entire furnishing of a stately mansion the same painstaking attention to detail and the same courteous consideration will be tendered.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

From "Fields of Dawn."

The damp south wind came slowly from the bay,
And with the drizzle brought the sea-birds, too—
Lone gulls far flying from their ocean blue,
And seeming lost in these confines of gray.
The river hills, so purple yesterday,
Now wrapped in mist, were blotted from our view;
The smoke hung flattened o'er the factory flue,
And veiled the steeples in a murky spray.
Turning we sought afar the ivied gate
That led us to the house whose ancient eaves
Hummed with the sparrow in the leafless vines;
Indoors we sat and turned the poets' leaves,
For if outside the spring was drear and late,
Eternal summer lived within their lines.

—[Lloyd Mifflin.

Stojana and Others.

An exhibition has just closed at the Exposition Park gallery, which a great many people interested in personal expression in art have found stimulating. This exhibition was formed of the work of five Los Angeles artists, several of whom are little known to the general picture-seeing public. They are Nick Briganti, Val Costello, Edouard Vysekal, Lawrence Murphy and George Stojana.

It is acknowledged that there is no final judgment on contemporary art, and that at the general exhibitions, where a jury governs entries, hardship is sometimes caused to those artists who experiment and whose art is not dressed in conventional technical dress. It has always been so, and although the jury system seems to be the best way of handling exhibitions we have so far evolved, still it is the duty and privilege of a progressive gallery to recognize these facts.

When it discovers an artist who is working alone and sincerely, and who has found or is finding his own particular path to art, regardless of convention, a path which will be of much interest to others, to show this work, is the duty of the gallery, so that all people may see what discoveries are being made in the world of aesthetics, and reject them or accept them as they please.

We are always intensely interested in the new discoveries in medicine, or in any branch of science; how much more so should we be interested in discoveries in aesthetics!

The present exhibition caused a great deal of discussion for and against, and that is one of the healthiest signs that could be asked for. Only then can one be sure art is not dead.

The most outstanding part of the present exhibition was the work of George Stojana.

Mr. Stojana exhibited some things he did three or four years ago, but most of them have been made within the last year or two during or since his return from the Hawaiian Islands. The earlier works show influences of several kinds. They are quiet, subtle, mystical and exceedingly beautiful, but in comparison with the later things too reminiscent of other artists.

In a short year or two Mr. Stojana advanced from what was perhaps too much restraint, too austere a simplicity, to richness, daring, power and fire. The Islands did it. One feels, in his later paintings, the impress of a strong personality which has at last found the field in which it can work, the material suited to it. George Stojana has come into "his own country."

By this it is not meant that he has realized everything, has fully expressed himself or achieved masterpieces. There is much confusion, fumbling, uncertainty, not a little lack of clarity and purpose. But in spite of all these shortcomings, art is there, if by art we mean the expression of life through the medium of a strong, sincere and definite personality.

Coming to the more evident qualities of Mr. Stojana's art, one is impressed with color relations that thrill one like rich music. This artist feels color. There is no science back of his color schemes; they have the spontaneity of a flower that grows because it must. This artist has an instinct for decoration that is a "gift"—so to call it—springing from his own personality like a natural force.

Even if the spectator was distressed with Mr. Stojana's lack of realism, disturbed by his disregard for drawing in the usual literal and academic sense of the word, the emotional power of his color failed in few cases to "get across." This power was so great that it alone caused many people to push aside prejudices against what they thought were shortcomings and to enjoy the color for its own sake.

These strange canvases had the power to carry the sensitive mind away to hot and exotic lands, away from movies and cafeterias, to cool, deep, tropical shadows—to simple, serene life—and the peculiar thing about it all was that much of this was accomplished through the suggestion of color alone, and not through objective drawing.

And the frames to these canvases were almost as interesting as the pictures themselves. One could not imagine a gold frame around them. Mr. Stojana made the frames out of paper, and the same fertility of imagination, the same decorative quality inherent in the pictures, were apparent in these. The frames were a source of delight to designer and layman and artist.

Mr. Stojana is a Slav, and it is natural for him to find his greatest joy among primitive, simple people. If conditions are favorable, so that he may work undisturbed among them, it is difficult to say how far he will develop. He has just only landed on the shores of this, his own country, and it will be interesting to see how far he will penetrate inland.

Edouard Vysekal exposed, in the same gallery, a number of his recent canvases.

This artist is always interesting, curious, eager and constantly experimenting. He can always be found on the side of the forward-looking movements in art, and one feels a genuine sincerity in his work.

He showed many sides of his temperment in the last exhibition. There were three portaits exhibited, a still life, a number of landscapes and a large figure study. All of these were exceedingly well painted. Perhaps the little water colors were as fine as anything, although the recent portrait of Mrs. Vysekal and the one of Mlle. R. show that Vysekal can paint exceedingly interesting "counterfeit presentments."

Mr. Vysekal is a promising artist, and his courage to experiment, united with his undoubted technical ability, will carry him far. One does feel, however, that he relies too much on color theory and science, and that if he would allow himself to "let himself go" more than he does he would achieve a more personal color vision. However, that is something for each artist to work out for himself.

Lawrence Murphy showed a small group of water colors. These were delicate, fragmentary things, exceedingly well drawn and painted, elusive and charming in spirit.

Nick Briganti exhibited a number of drawings in pencil from the figure and a few water colors. In his work one feels a talent trying to find its own path, but still too young and inexperienced fully to realize it.

Val Costello exhibited some very fine pastels. This medium seems to be adapted, by a perfect "temperamental affinity," to Mr. Costello. The pictures were fine, interesting and small in size, giving promises of greater things in the future. It is to be hoped that Mr. Costello, who, as it happens, is busy with other things quite outside of painting, will find the time to carry his art farther and do more ambitious things. Undoubtedly he has the talent for them.

On the whole, this exhibition was one of the most interesting held for some time in Exposition Park, for it showed a phase of aesthetic research that is helpful to artist and public alike.

Loan Exhibition.

A most attractive exhibition is that which opened July 22 at Exposition Park, to close September 5. It contains no less than sixty-one canvases, some of them very important, and beautiful, the works of artists from many lands and many periods. All the pictures have been loaned by art lovers and art owners of Los Angeles and Pasadena.

The very names of these artists are an appetizer—a foretaste of the feast that is to be set before you when you come to the pictures themselves. Let me enumerate a few, with the promise of brief comments on their pictures in this column next week.

We are shown a little masterpiece in water color by Nils Blommers, "Dutch Interior;" a magnificent portrait by Boldini, a wonderful winter landscape, "Silvered Stream," by John Carlson; an interesting lithograph, "The Bathers," by Cezanne; a series of finely decorative things by Arthur B. Davies; a very small Diaz, not thoroughly representative, however; a beautifully painted Gerome, "Algerian Girls;" a Childe Hassam, an Harpignies, a Robert Henri, several Jean Francois Millets in the artist's earlier manner, the Macmonnies "Bacchante" in sculpture, a Monticelli, two J. H. Sharps, a George Stojana, though it is not in his "Hawaiian manner;" an H. O. Tanner, two William Wendts—and so on, and so forth.

You'll not neglect this exhibition, I sincerely hope and believe!

Progress Since Signing of Armistice.

EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
YORK, July 30.—Research

Elmer A. Sperry, inventor and of the executive board of Engineering Foundation, who at commencement received the of doctor of science from Institute of Technology,
N. J.

Sperry is one of a group of and engineers headed by F. Rand who are seeking the Engineering Foundation, headed by Ambrose Swasey,
American industrial re-on a permanent basis. Tre-progress, it is stated, has made in research by the na-and the next report of the Research Council will that within this period many of laboratories have been to those devoted to this kind industrial effort. Through the re-gyro compass, with which ships as the Mauretania are able to steer so straight a course that the saving in the fuel item alone has been found to be the entire cost of the equipment every few hundred hours of service, was perfected as the result of research begun after the inventor had watched his three small sons playing with some mechanical toys, said Mr. Sperry, illustrating the part the Engineering Foundation is beginning to play in industry.

"It is nothing short of wonderful what can be accomplished by research if properly applied to even the smallest clews. This is illustrated by the gyro compass, which is now rapidly taking its place as a navigational instrument of high precision," continued Mr. Sperry.

"The magnetic compass was an instrument of infinite service, especially when all ships were wooden or when wood predominated as a building material for ships.

"When magnetic compasses were used on iron and steel ships, a new set of conditions came in that upset all previous calculations, and it was found that the magnetic needle much preferred to content itself by pointing at a north pole which had been riveted into the ship at some point in its structure than to point at the earth's north pole many thousands of miles away. As steel ships commenced to be used it was found to be a very difficult task to tease the magnetic needle into anything that simulated decent behavior.

"It is in the greatest contrast to this performance that we find the gyro compass. Here we have indications that deal with true geographical meridians with a high degree of precision, there being no such thing as deviation or variation. Magnetism has nothing to do with it—we care not in what magnetic condition our ship is. In fact, there are no forces known that will disturb a properly constructed gyro compass.

TAKES GOLD FROM MEXICO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LAREDO (Tex.) July 30.—Some idea of the amount of United States money, chiefly currency and gold that was in circulation in Mexico at the time the decree of President Obregon, prohibiting its acceptance as a circulating medium went into effect on July 1, may be had when it is authoritatively stated that more than $50,000,000 have been shipped out of that country since the beginning of the present month. Of this sum approximately $12,000,000 of United States currency came from Tampico; $10,000,000 from Mexico City, and the remainder from border towns, mining centers and various parts of the country where there are American interests.

For the most part the money was brought out of Mexico by representatives of banks and large industrial concerns. In some instances novel devices were adopted to get the money to this side of the border without it falling into the hands of bandits. In every case the money was brought over as private baggage of trusted messengers or bank officials. One bank official of Tampico safely delivered five suit cases full of United States bank notes, amounting to $3,000,000, to a bank in Houston the other day. Getting this fortune out of Mexico was an experience which the man says he would not care to undertake again.

However, he declared that he felt more uneasy when he reached this side of the border than while he was in Mexico. Especially was this true, he asserted, when he got into Houston, where only a day or two before bandits had held up and robbed an express car in the railroad station. Herding the five heavy suitcases day and night for three days was no small or easy task. He kept them piled up in the seat beside him while traveling, and assumed as nonchalant air as possible so as not to indicate the value of the contents of the pieces of baggage.

INSECTS ARE ELECTROCUTED.

Texas Shocks Poor Boll Weevil to Death.

Machines Are Manufactured in Austin.

Current Via Cotton Stalks Kills the Eggs.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) July 28.—Insect electrocution machines are being manufactured in Austin and are being put to practical use for the eradication of the cotton boll weevil and pink boll worm. It is expected that the new invention will save the cotton farmers many millions of dollars a year by the destruction of the insect pests which are the cause of enormous losses annually. The machine is the invention of Clarke Blanks, former student of the University of Texas, and at the present time living in Austin. Mr. Blanks stated that the new invention has been used for several years on his plantation near Lockhart, and has proved entirely successful.

In brief, the new machine consists of a small gasoline engine, a generator, and the necessary electrical apparatus for conducting the current from the generator to the cotton stalk and to the ground. The outfit is carried on the regular cotton cultivator and is constructed to be operated while plowing is being done with the cultivator. This arrangement eliminates the necessity of making a special trip over the field for the purpose of exterminating the weevils.

The generator provides an electrical current of several volts which is conducted through a series of "feelers" to the ground and to the cotton stalk. This current kills all eggs, larva and pupa of the weevil, not only saving the actual crop in process of growing, but also in time meaning destruction of the species altogether through inability of any additional weevils to reach maturity. No attempt is made to destroy the parent weevil, as that insect flies about and practically makes it impossible. It is stated, however, that the actual crop can be saved by the invention, and, as already pointed out, the parent weevil in time exterminated.

CHANGE BLOOD OF CATERPILLARS.

Insects Made to Produce Silk of Colors That Are Desired.

Experiments made in France, it is reported, show that the yellow and green colors possessed by the silk spun by certain caterpillars are due to coloring matter derived from the food and passed through the blood of the spinners. By impregnating leaves with artificial colors the experiments caused some species of caterpillars to produce silk of bright orange-yellow and fine rose hues. By the aid of the spectroscope the the presence and nature of colored pigments in the blood of the little creatures were established. — [Washington Star.

NEW EVENTS IN WORLD OF ART.

Melrose Hill will be open to the public this afternoon, and the faculty and students of the Donaldson-Schaeffer Summer School will be "at home" to their friends. An exhibition of the work accomplished through the session just closed will also be held.

An exhibition of recent work by three Los Angeles artists is being held at the Hollywood Art Shop, 6802 Hollywood Boulevard. The artists represented are Dana Bartlett, painter, Ella Buchanan, sculptor, and Laura M. D. Mitchell, miniaturist.

A series of Los Angeles etchings by Loren Barton of Los Angeles is held in the Helgesen galleries, 345 Sutter street, San Francisco, from July 18 to August 6. Subjects recently etched by Miss Barton in San Francisco are also shown. One of Miss Barton's etchings was recently reproduced in Vogue, a portrait of Arliss, the actor.

The artists of Carmel and the Peninsula are holding an exhibition at Carmel from July 23 to September 15. The showing is one of the most attractive ever held at Carmel. A number of Los Angeles painters are among the exhibitors.

The Three Arts Club, at 1001 West Washington, the club's new and commodious quarters, gave a tea and held a little exhibition last Friday afternoon.

The seventh annual exhibit of the Provincetown, Mass. Art Association will open at Provincetown July 31, to close September 16. Let's go!

ESTABLISHED 1881

An Important Factor in Buying Furs is the Confidence You Have in the Firm

August Sale of Furs

Steps into Prominence Monday as the Ultimate in Quality and Sale Value

A collection of furs so gorgeous, so perfect in quality and styling, that, were there no Sale Value in connection with the event, it would still present an ensemble worthy of every woman's attention.

Hamburger's merchandise men and fur experts spent months in the fur marts of the metropolis personally selecting the furs. Every piece from snug little choker to the gorgeous mink wrap sketched has been carefully, individually chosen from the stocks of the leading furriers of the country.

The Concentration of Hamburger's Unlimited Purchasing Power, Toward the End of Presenting the Best Values Possible, Has Resulted in These—The Most Remarkable Fur Prices in Years!

In all sincerity we would stress the QUALITY, the perfect matching of pelts, the exquisite workmanship, the distinctive styling that brings more grace of line, more novelty of treatment than has ever found expression in furs before.

Our enthusiasm knows no bounds—we KNOW there has never before been such a Fur Sale in Los Angeles.

It would seem that every condition fostered a presentation of staggering magnificence—the condition of the fur market at the moment of Hamburger's greatest buying—the timeliness of the arrival of buyers that the cream of the fur market was theirs for selection and the fact that furs of higher quality than for many years have found their way to the fur centers.

Novelty—yes, there is much of it—the quiet, dignified novelty of culture—but volumes of description could never paint an imagery that would tell the story as one-half hour in the Fur Section will.

The Prices We Have Placed on These Furs of Quality are from 20% to 50% Below Their Actual Worth Bought opportunely—all New—priced at a closer margin than will be possible later — this August Sale of Furs bids fair to establish unprecedented records for Hamburger's already notably fine fur sales. We list a few of the values obtainable, as a guide to the many others.

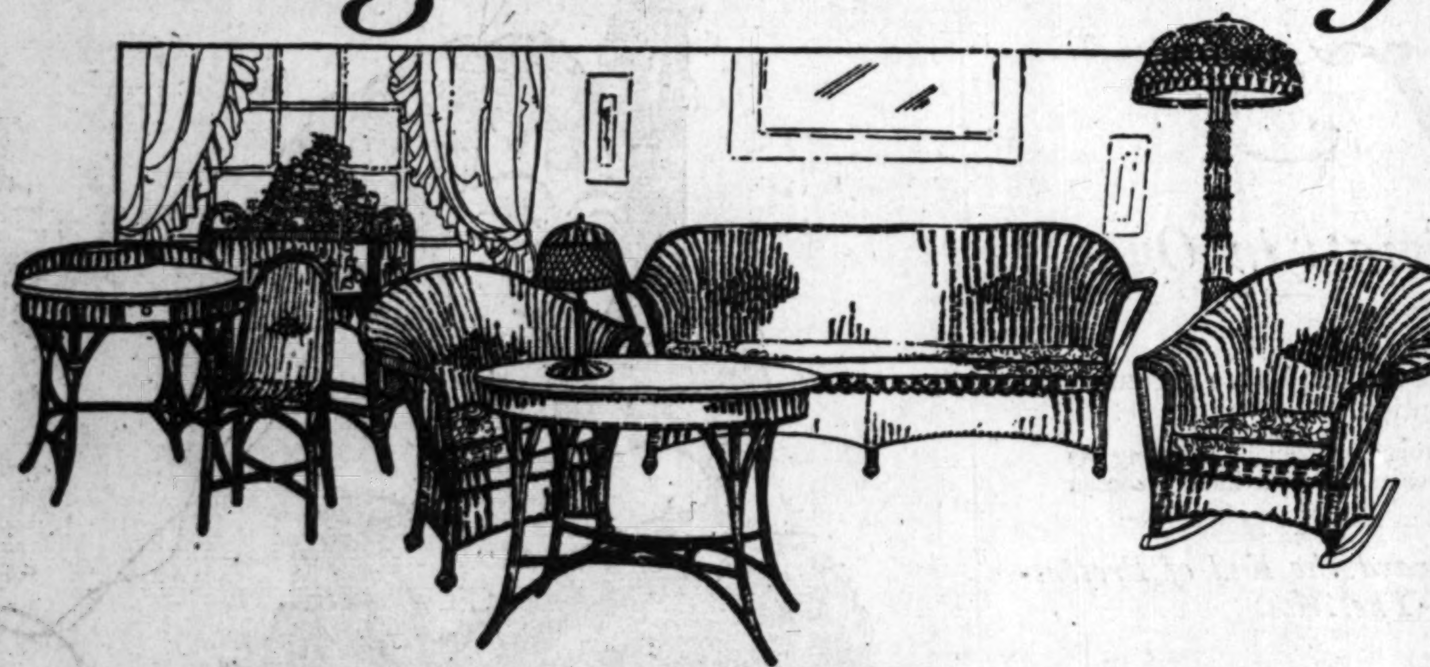
August Sale of Furniture



There is Every Reason Why

Hamburger's August Sale of Furniture

Should be the Greatest Success in Years

There Has Been a Long Period of "Watchful Waiting" by Customer, Retailer and Manufacturer

The customer has been looking for lower prices, the retailer has been hoping for stability, the manufacturer has been doing all in his power to establish both.

Great overstocks confronted him—money was tied up—materials and labor had been purchased at highest prices. There was but one answer—"sacrifice."

The Low Ebb of Decline Has Been Reached

At a recent convention of representatives from a number of furniture factories, it was learned not one of the firms had made any money from January 1st to June 1st.

The remedy is the re-pricing of furniture based on an actual production cost basis. Already this is being done and we have, in the last two weeks, received notice of advances from three well-known manufacturers.

The Furniture in the August Sale was purchased at the "lowest ebb," is marked at the closest margin possible and there are Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars' Worth of NEW furniture as well as selected groups from our own stocks, offered to you, beginning Monday, August first, at vital savings.

In all the merchandise history of Hamburger's there is no precedent for the Sale!

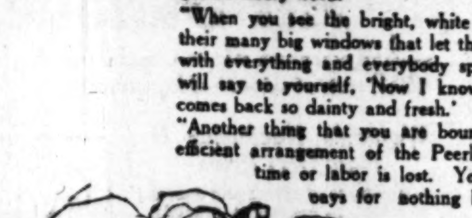
"Just Where Does My Laundry Go?"

"A mighty fine way to answer that question is to have you see the Peerless Laundry with your own eyes. Hundreds of our customers take advantage of our standing invitation to visit. Really it is the best advertising we could do.

"Peerless enjoys an ideal location, beyond the dirt and dust belt of the city, where there is plenty of sunshine and pure fresh air. Exactly the right sort of place for good laundry work.

"When you see the bright, white Peerless buildings, their many big windows that let the sunshine pour in, with everything and everybody spick and span, you will say to yourself, 'Now I know why my laundry comes back so dainty and fresh.'

"Another thing that you are bound to notice is the efficient arrangement of the Peerless buildings. No time or labor is lost. Your laundry money pays for nothing but quality work."



THE PEERLESS HOME
Visitors are cordially welcomed and shown through at all times.

The Peerless practice of treating every piece of laundry individually is the secret of Peerless' beautiful work. Your laundry is sorted into 20 distinct classifications of fabric, color, etc., and each is washed separately! You can trust anything washable to Peerless.

BROADWAY AT 6TH.

MUSIC GOES IN FILM HOUSES.

Salaries Too High for Now, is Managers' Claim.

New York Players Receive Two Weeks' Notice.

Drop in Price of Theater Tickets Forecast.

BY HARRY CARR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—A merciful heaven sometimes disguises its blessing, the big movie houses on Broadway may be tragically near a shipwreck, but anyhow you will be able very soon to see a picture play without having to listen to a long-winded orchestral symphony and a couple of grand operas.

On account of the poor box office business the Fox, Keith and Moss vaudeville theaters and the Capitol, Criterion, Rivoli, Rialto and Strand have given their musicians two weeks' notice. They informed the orchestras some days ago that owing to bad business conditions it would be necessary to cut every musician's pay at least 20 per cent.

The board of directors of the local union refused even to confer with the owners, but instead, demanded an increase in pay. The answer of the theater owners was to give the entire musical staff of every house two weeks' notice of discharge.

In a statement to the public theater owners pointed out that they are now paying more than 100 per cent increase over the prewar wages. Before the war orchestra musicians got about $32 a week. They are now receiving something over $70.

The musicians are aware that this rate is prohibitive under present conditions and would be glad to accept a cut, but the walking delegates object with scorn.

Some time ago the local union cut away from the American Federation of Labor. Feeling that they have lost this fight even before it begins the big guns of the local union are scampering around trying to have the local organibation reinstated in the American Federation in order to secure moral and financial backing.

The truth is that this lockout of musicians is the forerunner of a general shakedown in the Broadway movie business. The prices of admission will inevitably come down. All the Broadway houses have been charging 85 and 95 cents admission, and then justifying this excessive price by boring the audiences to tears with highbrow orchestras, ballet dancing and the like.

ON SLIPPERY SLIDE.

At the Capitol Theater, at least two-thirds of the program is given over to music. It is stated that the picture is the least expensive part of entertainment. With the financial stringency the patronage has fallen off so disastrously that no movie house in New York is making any money. Most of them are on the slippery slide.

The end of it will be that the movie exhibitors will leave off trying to educate the house and give them what they want, which is pictures at 25 cents, without musical culture or uplift.

I predict that this fall will witness a similar crisis in the legitimate houses. They can't get away any longer with orchestra seats that sell ostensibly at $3.33, but actually from $5 up to whatever they can hold you up for.

Salaries of actors and directors will come down to the scale paid in other professions, and seats will be sold as in olden days, for $1.50. The golden days when ignorant young boy directors got three and four times the salary of the chief justice of the United States Supreme Court for telling empty-headed little girls how to act in crude, clumsy little dramas, have gone. The day has about arrived when actors and directors will be paid in proportion to what they have learned, and according to the quality of their genius and theater owners will get a fair interest on their investment.

BOO GLYN PICTURE.

Just as official censorship comes into New York, the Broadway public has apparently decided to do its own censoring. For the first time I have been going to motion pictures I heard an audience boo a picture this week. It was not a bad picture, being "The Great Moment," Elinor Glyn's first contribution to the screen, with Gloria Swanson as the star, but there was one situation of which the audience evidently did not approve, where an ungallant snake bit the lady on the breast and the very gallant hero proceeded to suck the poison from the wound.

At this point there were those in the audience who "booed" quite lustily. Otherwise the picture was well received by critics and public. Perhaps it was the same self-appointed censors' board, who went across the street and booed at some of the dull moments in the mystery melodrama "Nobody" at the Strand.

"Nobody" was the name of the play—also a pretty accurate description of the audience. The newspaper critics waxed enthusiastic over the picture, which they agreed was too complex to be interesting . .

Undiscouraged with their hard experiences trying to get good screen pictures from literary stars, word

Jungle Films Begin Showing at Symphony.

As it is impossible to show thirty reels of motion pictures in any one performance, the massive animal production, "The Miracles of the Jungles," which started yesterday at the New Symphony, is to be shown in the same manner in which it was made, in six-reel books.

The first to be offered is Book I, "The City of Lions," in itself a complete and thrilling production. Over 150 different varieties of animals were used in the filming of the mammoth production, which is one of the most unique and thrilling films to reach the public. Over a year was consumed in the making of the thirty reels. Hundreds of animals were used, and the players worked in daily peril of their lives.

One of the prominent figures in the cast is Fredric Peters, who has the role of Zeda, the Zulu giant. He is one of the largest and best proportioned men on the screen. He is scheduled to appear daily at the New Symphony in the wild animal prologue, which has been worked out for the presentation of the book, and is also to recount some of his narrow escapes during the filming of "The Miracles of the Jungles."

The action of the story is laid in the heart of the African jungle. Hordes of lions, tigers and snarling panthers and leopards work before the camera in a series of hair-raising stunts that make "The Miracles of the Jungle" absolutely different from anything that has hitherto come to the silver sheet. Lovers of wild animals, children in particular, are the ones to whom "The Miracles of the Jungle" will appeal, yet the most blase theater-goer will extract a thrill from some of the scenes.

The production was written and produced by E. W. Martin, the well-known authority on animals. Critics have pronounced "The Miracles of the Jungle" to be one of the most diverting, and at the same time one of the most "educational" pictures yet produced.

Polo Fans See Reid and Holt in Fast Game.

Southern California bluebloods and polo enthusiasts from all the surrounding cities and towns turned out at Riverside last Saturday to witness a unique polo game. The novel features of the event were the pressence of Wallace Reid and Jack Holt as players on one of the teams and the filming of motion-picture scenes for the new Paramount production, "Don't Tell Everything," under the direction of Sam Wood. These scenes featured Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter.

Miss Swanson was present at the game and she and the other two players enacted the scenes.

The match was between the Beverly Hills Club of which Mr. Holt and Mr. Reid were members, and the Chemawa Park Club of Riverside. The Chemawa Club won by a score of 7 to 5.

There were no serious mishaps except a fall by Teddie Miller of the Chemawa Club, which, however, resulted in no serious injuries. The motion-picture scenes were filmed before the game, between each chucker and after the game until 6:30 in the evening. The match lasted over a period of two hours.

HART AT RIALTO.

Also Olive Ann Alcorn, Acclaimed the Perfect Woman.

Headed by William S. Hart's production, "The Whistle," and the personal appearance of Olive Ann Alcorn, recently declared by celebrated artists at Laguna Beach as one of the most perfect specimens of womanhood in the world, Grauman's Rialto opens its third week today.

Hart is in the role of a toiling father in a New England manufacturing town. "The Whistle" bears the indorsement of Sons of America officials, philanthropists, insurance safety engineers and child workers. Hart is supported in this picture of American life by Myrtle Steadman, Frank Brownlee, Georgie Stone, Will Jim Hatton and Richard Headrick. Lambert Hillyer, who directed, also made the adaptation from the original story by May Wilmoth and Olin Lyman.

Miss Alcorn, who recently leaped into international fame after her beauty laurels were bestowed on her, appears in her own creation, "Destiny Waltz," one of the aesthetic dances which made possible her symmetry of figure.

The program is lent additional variety by the operatic selections of Lillian Ruggiero, 5-year-old Baby Tetrazzini," the sensation of local musical circles; atmospheric prologue, in which Thersa Gerl, Swiss yodeler, appears, and the singing of American strains by Lady Lo Wah, Chinese girl from San Francisco.

Accompanying all these features is the interpretative musical score,

Tom Wise at Orpheum in a Bit of Drama.

The Orpheum, beginning Monday matinee, August 1, has been fortunate in securing Tom Wise, as famous a character actor as there is on the American stage today, for a headline attraction.

Mr. Wise has spent most of his time in the legitimate drama, and was last out to the Coast in "Cappy Ricks," in which he played the leading role. He has for his Orpheum offering a one-act comedy by Roy Briant, entitled "Memories." It is the story of a retired stage player who has amassed a fortune and of a dramatic company in hard luck. Mr. Wise has a capable supporting cast headed by Miss Nila Mac.

It is not very often that the Orpheum has for its headliner a sketch—but it is not very often that it can secure an actor of the sterling quality of Tom Wise, either, and his coming is one of the dramatic events of the season and a big feather in the cap of vaudeville for securing such a type of attraction.

Staying another week is the remarkable act, "A Trip to Hitland." No one had any conception what a knockout these ten song-writers would be. The combination of ten men who have written most of the popular song hits of the day appearing personally in one act, and the dandy, snappy entertainment that they put on with their five pianos, harmonious warbling and fun-making, provides and act that is the greatest novelty and the most exceptional entertaining feature ever seen at the Orpheum.

You remember Bailey and Cowan, "the banjoer and the songster?" They return with a new skit called "The Little Production in One," and have with them an addition to the act in the person of a very pretty girl, Estelle Davis by name.

A strolling player is George Austin Moore. He is a raconteur of such undoubted and accepted ability that little more is ever announced but that he is on a bill, and that is enough.

Emma Francis and Harold Kennedy trip the light fantastic and sing their specially written song numbers. Mang and Snyder, billed as master athletes, are so far ahead of the usual gymnastic offering that instead of opening the show they play down in the middle of the bill. The odd combination of a banjo player and a daredevil cyclist working together is the novelty offered by Booth and Nina.

Max York's dogs complete the bill.

"WAY DOWN EAST" TO PLAY RETURN.

"Way Down East," D. W. Griffith's famed picture will open a limited engagement at Philharmonic Auditorium tomorrow night. Despite the fact that it demolished records when presented at the theater last winter for twelve weeks to continuously sold-out houses, it now gives promise of repeating its former unprecedented success.

"Way Down East" should prove an ideal summer attracton. The New England snowstorm, the breaking ice gorge and zero weather, depicted in some of the strongest scenes of the play, carry one from the semi-tropics of Southern California to snowbound Connecticut in mid-winter very effectively.

FROLIC SHOW IS LATEST.

Midnight Entertainment to Make Debut Here.

Music Comedy Will Amuse Tired Business Man.

Eva Tanguay Honor Hostess for Opening.

Those who like their entertainment to start late and end early—in the morning—are to have a chance to enjoy such, in the near future. For preparations are now being made to stage a Midnite Frolic, the first of its kind, in Los Angeles. And it isn't to be a bush-league frolic either, but a regular affair, according to Elmer Floyd, who is sponsoring the project.

Mr. Floyd has charge of the entire production, and the designing and creating of the cafe, where the show is to be given. The location is on Broadway, at Tenth street, and the first presentation is to be staged Thursday evening, with Eva Tanguay announced as honor hostess.

Mr. Floyd was for five years, associated in New York with some of the largest cafes and musical productions, such as the Palais Royal and the Greenwich Village Follies. He was also engaged during the past season by the Marigold Garden of Chicago. This was regarded as surpassing even his New York productions in quality.

The entertainment at the Midnite Frolic here will be a musical comedy with a cast of fifty, made up of thirty-two beauties, and including a ballet, beside some clever comedy principals. The show will run an hour and a half, and be divided into two sections, each including four ensemble numbers and six specialties.

DANCING TOO.

There will be an intermission of fifteen minutes for dancing between the first and second half of production, at which time the audience may dance to the hit numbers of the musical score, while the orchestra and double quartet chant the melodies of the production.

The Midnite Frolics will stage two presentations during the evening, the twilite frolic, from 7:30 until 9 o'clock, the midnite frolic from 12 until 1:30. There will be continuous dancing interwoven with specialties from nine 9 until 12.

Prominent costumers will collaborate with Mr. Floyd in designing, creating and building costumes for the Midnite Frolic productions. There will be a score of scenic artists under the personal supervision of Mr. Floyd, who will create and carry out the original new ideas and endeavors in draperies, lighting effects and illusions.

Mr. Floyd has named his opening production the "Floyd Fantasies of 1950." The cafe includes a number of effective features among which are an oval dance floor, an elaborate stage, the paradise gates' entrance, fountains of crystal globes, spun glass paintings in futuristic design, impressionistic lighting effect, floating flower vases, crystal walls, etc. The cafe will comfortably seat 1000 patrons, it is said.

A DOUBLE BILL OF FUN AT MILLER'S.

Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" and Harold Lloyd in "Haunted Soopks" broke summer attendance records at Miller's last week and proved so popular with both young and old that Mr. Miller decided to hold it over for another week, starting yesterday.

The story pictured in "Shouldea Arms" takes Charlie through all of the training experiences of a recruit, and then blows him into a first line trench, prepared for action with an armament by which he could be mistaken for a soldier, a cook, a chambermaid, a milkman, a valet or a plumber.

It is a classic that will stand as the most timely, as well as the funniest picture he ever made.

Harold Lloyd's "Haunted Spooks" runs it a close race for laugh honors and keeps the audience roaring from start to finish. Probably no one ever before heard of a spook being haunted, but this boy with the lamps of laughter proves that there is something new beneath the sun, for the spooks in this comedy are surely haunted.

As a special inducement to all youngsters in this vacation period, Mr. Miller has made a price for children of 15 cents for all performances, and this includes the admission tax.

"FOUR HORSEMEN" HITTING NEW STRIDE.

Rex Ingram's production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is to continue at the Mission Theater, the Broadway playhouse, which gave it a national premiere some few months ago. The second showing, which opened the 20th inst., has been accorded as warm a reception as that which greeted the first.

Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino are the featured players.

Managing Director Harry David of the Mission, is offering a special atmospheric dance number with the feature. Senor A. de la Plaza and Juanita Arenas stage a dance which was originally given in the production itself. Dr. Carlos De Mandil and C. Sharpe Minor also offer special musical numbers.

RECEPTION AT CUMNOCK.

Seventy-five alumnae of Cumnock School of Expression and their friends were guests of the school Wednesday, at an afternoon studio tea at which Miss Helen A. Brooks, director of the school, acted as hostess. The honor guests were Miss Ursula Irvine author, of New York, City, Mrs. L. L. Keedick, known as a writer of plays, also of New York, and Mrs. Gertrude Workman Firman of the class of 1906. A number of interesting readings from the Orient and Occident were presented by Miss Jane E. Farley, a member of the Cumnock faculty. Some of here selections also were from the modern school.

CHARLES RAY IS OWN BOSS.

Attains Long-Sought Goal in Directing Films.

Has Two Pictures to Credit and Will Make More.

Consults the Camera When He is in Doubt.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The newest of the arts—the latest world of light in a galaxy that once numbered only seven—the art we know as the motion picture, is such a truly wonderful thing, being a combination of the arts in space, such as painting and sculpture, and the arts in time, like music and poetry, that we have no need to exclaim that its meteoric progress has hitherto been so disconcertingly deflected.

Did painting make more rapid advance? Or music? Or architecture? If you think so, look at the picture-writing of the ancients, listen to the music with which they affrighted the circumambient air, creep into the dark dungeons of their cliff dwellings. These are but the beginnings of the seven arts, you say. True, but these beginnings remained embryonic for almost endless centuries, or until some man of genius, a man with a new idea, ventured to make experiments, "modern improvements" that were no doubt viciously combated by the ancient reactionaries.

So, when you go to look at a motion picture remember that it's only twenty years old, not yet out of the cradle, if we compare its life with that of the sister arts.

Because it's sometimes rough and uncouth, don't jump to the rash conclusion that it is absolutely devoid of idealism. You were never more mistaken in your life. To be sure, it is still known as the "motion-picture industry," and is generally handled as merchandise. Nevertheless, there are men and women working in it who reverently regard it as an art, and who are doing their best to give it the beauty that belongs to it.

SIGHTS HIS GOAL.

One of these idealists is Charles Ray. He has been handicapped, as have been many other earnest artists in pictures, by the shrill note of "industry," but he has always worked steadily against that handicap, and at last his goal is in sight.

When Ray became his own director, not long ago, he made a big step toward the place he wants to reach. To be sure, he didn't take the step voluntarily, he was pushed into it most suddenly and unexpectedly by the illness of his director.

But he kept his footing, looked around for other directors, couldn't find any that would do, then turned his face steadily forward and went on by himself. It was hard work, bewildering work, but he soon discovered that he liked it, that he was a free man at last. He decided to remain a free man, only calling on his cousin, Albert Ray, to keep step with him.

HIS FIRST EXPERIMENT.

The first story he directed is Charles E. Van Loan's "Scrap Iron," which will be shown at the Kinema Saturday. In this story Charles Ray made a new departure in characterization, not quite abandoning the old one so beloved of the fans, but adding subtle yet potent touches of differentation. The hero of "Scrap Iron" is not the well-known and delightful "hick," but a young worker in a Pittsburg factory, and a fine amateur boxer besides. Yet the real conquests that he sought and found were moral rather than fistic. He learned to throw his worst self "on the mat," so to speak.

The other story that Charles Ray directed is Rob Wagner's "R.S.V.P.," an amusing comedy of artist life in New York. This photoplay is full of the joy of life. Its situations are as numerous as they are funny, and all its innocent gusto is a warranted cure for the blues. Both pictures are notably well directed, you will find, with no loose ends anywhere. They also show the wide diversity of the talent that is Charles Ray's. We see Charlie, of course, but we also see two radically different youths, and the difference is not merely in make-up, but in artistic representation.

"When I had a director," said Ray to me, the other day, "I found that we could not always agree on the interpretation of a certain scene or action. I had my idea of it, he had his. We would retire to my dressing-room to discuss it, and I would demonstrate—but I could not make him see it my way. The result would be a tie, or perhaps a compromise, and I no longer felt the part.

"Now, if I'm uncertain, I consult nobody but the camera. I take the scene, action or expression twice, often three times, and, of course, in two or three different ways, and I choose at leisure the one that seems best. I don't want to appear temperamental, but I have my ideas!"

He certainly has, and as I watched him at work as director—he had nothing to do as an actor in the scene—on another Van Loan story, one differing greatly in plot from "Scrap Iron," I was interested and impressed with his ease and sureness, with his absolute knowledge of what was needed and how to supply it. If he can achieve such results with other actors (though, to be sure, actors are supposed to be made of the most malleable of human clay,) he can certainly do even more with himself, a man he has studied with considerable closeness for a number of years in art.

FORSAKES COMEDY.

Virginia Warwick Plays Dramatic Role in "Four Horsemen."

Virginia Warwick, Sennett comedienne, has a dramatic part as Chichi, in the Rex Ingram production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," now at the Mission Theater.

Miss Warwick, with her dashing vicacious beauty, has thrilled film fans throughout the country with he aquatic feats. She is really an expert swimmer—an accomplishment many of the so-called bathing girls do not possess.

Mr. Ingram selected her for the role of Chichi, after seeing her in a number of comedies, and realized that she possessed the physical as well as necessary mental qualities to enact intelligently the difficult role.

CULLEN SPEEDING UP.

Cullen Landis has rebuilt his racing car, which was recently smashed in an accident, and is now getting in trim to annex some speed cups. Cullen has just finished the principal part in "The Man With Two Mothers," at the Goldwyn studios and is about to start another picture.

WINS COMEDIAN BY SAD SMILE.

girl who knows nothing but dansants, bridge, dances and late shows. It doesn't seem difficult to make the transitions, and, of course, I have to make them as different as possible. There must be no similarity in type or character—they are two different girls whose outlook on life is as divergent as the poles."

Just the same, it isn't as the society belle, but as the little country lass that Miss Lee will shine in this picture. That's not to say that she isn't fitted for the society parts, because she has portrayed these very intelligently in a number of pictures, but it is in a somewhat pathetic character that her charm is revealed to the utmost.

There is one thing about Miss Lee that strikes you immediately and that is she's a very human sort of girl. Stardom never turned her head, and the fact that she was afterward given parts and supporting leads didn't take away any of her enthusiasm for her work. She is just as full of zest for an Arbuckle picture as she was when playing in "Puppy Love," when her name was in the bright lights, or in Cecil De Mille's "Male and Female," when she was doing a part under the supervision of Lasky's most celebrated director.

I met Miss Lee first just about two years ago. That was the critical stage of her career. She had been prematurely given stellar honors, and things were turning out none too well for her. Nature wasn't being kind to her either, for following her arrival in California she had taken on weight amazingly.

But it seems that with her assignment to the role of Tweenie in "Male and Female," destiny commenced to smile on her once again. She told me that she loved that part. And it is probable that it has appealed to her on more than one account.

Today Miss Lee hardly seems like the same girl. She is blossoming forth as a real beauty. She embodies all the most charming elements of girlhood with the poise and character that are womanly. She is fired with the ambition to achieve, and the patience to wait until opportunity dawns. It wouldn't astonish me in the least if she would win her place among the stars again at some future time. And this time she will be a fixed luminary, because she combines now a proficiency in acting with physical attractions and personality.

The Arbuckle pictures are, of course, only a temporary stopping place. She has played in four of them, one of which, "The Dollar a Year Man" has already shown; the second, "Crazy to Marry," being billed this week at Grauman's. It's quite probable that she will be seen in one of the De Mille features again, because of her success in the Tweenie role.

WAR VETS HAVE THE REAL GRIT.

Universal Executive Tells How They do Things.

Nineteen Days See Camp Built in Desert.

Men Work Till They Drop on Difficult Job.

After all, the boys who went away to war gained something beside mere glory. They received a mighty good training for practical life in the army. At least, that's the belief of Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, who has just proved it to his own satisfaction.

When Harry Carey went to the Mojave Desert to film "The Fox," his forthcoming Universal-Jewel production, a civilian contractor estimated that it would take ninety days to build a camp for his Universal unit.

Harry Schenck, production manager at Universal City, had a clever young lieutenant on his staff when he was majoring around during the war. He recommended him to Thalberg. The man came. He is R. E. Taylor, an assistant director when there is no war to divert his mind.

"Jump out to the desert," said Schenck, "take a look at the situation and tell me how long it will take to build a camp that would pass Army inspection."

"Yessir," answered Taylor.

It took Taylor exactly nineteen days to build a camp. Men curled up under the terrific heat and had to be cared for. They were revived in a modern Army field hospital, while other men, held in reserve, took their places.

On the fifth day a cliff looked as though it would hold up operations. The civilian contractor estimated that it would take five steam shovels at $1000 a scoop to remove the obstacle. Taylor nudged that cliff with a shot of TNT that sent 400 tons of muck over into the next county.

On the nineteenth day the outfit arrived to enter comfortable tents, to be fed in a mess hall by a leather neck mess sergeant and to shoot a picture that will go to the screen from the hottest hell hole on the great American desert.

As the first camera clicked Taylor sat down to rest. He woke up three days later in a hospital at Mojave.

"Who's running the outfit?" he asked anxiously.

"Jack Lawton," was the answer. Taylor rolled over for another nap.

Jack Lawton was a Marine at Mare Island.

A smaller camp has just been completed by another outfit of ex-service men. It is for Edward Laemmle's use in filming "Winners of the West," a serial in which Art Acord is starred. The location is a wild and inaccessible gulch, near Chatsworth, five miles from a wagon road that would dislocate the vertebrae of a shimmie dancer.

"Got another good soldier?" asked Thalberg of Schenck. He had. In twenty-four hours Cromwell Gibbons, who is also an assistant director when the flag doesn't need following, had smashed a trail into the gulch and was throwing up a camp.

All of which confirmed Thalberg's belief that an ex-soldier can handle himself better in any situation than a man who has never cursed a bugler. Taylor had a bigger job, but his experience was, for the most part, as a quartermaster.

Gibbons had a slightly less difficult task, but he had never done quartermaster service. His contribution to victory was 1000 combat aerial hours, but he dove into the job with good Army sense and ingenuity behind him and finished it satisfactorily.

"CRAZY TO MARRY."

Roscoe Arbuckle and Bull Montana in Comedy at Grauman's.

Featuring one of the most extensive bills ever presented at Grauman's, Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's "Crazy to Marry," Bull Montana's personal appearance and "Twenty Minutes in a Rendezvous in Old London" form a trio of attractions which open Monday.

With the young Grecian god of beauty, Bull, as his chief bodyguard, protector and object for a medical knife, Fatty, as an enterprising young surgeon, divides his time between trying to marry two women simultaneously and endeavoring to carve out of the brain of Montana the "taking" ways of a second-story fancier.

Roscoe's supporting cast is as large as his belt measurement. These players include Lila Lee, the beautiful Bull, Lura Anson, Edwin Stevens, Lillian Leighton, Allen Durnell, Sidney Bracey, Genevieve Blinn, Clarence Burton, Henry Johnson, Charles Ogle, Jackie Young and Lucien Littlefield.

The only matter that is worrying Bull about his personal appearance is the fact that he can't buy a collar large enough and that he will be obliged to shave off the handsome beard which protected his delicate features from Jack Dempsey's rude companions while he was exchanging slaps on the wrist in the champion's training camp.

James Cruze directed "Crazy to Marry," scenarioized by Walter Woods from the original story by Frank Condon.

Fifteen artists will participate in "Twenty Minutes in a Rendezvous in Old London." Among these artists are Hans Hanke, Norman Gregg, Arthur Brick, a quartet from New York and "two little California girls who can sing and dance."

Mischa Guterson has arranged an interpretative orchestral score to accompany these features.

INJURED WHILE SAVING STAR.

A. C. Stecker, chief of the Universal City arena, tore his little finger off at the big knuckle when he jumped from the top of a training cage in an effort to land on a ferocious lion. His signet ring caught on a nail, throwing his entire weight on the finger. He was rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital where he is being cared for. The accident occurred in the filming of "The Terror Trail," a serial in which Eileen Sedgwick is starred. Stecker's idea was to hurl himself on the lion to strangle it into submission in order to save the life of Miss Sedgwick, who was alone with him in the cage.

Hughes Sends Out S.O.S. for Wall Flower.

Have you a little Wall Flower in your home?

If so, there's a good job waiting for her, provided she is a most unusual Wall Flower.

The reason is that Rupert Hughes has written "The Wall Flower" for Goldwyn, which has such a type for a heroine. She must be pathetic and sad at first, but must later blossom out into a thing of beauty and charm.

So difficult is the role to cast that tests have been given to a dozen or more actresses in the film colony. The difficulty is that if the actress has natural beauty is is almost impossible for her to be naturally ugly, and if she is naturally ugly she can never be naturally beautiful.

Clifford Robertson, the Goldwyn casting director, says this is the hardest role he has ever had to fill. It will mean all the more credit to the actress who is finally chosen for the part.

Mr Hughes is personally supervising the tests of the applicants in search for certain subtleties of emotion for which the part calls.

E. Mason Hopper, who directed "Hold Your Horses" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead," both by Mr. Hughes, will also be responsible for production.

MOVIES AID MUSIC STUDY.

More than 1,000,000 children in the United States have taken up the study of music within recent months, due to the influence of orchestras and organs in motion-picture houses, according to estimates received yesterday by Sid Grauman and Mischa Guterson, conductor of Grauman's Symphony Orchestra, from New York authorities.

For several months, exhibitors of leading theaters throughout the country have been investigating the effects of music in connection with the cinema houses, with the information received today as a result. It has been proved also that parents who have never attended concerts or operas, are becoming daily more familiar with the compositions of the old masters, due to the fact that they are regular patrons of the movies, where the Barcarolles and "Lucias" are played daily.

Symphony music and operas are growing more popular every year in the United States, further state these reports. Each season the operatic companies and the symphonies report increasing receipts—more patrons, and among these, many more children. Mothers are becoming interested in the higher class of musical art and are becoming ambitious to have their children study and learn the operas.

BLIND FIND INTEREST IN THE CLASSICS

Sightless Musicians Refuse to Devote Time to Ragtime; Take Art Seriously.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

NEW YORK, July 30. — What kind of music do the blind love most?

"The best," answers Miss Mary Keebler, head of the department of music of the New York Lighthouse for the Blind, "for as yet the Braille-raised notation designed for use of the sightless, has not lent itself to ragtime. Then again the blind child goes to his music joyfully and takes it more seriously. For it opens up to him the whole wonder world of sound, which can to such a great extent compensate for the loss of the world of sight."

Miss Keebler, who has helped hundreds of sightless boys and girls through the initial difficulties of musical instruction, does not support the theory that the blind, as a whole, are more musically gifted than the sighted. She does believe, however, the blind have greater patience and thoroughness because of their more limited range of interests, and once having mastered the rudiment of the art, are able to make as rapid progress as the sighted pupils.

"There is no more tedious effort than that of beginning the study of the piano with a blind pupil," said Miss Keebler. What the sighted pupil picks up readily, the child who cannot see has to struggle awkwardly and painstakingly to master.

"In this first stage the sighted pupil will, of course, forge ahead faster than the blind. But this learning, which comes so easily, is not built upon so sure a foundation. I think I am perfectly safe in saying that the average blind piano student, ranked with the average sighted student, all other things being equal, will have a more thorough understanding of his art."

A vast amount of patience and perseverance are needed. The blind pianist sits with his music sheet in his lap, one hand deftly reading the Braille music notation, which to the ordinary observer looks like nothing more than a series of raised dots. With the other hand the student transmutes the Braille into notes on the piano. Each hand must be mastered separately by the blind player. Each must be memorized, and usually only four bars are memorized at a time.

Perhaps Miss Keebler's infinite patience comes from the fact that she is herself totally blind and has been since babyhood. But in spite of this, she plays the piano and organ and devotes a part of her time to directing "sight singing" for the sightless.

DANCE DRAMA APPROVED.

Norma Gould has sold her original dance drama "Dianidra" (the little princess who could not dance) which she produced recently at the Little Theater, using a cast of forty-four. She is at work revising the manuscript which includes a detailed description of nine solos, four groups, a trio and a duet, together with the pantomimic action and instructions for the entire musical score. It will go to one of the large dancing schools in the East. This manuscript along with several others by the same composer are being copyrighted and later will be published in book form.

STAGE CALLS ALICE BRADY.

Plays and not pictures will occupy the attention of Alice Brady, now that she has returned from her trip abroad. She arrived in New York yesterday with her husband, James Crane. She is concentrating on "Drifting," the new stage production, which W. A. Brady is to bring out soon in New York. She made no pictures while abroad, taking the trip for a rest and vacation.

BRAND-NEW MUSICAL COMEDY AT BURBANK.

Last week's production of the Hi Jinks Revue's organization is slated for a New York showing. Critics and public alike found huge delight in the fast and clever funmaking and in the elaborate staging. The praise of the music show was not ordinary, and packed houses greeted every performance at the Burbank.

Another new production, "Miss Timothy," is to make its bow to musical comedy lovers this week. It has been staged by Edgar Barnett, well-known musical comedy producer, and will have in its cast all the favorites of the Hi Jinks Revue's company, with Al and Lois Bridge in the leading parts.

One of the reasons why the success of this company has been instant is the fact that the players and chorus seemingly enjoy themselves on the stage as much as does the audience watching their antics. Everybody goes into their respective characters with a zest that is pleasurable to behold.

The cast of "Miss Timothy," which is said to be something along entirely new lines in music shows, includes, besides the two Bridges, Jean Darby, Olga Brooks, Jess Phillips, George Clark, Carrie Kerwin, the Kemball four, Mayzee Weldon and others.

MUSIC ALLURING FOR NEW FEATURF.

Another colorful musical program has been arranged by Carli D. Elinor of the California Theater to accompany Sir Gilbert Parker's story, "A Wise Fool" which opens today. Among the numbers are "Manon" selection, "The Maple Leaf Forever," "As Through the Streets" the popular waltz from "La Boheme," "In Old Manila," the intermezzo from "Pagliacci," the quiet "Andante" from "Manon," Grieg's "Little Bird" and Massenet's beautiful "Last Dream of the Virgin." In the special stage number called "A Color Fantasque" introducing Faye Parrish and a company of six dancers, the orchestra will be heard in a number of catchy pieces, including "Toddle," "Bright Eyes," "Pavlowa Gavotte" "Chili Bean" and Massenet's "Elegie."

CHILDREN TO GRACE PLAY.

Little children of the city and county will be given a special night Saturday, at El Camino Real Theater to witness the "Pilgrimage Play." A special 50-cent admission has been arranged for all minors.

TRIED POLITICS BEFORE ACTING.

says. "They had a little pink-draped shop in New York, and it must have galled them to know that it was from the automobile of one or another of their handsome young sons that I used to make my speeches every day!"

She kept on making suffrage speeches until the war broke out, and then, she, in common with the other women suffrage workers, be it remembered to their everlasting credit, gave over that work to enter their country's cause.

Then there was Miss Newcomb's writing career. She was very serious about that when she was 16. Used to write for the Poughkeepsie Courier, on the subject of "Co-operative Farming, the Need of the Hour!" She really wanted very much to be a reporter, but her family cut her off from that.

Dear me, how an interview with Mary Newcomb does run away with one! The well-known gamut from cabbages to kings isn't nearly big enough to contain all the things you're sure to talk about.

Here we are forgetting all about her romance with her famous husband, Robert Edeson, who is appearing with her in "Peter," at the Majestic.

"He picked me up," smiled Miss Newcomb roguishly. "It was at Fortieth street and Fifth avenue, in New York, where we used to make a great many speeches.

"A good many of the speakers were actresses, and he took me for one. He came over to me after I had finished talking, and asked me if I was working at any theater at present. I told him I wasn't an actress. He tried to escape—and I after him!

"If he had asked me to supper, I should have known the correct way to meet his advances—and should have rebuffed him if it killed me. But asking me if I were an actress, and if I'd like to work—well, that was something different, and it never even occurred to me not to talk to him because he was a strange man.

"I followed him right up, and insisted on pursuing the subject of acting.

"'Of course, I speak in much larger places than any of your theaters,' I assured Mr. Edeson when I had caught up with him, all breathless. 'Beatrice Hall has taught me how to speak and I know all about use of the voice and diction and all that. Why, I can speak so you can hear me clear across a ball park!'

"So, I guess, just to get rid of me, perhaps, he gave me a chance in his next play, writing in a small part in 'His Brother's Keeper.' In seven weeks I got the lead in a play.

"But his idea of a suffragist was something terrible. He expected me to lecture on and off, I suppose, and he was surprised to death when I cracked a joke. He looked as if the Statue of Liberty had suddenly shimmied or something.

"One night he went with me to a parlor suffrage meeting, and I spoke as I always did. I said, 'I don't want my children to—so and so.' I happened to look at him—and he was exploding with mirth! It very nearly broke me up in my speech!"

"How did our romance happen? Well, in the first place, I was simply so overawed by Mr. Edeson's fame and personality I never even dared raise my eyes to his face.

"Then somebody in the company told me he was in love with me—and straightway I pepped up and began to look at him with other eyes. Really, after that he never had a chance!"

Again that roguish grin.

ROGUISH GRIN.

She has an expressive mouth, has Mary Newcomb, a mouth humorous and tender. I have never seen another, save that of Lillian Gish, that was so expressive.

She also has a tremendous sense of humor. Maybe that's because she's really serious at bottom. Really frivolous people have no sense of humor. They don't need to have. It's the serious people who must laugh.

"When I first faced an audience, the opening night," declared Miss Newcomb, "I stepped right down to the footlights, and was about to begin my speech with the old familiar 'My friends'—when I recollected myself, and precipitately retired to the back of the stage."

Afterwards she played opposite Chauncey Olcott on the road, and then came into New York in the ingenue role in "Sick-a-Bed."

Miss Newcomb grew into leading lady roles literally. She started out as an ingenue, a little girl, and then grew—three whole inches!

It was while playing with the late Clifton Crawford, who committed suicide in London a few months ago, that she appeared in "The Ruined Lady," which is now in rehearsal at the Majestic, with Charles Meredith in the Crawford part.

"It's very hard to read the lines now," said Miss Newcomb. "One really grows much attached to a player when one acts opposite him or her. And no matter what spicy farce Crawford played in, he always managed to keep it from seeming smutty. I think Mr. Meredith, too, has much of the same quality."

"Should personality be allowed to go ahead and swamp the player and his audience?"

That's the sort of a question an interviewer feels bound to ask a star, just to show she is a real interviewer whose heart is in her work. So I asked it.

"Should an actress submerge personality in a role or just turn personality on and let it do its darndest?"

Miss Newcomb was all ready for me. Probably she'd met that question before.

"The actor's personality, just as is the case with any other artist, naturally colors his role. His lookout is to keep a fine balance between the two. Sarah Bernhardt throws you into an ecstasy, even now, and even though you don't understand a word she says."

There's another question you're always bound to ask the actress you're interviewing. That is, whether she's an athlete. Of course, she always is. No matter if she comes in limping, with her shoulders sagging, she's always an athlete—rode horseback and swam from childhood, and as for tennis, was born doing it.

But Mary Newcomb carries the proof about with her in her carriage, her fine complexion, firm flesh and clear eyes.

"But when you're in stock it's hard to do more than play tennis," she says. "I tried horseback riding when I first came west, but automobiles always interfere. And when, the other day, I was riding in Beverly Hills and an airplane swooped down and nearly hit me on the head, I gave up for good.

"I was sorry, for I like horseback riding, but I like to let my horse out for a fast gallop. Besides, behind the exercise, is always the beautiful thought—'There goes a pound!'"

BOOST COMMUNITY MUSIC.

"Summertime music" is now the watchword of the National Federation of Musical Clubs, and as a result plans are in operation for providing communities with pageants, open-air operas, community sings and outdoor festivals in various localities where music clubs are found. The club season no longer begins in the fall and ends in the spring, but continues on through June, July, August and into September, bringing music to many more people than could ever be reached through the indoor programs of the wintertime.

The first and simplest of these activities is the community sing, which, contrary to general belief, is not dead nor even sleeping. Fundamentally it is so natural that the people of a nation should sing together and the people themselves so enjoy doing it that it may safely be predicted that the community chorus has come to stay. Easy of accomplishment, always successful with a good leader, community music is used by the clubs as a stepping-stone to the more pretentious forms of outdoor programs and as a nucleus for a civic chorus.

As to pageants, the beautiful Peterboro Pageant given at the eleventh biennial convention of the federation, at the MacDowel Colony, Peterboro, N. H., in 1919, was the direct source of inspiration to the clubs, which has resulted in numerous pageants being staged here and there in the smaller towns. There must be a great deal of effort expended in the production of a pageant, there is work for all, and it is thus that the community spirit is engendered, which makes the project successful and co-operative—and also facilitates bringing music to large crowds of people without the usual and more conservative concert atmosphere.

The same applies to the production of community opera except that here is a somewhat wider field. So many operas lend themselves to outdoor performance, and community opera companies have been lately organized for the purpose of helping with the venture if desired.

Then, too, each State has a list of its own music artists of the federation from which to draw for solo parts. The chorus is ready for the director's baton; the temporary orchestras formed often result in established civic organizations, and altogether the community opera idea is taking a firm place among the people generally.

In the matter of open-air festivals, while no such affair as the North Shore Festival or that of Lockport can be attempted, these more elaborate functions serve as guides and all festivals are planned along the same general lines, drawing talent and co-operation from the community itself in so far as is possible.

NO TUNES FOR CINEMA FANS.

comes from London that Famous Players-Lasky has teased Robert Hichens into the movie business. He is reported to be in conference with the London office of the corporation looking to starting work.

His "Garden of Allah," "Bella Donna" and "Barbary Sheep" have all been successfully screened. The last-named was the best picture Elsie Ferguson ever made.

As a general rule prominent authors have been a failure as scenario writers. The most surprising in this regard was E. Phillips Oppenheim, who was looked upon as the greatest possible find for the screen, but whose stories have usually fizzled in the movies.

W. A. Brady has bravely opened the season in the middle of the hottest part of the summer with another play about the deplorable manners and morals of the rising generation, muckraking the flappers at it were. The play is "Teaser" by Martha M. Stanley and Adelaide Mathews. Among others in the cast are Jane Grey, who used to be in stock in Los Angeles, and Fairy Binney, sister of lovely Constance and herself a successful movie star.

One of the first plays to go on the road this fall will be that amazing drama, "Spanish Love," which everybody roasts and everybody continues going to see.

TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST

The Cinderella Roof introduces an innovation to the pleasure-loving people of Los Angeles. It is a place to eat and a place to dance. But, adopting "the New York way," an admission will be charged at the door, just as at a theater, permitting those who wish to dance without dining to escape the customary "couvert." The Roof is "just what its name implies"—a palace dedicated to the joy that was Cinderella's, a Fairyland of light and color, roofed by six great domes set with a myriad of brilliantly illuminated jewels. The doors of The Cinderella Roof will open each day at 11:30 a.m. A luncheon will be served from 11:30 to 2 p.m. There will be no admission charge [illegible] 8 p.m. Rudy Wiedoeft's Cinderella Roof Orchestra will furnish [illegible] for the tea-dansant every afternoon, the program lasting from [illegible] until 5. The catering is in charge of Mat Dennis.

"THUNDER ISLAND."

Edith Roberts in Tropic Adventure at Superba.

All of the spicy and piquant seasoning that goes into the making of a thrilling photodrama is said to be contained in "Thunder Island," in which Edith Roberts is to appear at the Superba for the week beginning this afternoon.

The play is a dramatization of a story by Beatrice Grimshaw, who is regarded as one of our cleverest women writers of tropic adventure. It has been produced for the screen by Norman Dawn, maker of many of the Universal screen romances, who has added to the original Grimshaw story many additional twists of unexpected drama to give it suspense and adventure.

Edith Roberts has the part of "the little white tigress" of the island. From a contented little sheperdess, watching her flocks on the quiet hills, her destiny transforms her, through marriage on his deathbed to a rich old don, into a pursued and persecuted little heiress with unscrupulous adventurers on her trail.

Dual roles are frequent in movie dramas, but Miss Roberts has one entirely apart from the usual "good and bad twin sisters" theme, since she plays both a boy and a girl role. It is said that some remarkable effects of double photography have been attained.

Jack O'Brien, 6 feet 3 inches in his athletics and noted as a clever actor, plays opposite the star, and Arthur Jasmine, who has proved his histrionic ability in several other successes with Miss Roberts, has a humorous character role as a young simp. Fred Da Silva has the heavy role of the tricky adventurer who stops at nothing to attain his ends.

The setting for "Thunder Island" is down in Lower California, where Norman Dawn transported the entire company. A score of expert divers take part in the pearl-fishing scenes, and there are such thrilling interludes as lost treasure, piracy on the high seas, etc.

Not Made in Germany is New Slogan.

With a view to ascertaining public opinion, in a national way, on the much-discussed foreign invasion of pictures Marshall Neilan will insert a title, "Not Made in Germany," in his next film "Bits of Life," shortly to be released by First National and obtain the reports of theater managers on how the title is received by their patrons. By way of experiment, the producer inserted this title in "Bob Hampton of Placer" for its first engagement here last week. Not since the war have such demonstrations been made by the public on the appearance of a title on the screen. Prolonged applause and cheers from all parts of the house greeted the title when it was flashed.

Similar demonstrations were accorded the title at every performance during the week. The feeling of the public in Los Angeles is strongly antiforeign pictures. Whether or not this feeling is prevalent throughout the country will be ascertained with the release of "Bits of Life."

One of Those Things That Happen.

Marshall Neilan had just finished a situation in "Bits of Life" the other day which involved the flirtation of the wife of a deaf mute right before his eyes and unknown to him.

As he left the stage he opened up an evening paper and the first headline that caught his eye was "Husband Deaf; Wife Flirts With Others."

All of which proves that some of the incidents used in movie plots are possible.

JESTER'S STORY IN PICTURE VERSION.

The grand opera film, "Rigoletto," will be given a preview in charity. The picture has been turned over by the Romayne Superfilm comedy to the Assistance League to be shown at the Ambassador Theater, August 10. "Rigoletto," it is said, "was produced in Italy and in the locale where Victor Hugo laid his immortal novel, afterward made into an opera by Verdi.

The preview here will be attended by a distinguished audience of motion picture, stage and other professional people. Mrs. Charles Jeffras, hostess at the Ambassador, is personally directing the event, and it is being given the assistance of a large number of society women.

The preview will be notable in Verdi score used. Henri Van Praag, conductor of the Ambassador Orchestra, has undertaken the synchronizing.

HOUSE PETERS PRINCIPAL.

"The Man From Lost River," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt, was shown in preview at the California Theater, Venice, Tuesday evening. Frank Lloyd directed this picture for Goldwyn, practically all of the scenes of which were taken at Huntington Lake in the high Sierras. House Peters, who plays the principal role, is supported by Fritzi Brunette, Allan Forrest, James Gordon, Monte Collins and Milla Davenport.

NOT ON HIS LIST.

The cinematograph is on Mr. Edison's list of inventions, but Anita Stewart knows a question not on his famed first questionnaire.

It's "A Question of Honor."

The world will hear all about it when First National releases the picture.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

borhood party this week in honor of Mrs. W. O. Stephens of Oakland, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Thomas W. Spier. The afternoon was spent informally with needlework and visiting.

Mrs. Russell Walker presided at a charmingly appointed luncheon on Saturday, her guest being members of her embroidery club and a few other friends.

ONTARIO.

Like the garden of Mistress Mary with "pretty maids all in a row" was that at the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Willmert, 907 North Euclid avenue, for the wedding Friday evening of their daughter, Miss Ellen Henrietta Willmert, and Ronald Fenn Stannard of Long Beach. Forming an avenue of approach to an improvised altar of potted bay trees and a great bank of hydrangeas, four bridesmaids, holding smilax ropes, took their places on the lawn beside lovely art baskets of brilliant-hued blossoms and fernery. Just preceding the ceremony, Miss Lillian Backstrand of Los Angeles sang Cadman's "At Dawning" and D'Hardelot's "Because," being accompanied on the piano by Thomas Pollock, who played the Wedding March from "Lohengrin" to herald the approach of the bridal party. The bride and her attendants were met by the bridegroom and his best man just at the entrance to the aisle formed by the bridesmaids, numbering Miss Edyth Ornberg of Turlock, Miss Florence Knight of Glendora, Miss Emma Willmert, sister of the bride, and Miss Mayme Pollock, who, in rainbow effect, were attired in charming frocks of pink, blue, maize and orchid organdy, respectively, with large picture hats to match. At the entrance to the aisle, the maid of honor, Miss Nina Stone, in a handsome gown of apricot organdy and carrying Cecile Brunner rosebuds, joined the best man, Herbert Sutton of South Pasadena, in leading the march to the altar. Following them and just preceding the bride and bridegroom was little Miss Mary Irene Lund as flower girl, dressed in white taffeta and scattering fragrant rose petals from a dainty basket. The bride was attired in a gown of white satin, heavily embroidered and with overdrape of empress lace. She wore the caught train and conventional veil and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The bride and bridegroom were met at the improvised altar by Dr. C. W. Jackson of Pasadena, who performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by 125. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" marked the close of the nuptials and a supper and reception within doors followed. The bride's going away gown was of white roshanara crepe with hat to match. After a motor honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Stannard will make their home at 2007 West Forty-second street, Los Angeles, where the bridegroom is employed with the Southern California Telephone Company.

Miss Amber Ensley, who is here from Indianapolis, Ind., for the summer and a guest at Hotel Casa Blanca, entertained with a delightfully informal bridge supper Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Starbuck Fenton, 1631 North Euclid avenue. Three tables were used in the auction tournament and prizes for the evening were awarded Miss Ala Ballou, Miss Elizabeth Branson, Mr. Fenton and Stearns Ingalls. Supper followed the games.

Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Young entertained Sunday evening at dinner at their home, 417 East C street, on the occasion of the former's birthday anniversary. Covers at the dinner table were indicated for twelve.

FRESNO.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Homer Rowell are to leave Fresno and make their home in Berkeley, according to word received here. They are at present summering at Carmel and will move to Berkeley to take up their residence next month.

Mrs. John J. Alexander entertained at her home on Lucerne Lane yesterday, in honor of Miss Gladys English, who is to leave Fresno soon to make her home in Berkeley, and also in honor of Mrs. Tudor Carre of New Orleans, who arrived this week to visit her sisters, Mrs. Archibald Jack and Miss Mary Walton Harris.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs will return to the family home at San Gabriel.

Another interesting wedding of the week was that which united Miss Thelma Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bates, to Edward Stransky, a young business man of this city. The Rev. Carleton L. Kirk performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families. The bride was lovely in a gown of white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of white roses. Directly after the service the young couple left for a motor trip. Upon their return they will be at home at 101 North Third street. Mr. and Mrs. Stransky went through Alhambra High School together. Mr. Stransky is an ex-service man and one of the first Alhambra boys to go to France.

Mrs. C. B. Alexander, daughter Thelma and son Reginald, are at Seal Beach for the month of August. Dr. Alexander will motor down for the week-end.

Mrs. Louise Harwood leaves on Thursday for a six weeks' vacation. Part of the time will be spent with her mother, Mrs. Kate Sears of Ukiah.

SOUTH PASADENA.

A wedding of great interest to a large circle of friends is that of Miss Elsa Peters Morse of Pasadena and Mr. Horace M. Dobbins of this city, which was solemnized on Friday last in Los Angeles. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Wellslake D. Morse of 288 Markham street, while the groom is the son of Mrs. Caroline W. Dobbins of 1300 Garfield avenue, and a brother of Mrs. Thaddeus Lowe and Mrs. F. D. H. Banks, both of this city. After their return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins will make their home in Pasadena.

Miss Elizabeth Urmston of North Wilson avenue was the hostess at a delightful luncheon and swimming party on Thursday at Balboa, where the Urmston family is enjoying the summer months. Those who motored to the beach to partake of Miss Urmston's charming hospitality on this occasion were the Misses Beatrice Ward, Maude Gray, Dorothy Brown of Los Angeles, Suzanne Wadsworth, Marion Settlemeir, Marion Leffingwell af Pasadena, Emily Cass, Helen Lacy of South Pasadena, Kathryn Prather, Muriel Snook and Miss Adrianne Leonard of Santa Monica. The affair was given in honor of Miss Maud Gray, who is Miss Urmston's house guest. Miss Gray has recently returned to her home in Los Angeles from Wellesley.

The Misses Catherine and Rebecca Patterson of 1917 Oak street, who returned home a few weeks ago from National Park Seminary, Washington, D. C., continue to be feted by a large coterie of friends

August Fur Sale
Begins Monday the First

Glorious, Original Fur Modes

The most important event of the year is our August Fur Sale an event that will quickly and surely make "Weisman's" known as Fur Headquarters of Los Angeles.

Several Important Reasons Why It Is an Economy to Buy Furs Now —More economical from a Price standpoint as labor is less during the summer months and it does not involve as great an expenditure to create fine furs.

—Having vast Eastern connections we are able to buy in larger quantities and at less expense, which enables us to give you the benefit of the lower prices. Also, being Manufacturing Furriers, you are buying direct from the manufacturer, thus saving the middleman's profit.

—Economical from a Style Standpoint — as beautiful new modes fashioned of choice skins arrive daily from the East, thus insuring correct and up-to-the-minute models.

—The Quality Fur is the Cheapest Fur—always—and there is no need to enlarge upon the worth of "Weisman Furs" as this house has gained an enviable reputation from one end of the country to the other.

With All Sails Set, We Are Flying Into the First Turn of the Second Week Beginning

—What Opportunities!
—What Selling Enthusiasm!
—What Splendid Preparations!

—Everyone connected with this event has it on the tip of the tongue to say, "Yes, indeed, this should prove, beyond a doubt, to be

The Year's One Great Annual Sales-Race"

—A selling time so alive with boundless interest that even pages of copy—acres and acres of selling space—and the broad, expansive windows are insufficient to give proper prominence to the veritable flood of items that are here seeking publicity.

—When each one of nearly 100 departments, in charge of some 50 department managers, is striving to outdistance every other department in the store, in the way of value-giving —Enthusiasm is sure to follow.

—The seemingly impossible has been accomplished in the way of merchandising.

—"Come with me to the receiving room," says one buyer after another, "and I'll show you the most remarkable lot of merchandise you ever laid eyes on, at prices that will astonish you."

—"You haven't window space nor newspaper pages sufficient to give prominence to all the items that I have provided," said another buyer.

—If it were only possible for the Los Angeles public to be brought into the receiving room, one by one, and there shown the bales and boxes and case after case of merchandise as they are brought out and marked for this 21st Annual Sale, then would they be fully impressed with the importance of this annual event.

—There is an undercurrent of optimism that lifts this sale far and away beyond the ordinary event.

—"Volume of business," says the management. "Volume of business," echoes the merchandise office, the advertising office. "Volume of business," says the department manager, and so on through the whole organization volume of business is the motive power that is driving the Department Managers' Sale into a leading position as a merchandising event in the city of Los Angeles.

—Every single day important, every week with its new opportunities; there is to be no letting down until the closing bell of the very last selling day.

SOCIETY.

both here and in Los Angeles. On Saturday afternoon these popular young society buds were the guests of Miss Annabelle Ralphs at a charming tea given at the new palatial home of Mrs. George Alfred Ralphs in Hollywood. On Monday night Mrs. Robert Gortner, formerly of this city, and still one of the leading spirits of the social and club life of South Pasadena, entertained with a delightful informal dancing party at her home on Boston street, Altadena. This was given for Mrs. Gortner's nephew, William Bade, who is the house guest of Attorney and Mrs. Gortner. Bidden to meet the honor guest were the Misses Patterson, Julia Nettlefinger, Martha White and Messrs. Charles Horton, Everett Brayley, Ben Carpenter and William Perry.

The Misses Marjorie and Beatrice Kipp very graciously entertained the members of the Young People's Sewing Club on Tuesday evening at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kipp, 1441 Spruce street. After some time spent with needlework, music and a social time were enjoyed, during which very delicious refreshments were served. Those comprising this energetic circle of young ladies, all of whom were present on Tuesday evening, were Misses Helen Blattner, Alice Stockwell, Margaret Brinckerhoff, Elizabeth Brinckerhoff, Florence Smith, Marjorie and Beatrice Kipp and Mrs. Glen Aron (until recently Miss Bess Pickle.)

A double wedding, somewhat out of the ordinary in its nature, was an event of Monday night, when the contracting parties assembled with a group of friends at the home of the Rev. C. W. Jackson, 812 Stratford avenue, where the ceremony was performed. Miss Grace Jenks and Mr. Zenos Forbush were the first to be united in the bonds of matrimony, with the Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, as the officiating clergyman. Immediately following Miss Hazel Hood and Mr. Don Davis were made husband and wife by the ceremony which was read by the Rev. Mr. Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. Davis left for their home in Los Angeles, where their honeymoon will be spent, and Mr. and Mrs. Forbush departed for Catalina, where they will remain for an indefinite stay.

Inviting in a number of friends informally to meet their sister-in-law, Mrs. La Verne Di Vall, the Misses Bessie and Nellie Di Vall were hostesses Saturday afternoon at a most enjoyable tea. Those who were present to greet this charming young matron from Los Angeles were Mrs. Amel Leland, Mrs. Randolph Leland, Mrs. Carl Fosley, Mrs. James Di Vall and Miss Alice Thomas. The afternoon was spent with music and conversation, after which refreshments were served by the hostesses. The affair was an unusually enjoyable one.

ATASCADERO.

Mrs. Andrew Hansen was surprised last Saturday by the arrival of about thirty of her friends, who came to help her celebrate her birthday. A pleasant evening was spent in music, dancing and conversation, after which an enormous birthday cake appeared, covered with tiny, flaming candles and little flags and followed by delicious raspberry ice cream and fruit punch.

Mrs. Emma Smith arrived from New York, Saturday, and is visiting Mrs. M. A. Travis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Nye have been spending two weeks in the south, settling their daughter, Mrs. Margery Faddis, in her new home in San Diego, and leaving the other daughter, Mrs. Helen Baecht, with her new baby, in Los Angeles, whence she will soon start for her home in Arizona.

Dr. and Mrs. Carl Bryant are entertaining Miss Thurza Louttit, an old friend from Kansas City, Mo., the Bryants' former home.

Harry Floaten, a representative of the Pacific Co-operative League, of San Francisco, spent Friday in Atascadero.

Miss Harriett Tipton of Occidental College, is spending the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Tipton, on the North Highway.

Miss Alice Peck, who has been visiting the U. O. Bible family, has returned to her home in Long Beach.

The L. J. Loken family is spending the summer vacation at Atascadero Beach, camping in the Willows.

Dr. and Mrs. C. J. Steinwald of Selma, Cal., are staying in the home of Mrs. Sarah Gregory.

Mr. and Mrs. William Crilley gave a delightful dinner party Monday evening, entertaining the following officers and members of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Minnie D. Henry of King City, Deputy Grand Matron of the twenty-third district of the Grand Chapter of California, and the house-guest of Mrs. Crilley, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Trussler of Paso Robles, Mrs. L. L. Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Lint, the Misses Ethel and Mildred Higgins, Mrs. Julia Meyer, Mrs. Mary Falconer, Mrs. Nellie Benney and Mrs. Almeda Berry. At the conclusion of the dinner, the party adjourned to the theater building to attend the meeting of the Eastern Star.

The Eastern Star held a special meeting Monday evening, July 25, for the visit of Mrs. Minnie D. Henry, the Deputy Grand Matron of the twenty-third district of the California Grand Chapter. The work was put on in full and duly complimented and corrected by the deputy, who gave a most interesting and instructive address, after which Mrs. Crilley presented her, in behalf of the chapter, with a charming picture of an Atascadero scene. Mrs. Margaret Hyde sang two selections, after which refreshments were served.

BAKERSFIELD.

Miss Mary Z. Matlack, daughter of Mrs. Margaret V. Matlack and of the late W. V. Matlack, became the bride of Howard E. Clarke of Taft at a wedding which took place in Taft Friday evening. Miss Matlack is a popular young Bakersfield girl, while the groom is assistant manager of the Security Trust Company of Taft. Present at the wedding were Mrs. W. V. Matlack, Mrs. Edith McWilliams and Mr. and Mrs. Ross C. Miller.

The J. O. C. class of the First Methodist Church entertained with a surprise party recently at the home of Miss Ruth Moore, in honor of Miss Alberta Whitmer, whose engagement to Alvin Smith was announced recently. The bride-to-be was presented with a pretty gift in the name of the class and an enjoyable social hour was spent, followed by the serving of refreshments. In addition to the honoree, the following were present: Mesdames H. E. Metzner, W. A. Whitmer; Misses Mary Meudell, Edith Valencia, Ruth Whitmer, Marjorie Mandeville, Irene Epperson, Frances Jutson, Florence Jutson, Mildred Hay and Eunice Uebele.

Elsie Renaud and Charles W. Bloemer were married at Fresno a few days ago at the First Methodist Church in that city, Rev. C. J. Stevens officiating. The announcement made by Tod Mosier, who accompanied them when they motored to the raisin city yesterday, is a surprise to Bakersfield friends of the couple, although not entirely unexpected.

Mrs. Bloemer came here from Minnesota about seven years ago. Her husband is a well-known real estate and club man, and has been in business here for fifteen years.

After a wedding trip of two weeks' duration, which will include visits to Del Monte and other northern vacation resorts, Mr. and Mrs. Bloemer will be at home at 2428 Twenty-first street.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. George Manley, Mrs. B. F. Cooper, Miss Louise Tyrer, Miss Ella Bleser and Miss Natalia Bleser have left by motor for various points in the northern part of the State. After visiting Mrs. G. A. Perkins in Gilroy, Mrs. Bennett will join Mr. Bennett in San Francisco for a two weeks' vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Manley and the Misses Blesers will be in San Francisco for a month. Mrs. Cooper will stop in San Jose, and Miss Tyler will go to Sonoma county.

Miss Eleanor Forbes, who taught last year in the city schools, was married to Frank McGee, at Franklin, Pa., Saturday, July 23, at 12 o'clock, according to word received by friends here. Mr. and Mrs. McGee are taking an extended motor trip through the Eastern States, after which they will make their home in Pittsburg, Mr. McGee's native city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Moon, Miss Genevieve Moon and Miss Helen Moon have returned from a delightful trip through the northern part of the State. Motoring to Fresno about two weeks ago, they were in that city for a few days before visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Moon at Watsonville. Several days were spent at Monterey, Santa Cruz, Carmel-by-the-Sea, and the whaling station at Moss Landing, before the return home.

Mrs. Rowen Irwin, Miss Mildred Irwin, Mrs. Lillie Edgar and little Nagene Edgar, have departed for a short visit with Mrs. Irwin's and Mrs. Edgar's mother, Mrs. S. A. Rounsaville of Anaheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira E. Porter have returned home after three weeks' vacation. Mrs. Porter has been in Long Beach, Los Angeles, and the adjacent beaches, where she was joined by Mr. Porter after an extended eastern trip, shortly before the return home.

Mrs. George Jordan was hostess at her home on L street, to Mrs. J. A. Murlin, Alfred Standish, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Standish and their children, Miles, Ervin, Jr., and Jean. The afternoon was pleasantly passed with music, furnished by Mrs. Standish.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Munzer and Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Hanna have returned from a motor trip through twenty-two counties of this State. One of the most beautiful portions of the trip was the journey through the Feather River country, with its many lakes. The party spent a few days at Lake Tahoe, where they met a number of local people, among them being Miss Mildred Gibson and Mrs. Fern Keen Gates of Glendale, who are at the Tavern, and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Tupman at Glenbrook. They were gone about three weeks in all.

Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy and daughters, Misses Gracia, Edna and Florence, have returned from a delightful outing at Venice, Catalina Island, and San Diego.

TERRA BELLA.

Miss Annabelle Petty of San Pedro, house guest of her aunt, Mrs. R. E. McCoy, was the incentive for several entertainments during the week just past. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. McCoy chaperoned a party of young people upon a swimming party at Visalia. As they were returning home, the merrymakers stopped at Lindsay to enjoy refreshments. Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. McCoy were hosts to the Christian Endeavor Society, who came in costume. Prizes were awarded, games furnished diversion for the guests and refreshments were served at a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brumagin and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lewis spent the week-end at Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry West are visiting in Alhambra this week, making the trip via motor.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dowell are enjoying a summer outing at Long Beach.

Mrs. A. S. Clover has gone to Catalina Island for a stay of several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Burtner and children motored to Pinehurst last week, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Phillips, who are spending the summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Curtis have gone to Sacramento, where they expect to remain for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Whitwell and daughter have returned from a vacation spent at Grant's Park. They were accompanied by their guests, Mrs. G. H. Hamilton and children of Bakersfield.

SANTA PAULA.

Cielo Vista, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. DeNure on Hill Road, has been the scene of a happy house party for the past week, the guests departing on Saturday for their homes. Those who were present were: Mrs. L. L. Clayton of Berkeley and Mrs. F. E. Ramsaur of Los Angeles, both sisters of Mrs. DeNure; Mrs. Mattie E. Walker, also of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Charles Deegan and little son Richard of Hollywood.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers has gone to Los Angeles, where she will make her home and continue her vocal studies, planning to go in the fall to New York City. Her sister, Mrs. E. B. Briscoe of Seattle, returned recently to the northern city, taking with her Mrs. Rogers's little daughter, Betty, for a year's stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal H. Gillis of Illinois have arrived in Santa Paula, where Mr. Gillis will assume the management and direction of physical education and manual training in the city schools. They are located temporarily at the Clayton Apartments.

Harold Hall Scott and Harold Loper of the University of Redlands, are guests of fellow students, Claire and Douglas McPhee. Other Redlands alumni visiting with them on

Facts About
Diamond Prices

Several articles have appeared recently in News Print that the price of Diamonds was lowered. These papers have erroneously confounded the drop in the price of the SHARES of the De Beers syndicate with the price of DIAMONDS.

If dividend prospects diminish, it is perfectly natural that the stock must depreciate, but we have the absolute assurance of the De Beers Company that the price of DIAMONDS will not be less in the future.

DONAVAN & SEAMANS pre-eminent position in the DIAMOND MARKETS of being able to purchase unlimited amounts of the finest quality of Diamonds for cash has enabled us at all times to offer you perfect BLUE WHITE DIAMONDS at prices which cannot be undersold.

Our policy has been our IDEAL for over a quarter century, and will be maintained in the future, as in the past, of offering you only the finest quality of DIAMONDS at the lowest possible price. If you are interested in QUALITY, give this a little quiet thought.

"Rotogravure"—A Costly Process

Both the equipment and the process for publishing a Rotogravure section are costly. THE TIMES is the only newspaper on the Pacific Coast which gives its readers one of these beautiful art supplements. And yet this is only one of many exclusive features in the SUNDAY TIMES.

APPENDICITIS

Appendicitis attacks at any moment, even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by stomach trouble or constipation. Many people have a bowel movement every day, but it is not a COMPLETE movement and much old, stale matter stays in the system to ferment and cause trouble. Often there is only a small passage in the center of the bowels while the sides are covered with old, hard matter which sticks to the bowels and often poisons the system for months, making you feel tired all the time and "half-sick." Even if your bowels move slightly each day, that is not enough. There must be an occasional THOROUGH, complete cleansing to bring out all the accumulated poisonous waste matter.

Appendicitis is an intestinal infection spreading to the appendix, and it can be guarded against in the same manner in which you guard against the spread of throat infection (sore throat.) When you have sore throat, you can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to destroy the germs, and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Very similar treatment is necessary to guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary and a COMPLETE drainage of the bowel system.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTIC.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleaner. This preparation, known as Adler-I-Ka, acts as follows:

It tends to destroy or remove harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most COMPLETE system cleaner ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and bringing out foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart and other vital organs. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adler-I-Ka draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter is brought out which was poisoning your system. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headaches, one spoonful Adler-I-Ka ALWAYS brings relief. Adler-I-Ka is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary stomach and bowel medicines and the various oils and waters, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action.

REPORTS FROM PHYSICIANS.

"I have used Adler-I-Ka in my practice and have found nothing to excel it." (Signed) Dr. W. A. Line.

"I have found nothing in my 30 years practice to excel Adler-I-Ka." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adler-I-Ka in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adler-I-Ka I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

"Thanks to Adler-I-Ka I can sleep all night now, something I could not do for years." (Signed) Cora E. Noblett.

Adler-I-Ka is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

PERFECT HEALTH AND BEAUTY.
Are not attained by the use of drugs and elaborate systems of physical exercise; if they were, you would not have to pay for treatments which do not produce curative results. If you crave health, beauty, youthful energy, courage and mental poise, I will make it possible for you to acquire them. If, within from 15 to 30 days, I do not give you a new lease on life, you will not owe me one penny; if I cure you, donate any amount you deem just. Does it occur to you that I could not afford to make this offer unless my system was based upon truth and merit?

PERSONAL—"A WEAK SPINE."
A deformed, rigid and weak spine is the cause of many internal afflictions, it is manifested by wry neck, unevenly drooped shoulder, protruding scapula (shoulder blade,) stooping and sway back, one high hip seemingly due to a short leg. Even difficulties of the lower limbs, joints and feet are due to such weakness, a drawing pain especially in the lower back is always symptomatic. To strengthen and straighten the spine by repeated, specified curative and corrective movements of an active and passive character is the only reliable way to overcome such conditions. FOR SALE—THE MOST SENSATIONAL BARGAINS IN HIGH-GRADE PIANOS EVER OFFERED IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Generally special sales show some profit, but in this case we will show an actual loss.

WE ARE CLOSING OUT OUR ENTIRE LINE OF

at less than cost.

39 Sohmer, uprights and grands will be closed out at prices which have no precedent in piano merchandising history. Beginning tomorrow at 9 a.m., we will discontinue this agency, which we have handled for 15 years.

The reason for this—the Sohmer Company now requires that anyone selling Sohmer Pianos must also handle the Sohmer Player Piano. This we will not do, as we believe the Duo-Art is the greatest of all reproducing pianos and is made only in the Steinway, Weber, Steck, Wheelock and Stroud pianos. Hence the Sohmer agency has been transferred to another house. We will close out our stock immediately.

These pianos are brand new, some of them are still in our warehouse yet unboxed.

Our stock includes:

15 Cupid grand models; today's regular price $1250.00
Our closing-out price 839.50
4 style 14 uprights, regular price today 700.00
Our closing-out price 488.75
7 style 9 B. baby grands; regular price today $1350.00
Our closing-out price 879.75
3 style 9 parlor grands, regular price today $1550.00
Our closing-out price 943.00
10 style 45 uprights, regular price today ......$ 750.00
Our closing-out price 523.25

ALSO USED UPRIGHT PIANOS, $295 UP.

Makes included are the well-known Kurtzmann, Krakauer, Brinkerhoff, Laffargue, Estey, Sohmer, Steinway, Mason & Hamlin, used; Packard, used; Lester, used; Kimball, used, and others.

USED GRANDS FROM $395 UP.

Including the famous Steinway, Sohmer, Kurtzmann, Krakauer makes; some can scarcely be told from new instruments.

ALSO MANY BIG BARGAINS IN PLAYER PIANOS PRICED FROM $450 UP.

Including many standard nationally known brands.

KING HAS "EVIL EYE."

Baby Constantine Sponsored Died Soon After Ruler Held It.

That King Constantine is no mascot has long been the opinion of Venizelists, and now even those who welcomed him back are beginning to wonder if he was not better at a distance. Nothing but misfortune has come to the country since he returned.

Exchange has gone down; the price of bread gone up; the treaty of Sevres is not only suspended, but threatened with rupture at the hands of Kemal Pasha; trade is bad; class after class is being carried to the colors, and the dreams of a few months ago have proved to be very, very vain.

The monarch's supporters called those things the natural result of the Venizelos policy. "He sowed the wind; you are reaping the whirlwind," they said. But something has occurred to make even Venizelos's bitterest enemies unable to put the blame on him.

A newspaper man who had worked hard for Constantine before and since his restoration lately became the proud father of a boy. Anxious to flatter so useful an ally the King offered to stand godfather to the robust baby. The parents were delighted and the christening took place. A few minutes after Constantine had held him in his arms the infant died. The doctors can give no explanation, as the child had been very healthy.

The Venizelists insist that the King has the "evil eye" and the only way to rid Greece of its misfortunes is to send him away again. —[Athens Dispatch in New York World.

THE MEDICINAL PIPE.

Pipe smokers are the backbone of the tobacco forces. The pipe has even more strength in the country than in the city, and there is an esprit de corps among pipe smokers which makes them a kind of national fraternity. The choice of a pipe, with the subsequent rites of breaking in and coloring and cutting the cake, exercises a peculiar fascination over the masculine mind. Pipe mixtures afford a conversational interest which cannot be touched by brands of cigars or cigarettes. All of this has been reflected in literature, particularly in the essay. The essay stands or falls with the pipe.

Pipe and cigar have also a medical value denied to the cigarette. Dr. W. H. Golston of Camden, addressing the New Jersey Medical Society, points out that the harder smokers are prophylactic for diseases of the gums and teeth. It seems likely, then, that pipe and cigar will be available on dentist's prescription when the cigarette is as dead as light wines and beer.—[Chicago News.

POWER IN NORWAY.

Hydroelectrical energy constitutes one of the most valuable resources possessed by Norwegian industry and trade. The value of the waterfalls of Norway lies not alone in their numbers, but also in their favorable location, many of them lying in the immediate vicinity of the sea coast and of good harbors. The natural wealth this water power represents has been more conducive than any other factor to the rapid expansion of Norwegian industries during recent years. It has even been said that industrial Norway has been built up entirely on white coal.

There has not existed any complete survey of the volume of water power available in this country. The directorate of water courses has, however, prepared a provisional survey of the power volume the various water courses will be capable of yielding when harnessed, and also of the power volume already harnessed.—[Norwegian Trade Review.

SINGS IN THREE VOICES.

The crazy news comes from Washington that the Federal Board for Vocational Education has discovered a man who is destined, it seems, to be a chorus all by himself. His name is Joseph Kaufman, a disabled veteran of the war. He has the ability, so the board asserts, "to sing in three voices at one time," sounding like "three men side by side singing in unison."

The board is careful to add that only one similar case has ever been known in the United States. It is also announced that Kaufman has been placed in a Minneapolis school of music to prepare for a career in vaudeville.—[Musical America.

ON THE DARK SIDE.

A Singularly Unfortunate Institution is the Weather.

The weather is a singularly unfortunate institution. When it is bad it is freely abused; when it is good it becomes an object for profound suspicion. A wet day is an abomination; a fine one is an incipient drought. Three fine days in succession are enough to bring into blossom little paragraphs announcing that somebody's water supply will shortly have to be curtailed, and a week of them sees the farmers of Blankshire eloquently face to face with approaching ruin. A bad summer will not bear thinking about; a good one is proof that the climate of Europe is rapidly changing, that the North Pole will soon enjoy the temperature of the equator, and that a few more thousand years will see mankind finally frizzled off the surface of a thoroughly inhospitable planet. This grateful and comforting game of looking a gift horse in the mouth is now being applied to the only good result of the coal stoppage—our cleaner atmosphere. Having survived the first shock of ill-considered gratitude at being able to see their own city, many Londoners, an evening paper announces, are now discovering that a feeling of lassitude and an overpowering inclination to yawn are the result of living in an unusually pure atmosphere.—[Manchester Guardian.

LATEST SPORTS AT ATLANTIC BEACHES.

Mother, may I go out to swim?
Oh, yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
But don't go near the water.

With 30,000 in bathing suits at Manhattan and Brighton beaches, one striking fact was apparent, that the ocean nowadays is the least important feature of a beach. There are still a few old-fashioned persons who really do go into the water and seem to enjoy it, but the vast majority seem to frequent the sands merely for the privilege of roaming about in light and comfortable garb, playing handball, boxing, wrestling and dancing, and especially eating picnic lunches on the sand and letting the eggshells fall where they may.

One youth who returned to his home in uptown New York last night was telling his brother about a great day at the beach.

"I got down there at 10 o'clock in the morning," he said, "and was in my bathing suit right away. We played a lot of handball and volley ball until about 1 o'clock, then we all went over to a beach cafeteria and packed in a lot of grub. We rested a while and then we played this new game of cage ball. There was a band concert and we danced with the girls. Before dark we were dressed and ate another meal and then we sat around for a couple of hours and looked at the outdoor movies. I sure had a lot of fun."

"How was the water?" the kid brother wanted to know.

"Gosh!" said the "bather" after a minute, "do you know, I forgot to go in!"—[New York World.

TAGGED HIMSELF.

Capt. Thomas E. Halls of the United States Secret Service, being by birth an Englishman, is partial to English soaps for his bath. Thereon hangs a tale.

The captain bought some delicately perfumed soap of the finest oils, etc., the bars of which were of unusual design and were tagged thus: "Patent applied for."

As soon as he arrived home the captain tried a bar of the new soap in washing his face. Then he seated himself at the dinner table.

"Will you please explain why you have tagged your head?" asked Mrs. Halls.

"I don't understand you," replied the captain.

"Well, you have a tag on your forehead which says 'Patent applied for,'" explained Mrs. Halls.—[Indianapolis News.

SHE HAD AN ORDER.

A woman on her first railway trip noticed the communication cord overhead, so she gave it a pull with her umbrella. The whistle sounded, the brakes were put on and the train began to slacken its speed.

Presently the guard appeared and asked "Who pulled the cord?"

"I did," replied the woman, meekly.

"Well, what do you want?"

"Some ham sandwiches and a cup of tea, please."—[Edinburgh Scotsman.

Locomotive Recovering.

A Pennsylvania mule—probably transplanted from Missouri—got on a Pennsylvania railroad track the other day, and was knocked into an adjoining Pennsylvania pasture by a Pennsylvania locomotive. The mule was found a few minutes later quietly grazing without a care in the world, and the locomotive will be ready for another run in a few days.—[Kansas City Star.

RUTH PASSES CENTURY MARK.

First of Big League Players to Make Hundred Runs.

Heilman Still King Swatter in the American.

Hornsby Continues at the Top in the National.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—Babe Ruth, baseball's home-run king, has the distinction of being the first player in the major leagues to pass the century mark this season in runs scored, registering 101 times for the Yankees.

In the National League, Frank Frisch of the Giants leads in runs scored with 77.

Ruth batted out only three singles in the four Yankee games since compilation of the last averages, but stretched his total base record to 259 bases. This is the result of 113 hits, which include his 36 home runs, which are unchanged from a week ago, 24 doubles and 7 triples. Ruth is batting .355.

ADDS TO MARK.

Harry Heilman, the slugging outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, was the only member of the leading seven batters who have played in fifty-five or more games, who added to his mark of a week ago with an average of .430. Ty Cobb, pilot of the Tigers, dropped a point, trailing his outfielder with an average of .388, while Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians, slumped three points and is just behind the Georgia peach with .381.

S. Harris, Washington, added a brace of stolen bases to his string and has a total of 19. His closest rival is George Sisler, the St. Louis star, who has 16.

Other leading batters: Tobin, St. Louis .378; Severeid, St. Louis, .366; Williams, St. Louis, .362; Veach, Detroit .351; E. Collins, Chicago, .351, Sisler, St. Louis, .351; Sewell, Cleveland, .346.

CRACKS FOUR.

George Kelly of the Giants, during the past week, cracked out four circuit drives, bringing his total for the season to 17, according to averages released today. Meusel, formerly with the Phillies, and now a team-mate of the slugging New York first baseman, and Roger Hornsby, the St. Louis star, are Kelly's closest rivals for four-ply drives, being tied with 12 each.

Hornsby, who brought his total base collection to 235 during the past week, continues to top the National League batters with an average of .416. He made his total base record on 147 hits, which included 26 doubles and 13 triples.

Pep Young of the Giants has tied Cutshaw of Pittsburg for the runner-up honors to Hornsby for players who have participated in fifty-five or more games. They are tied with .362, while McHenry of St. Louis is next with .358.

IS HIGH MAN.

Frisch of New York, who, with 77, is high man for runs scored in the league, is out in front among the base stealers, having pilfered two bases during the past week. His string now is 28.

Other leading batters: Meusel, New York, .354; Maranville, Pittsburg, .341; Fournier, St. Louis, .340; B. Grimes, Chicago, .339; C. Williams, Philadelphia, .339; Maisel, Chicago, .333; Roush, Cincinnati, .333; Mann, St. Louis, .333.

MISSING MAN SOUGHT.

Wife Fears Former San Diegan May Have Been Bandits' Victim.

Police and members of the Sheriff's staff have joined in a hunt for J. E. Pendleton, former San Diego business man, who came to Los Angeles recently in search of a position. His wife, who arrived here yesterday to aid in the hunt, told the police that her husband sent her a night letter Tuesday in which he told her he was going to Venice with a new-found friend who lives in Los Angeles.

Since that time no word has been received from her husband, she told the police, and she expressed fear that he may have been the victim of bandits.

VOLUNTEERS FOR RED CROSS WORK SOUGHT.

Chairman D. C. MacWatters of the Los Angeles Chapter, American Red Cross, announces that the workroom is open at 941-945 South Broadway, where volunteer workers are furnished every facility for sewing, sorting and packing garments for the naked children of Eastern and Central Europe. An urgent request is made for additional volunteer workers to assist in this most worthy cause.

The workroom is open to receive contributions of money and clothing for the destitute people of Europe.

Los Angeles Chapter has already shipped sixty-two large packing cases filled with clothing for the children of Europe with a total of 11,715 garments, and is very anxious to send forward, during August, a shipment consisting of warm clothing and shoes for adults as well as children. Persons who are unable to make delivery of contributions to the workroom should call 15937 and the packages will be called for by auto truck, it is announced.

FORDNEY GETS SCISSORS.

Hopes to Cut Tax Bill $500,000,000 Next Year, House Committee Told.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Republicans of the House Ways and Means Committee conferred today for a development of views on tax revision. Many divergent opinions were developed, but no decisions reached. Emphasizing that he was speaking for himself, Chairman Fordney said afterward that the goal toward which he would strive would be a cut of $500,000,000 in the tax bill next year. His opinion was that by the exercise of rigid economy the government could be operated for $3,500,000,000 in 1922, instead of the $4,000,000,000 estimated by the treasury.

Other members were less optimistic.

Practically all members are in sympathy with the repeal of the transportation taxes, but they have not yet fixed on a new course of revenue to offset the loss of $230,000,000.

Chairman Fordney's idea is that if the repeal of the whole is found impracticable, a start might be made by cutting them in half next year and eliminating the balance the year following.

While committee Republicans have reached no definite decisions on the proposed revisions, it appears to be fairly well established that there will be no alterations in the normal rates on individual incomes or in the amount of exemptions allowed. There probably will be some shifting of the tax burden in other directions.

Asked about the repeal of what the treasury has characterized as "nuisance" taxes, such as that on soda water, Mr. Fordney said smilingly that all the taxes were "nuisances."

The treasury and Internal Revenue Bureau officials are expected to present some new recommendations to the committee Monday in executive session as well as renewing the administration proposal for repeal of the excess profits and higher surtaxes and increasing the normal income tax on corporations from 10 to 15 per cent.

There is a difference of opinion among members as to the time which will be necessary to frame the tax bill. Representative Frear, Republican, Wisconsin, said today it might be September before the measure could be made ready for the House.

Nab Man Said to Be Ku Klux Letter Writer.

Ending a search that has lasted for several weeks, Detective Sergts. Posner and Adams yesterday arrested Russell Common, 33 years of age, and sent him to the County Hospital where his sanity will be investigated.

Common, the police charge, is the man who has been writing letters to Dist.-Atty. Woolwine, in which he described purported activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Los Angeles and ranted against certain religious and fraternal bodies.

Police also charge that Common suffers from hallucinations to the effect that he is being poisoned. Several restaurants on the East Side have been the scenes of Common's asserted tirades when he asserted the waiters were endeavoring to place poison in his food.

NOW SEEK SPURGIN IN DETROIT.

Fugitive President of Defunct Chicago Bank Seen in That City.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—Search for Warren G. Spurgin, fugitive president of the wrecked Michigan Avenue Trust Company today centered around Detroit. It is said that a man who has been positively identified as Spurgin, rode through the streets of Detroit last Wednesday in a taxicab. It is the theory that he has been unable to slip into Canada and may be hiding in or near Detroit, growing a beard and otherwise disguising himself before he attempts to get across the border.

John A. Conrad, vice-president of the wrecked bank, went into conference today with the authorities. He says he has the utmost faith in Spurgin and always obeyed his orders without question.

"If I hadn't done as he told me I would have been fired," said Conrad, whose name is registered with the State Commissioner of Mines in Colorado, as the secretary of Eurades Mining Company in which Spurgin is said to have sunk $150,000. Conrad was under the impression that a man named Leon C. Brower was secretary of the mining company, as that name had been rubber-stamped into the signature space on the bonds of the company left in the bank.

Another woman friend of the missing banker was located today. She is a divorcee and Spurgin wanted to give her the position of bookkeeper in his Ouray mines. For this purpose she frequently accompanied him to the bank after business hours, where he gave her courses in bookkeeping to fit her for the proposed position.

There is still hope that depositors will fare better than at first supposed, but the stockholders of the looted institution will be hard hit.

SIX HELD HERE AS BAY CITY SUSPECTS.

POLICE CAPTURE MEN AFTER GETTING WARNING OF BAY CITY HOLD-UP.

Following receipt of a telegram from Chief of Police O'Brien of San Francisco Friday evening, stating that five Italians had held up a club in San Francisco and fled toward Los Angeles in an automobile with a large amount of money and jewelry, six youths of swarthy complexion were taken into custody at First and Hill streets last night and booked at the City Jail on suspicion of robbery.

They gave their names as Vito Tufo, Peter Foley, John Meers, Frankie Murphy, James Hennessey and Frankie Thomas.

The youths admitted, according to Detective Sergeants Carr and Smith, who made the arrests, that they had just arrived from the northern city. They had in their possession a touring car registered, it was found, to John Menz of 636 Broadway, San Francisco.

At a hotel at Eighth and Spring streets, where the sextet had secured rooms, a black handbag and wicker suit case similar to those described in the telegram as being in the possession of the hold-up men were found by the detectives. No money or jewelry was discovered.

The police wired last night for further details of the hold-up of the club.

TOM BROWN TO LEAD CALIFORNIA DRYS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—Direct enforcement of the Volstead Act in California has been assigned to Tom Brown, chief deputy under Prohibition Director E. F. Mitchell, it was announced yesterday. Brown, who will assume his new duties within a few days, will have charge of the staff of prohibition enforcement agents throughout California and will attend to all matters of raids and arrests.

The appointment of Brown is in line with the reorganization plans of the prohibition forces, Mitchell said. John Exnicios, Federal prohibition enforcement officer, is expected to turn over his office to Mitchell tomorrow or Monday.

TWINS ARE FULL OF MOONSHINE.

Deputies Who Stop Woman to Admire Babies Find Them to be Jugs of Liquor.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MILWAUKEE, July 30.—Two deputy sheriffs cruising around on motorcycles in search of prohibition violators stopped to admire Mrs. Frances Opacinsky's children today. After patting 4-year-old Victoria they asked to see the baby, but the mother refused to turn back the perambulator cover, saying the child was sick. Not to be denied, the deputies drew back the cover and discovered twins — two two-gallon jugs of moonshine. The woman, her husband and the baby carriage were taken to the police station.

MANY DISAPPEAR IN BUDAPEST.

Six Hundred Persons Reported Missing in Month; Police Are Busy Explaining.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

GENEVA, July 30.—The strange disappearance of 600 persons during June last is reported from Budapest. The police of that city try to explain this by saying that the population is in such a state of extreme nervousness that it suffices for a person to be absent from home for two days to make his relatives fear he has been removed in some criminal way. With the terror reigning in the city, however, they cannot explain the disappearance in a single month of 600 persons whom the police cannot trace.

MAN SLAIN; KILLER IS FUGITIVE.

Fatal Dispute Blamed on Liquor; Police Hunt for Asserted Murderer.

As a climax to what was considered by the police as a family disagreement originated and developed by the use of liquor, Jerry Culloty, aged 47 years, a machinist in the Southern Pacific shops, was shot and killed in his room at 1454½ North Main street last night.

Thomas Christopher Kelly, aged 51 years, an employee of the Union Tank and Pipe Works, living at 1429 East Fifty-fourth street, is accused by the police of firing the fatal shot into Culloty's left breast.

Pat Sullivan of 1259 East Jefferson street and C. J. Wolverton and Mrs. Katherine Conway of 1454½ North Main street witnessed the shooting.

According to a report, made by Detective Sergeants Cato and Cahill, Kelly, under the influence of liquor, had appeared at the rooming-house in company with an unidentified man and asked Mrs. Conway if his wife was with her, stating that he was not going to have his wife associate with "drinking people." Mrs. Conway, the detectives declared, said she had not seen Kelly's wife, whereupon the latter struck her. Mr. Culloty then appeared and, in coming between Mrs. Conway and Kelly, was shot.

After the shooting, the report states, the unidentified man held Mrs. Conway in her room under cover of a revolver, after which he and Kelly ran out and escaped in the crowd on Main street.

The police have complete descriptions of both Kelly and his companion. The body of Mr. Culloty was removed to the Button undertaking establishment.

Six Killed as Tramway Car Falls in Ravine.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GRAND JUNCTION (Colo.) July 30.—Six men were killed, and six others injured, three seriously, when a tramway car cable slipped out of the swivel late today at the Schuyler Doyle Shale Company's plant, the car plunging to the floor of the gulch, 2000 feet below.

The shale plant tram line is built on a 70 per cent grade and the men had just started from the plant to the valley when the cable parted. It is believed some of them jumped while the car was traveling at a tremendous rate of speed. Their bodies were found all along the route of the tram line.

The scene of the accident is three miles north of Grand Valley and forty-five miles from Grand Junction along Parachute Creek. The Coroner from Glenwood Springs has gone to take charge of the bodies.

Information received here was that the men were mostly foreigners.

Entente Row Over Silesia Closed Book.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, July 29.—With the advent of lesser torrid weather Premier Briand and Premier Lloyd George have both cooled down, and the preliminary quarrel over the upper Silesian settlement may be considered closed. Thus the entente is once again saved from that rupture which pessimists have so often consigned it.

In the note drafted by the French government tonight to be forwarded in the morning, M. Briand backs down to meet the backing down of Mr. Lloyd George and one or two more notes will bring that happy agreement with which the two skillful diplomats love to chase away the clouds of misunderstanding.

Taking off from the summit Durafour made a favorable descent, finally landing at Chamonix.

NORTHCLIFFE IS SILENT.

British Publisher Declines to Answer Questions; Editor Denies Interview.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Lord Northcliffe left for Toronto tonight on another leg of his journey around the world. The British publisher declined to answer questions having reference to his controversy with Premier Lloyd George or the interview erroneously attributed to him by a British newspaper in which King George was quoted as having told the Premier, in a conversation concerning the Irish troubles, that "I cannot have my people killed in this manner."

"London has no orders to give the dominions," was the comment of H. Wickham Steed, editor of the London Times, who accompanied the publisher, when asked whether he expected any such incidents as the cancellation of the British Embassy dinner in Washington, to which they had been invited, on the remainder of Lord Northcliffe's tour.

WAS MISQUOTED, CLAIM.

The interview attributed to Lord Northcliffe in some newspapers abroad and which brought forth a denial from the King was credited to Mr. Steed in Monday's issue of the New York Times, from which it was taken. Mr. Steed, however, declared today he was misquoted.

"The direct statements attributed to me I did not make," he said. "I could not have made them because neither Lloyd George nor the King told me what they said to one another.

"As to the actual facts of the Irish situation it is a fact no one can contest that the possible settlements growing out of the truce are directly accountable to the speech by the King at Belfast—a great-hearted, considerate speech.

KING SEEKS PEACE.

"It also is incontestible that King George feels for all his subjects an equal solicitude and nothing would rejoice him more than to see prospective peace in Ireland.

"The London Times has worked hard for two years to promote the settlement in Ireland that the government seems to be approaching, and we have given Mr. Lloyd George's government the fullest support when it seemed to be treading the path of peace. We shall continue to give the Lloyd George government fullest support in all efforts toward a successful conclusion. No one knows that better than Lloyd George, who for two years has had pertinent reasons to know how true it is. That and that alone was the sense of the quite informal talk I had with the representative of the New York Times."

COMMENT RESTRAINED.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, July 30.—With the single exception of the Morning Post, all the London papers are restrained in their comment on the Lord Northcliffe incident, confining themselves to stating facts and to emphasizing the King's constitutional position. The Post, however, hints that Lord Northcliffe's health is alarming.

"Lord Northcliffe's case is not for the politicians, but for the doctors," says the paper, "and we venture to advise all friends of Lord Northcliffe that unless they take more care of him and keep him quiet he will suffer sooner, rather than later, from a very serious breakdown. There is a point at which megalomania becomes dangerous. The patient must either be persuaded to rest or his friends must fear for the worst."

Deputies Fail to Act on Oil Land Article.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 30.—Indications today as a result of the roll call on monthly officers of the Chamber of Deputies last night were that the Liberal Constitutional party would retain its control in the chamber and that no revision of Article XXVII of the Constitution, relating to oil lands, would take place at this session.

President Obregon has denied that the chamber refused his request for power to revise the article. It was disclosed that no formal vote was taken on the request. A reconciliation between the President and the party is reported to have been effected but without any change respecting the party's attitude on Article XXVII.

A deficit of 1,000,000 pesos monthly coupled with the necessity of rehabilitating generally deteriorated rolling stock and roadbeds, demands the utmost economy on the National Railways, President Obregon told newspaper correspondents last night.

For that reason, he declared, the government was standing firm and would make effective its 20 per cent wage reduction for all railway employees drawing more than 100 pesos monthly notwithstanding their strike threats. He also reiterated that there was no intention of rescinding the decree increasing export taxes on petroleum.

RECEIVES DIVORCE ON PRENUPTIAL PLEDGE.

MAN MADE WIFE PROMISE SHE'D RELEASE HIM WHEN LOVE COOLED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—When William G. Wormly, a live-stock commissioner, was courting his wife, Maybelle, he secured a promise from her that if her love cooled and he found a woman that really loved him and whom he really loved, she would release him to the other woman.

Today Mrs. Wormly appeared before Judge Sullivan and submitted a letter from her husband, reprimanding her for failing to observe this pledge, but more especially for condemning his new love. It read, in part:

"Maybelle, you said that if I found a woman who really loved me and whom I love, you would release me. I have found a woman that would love me as I have all my life wanted to be loved, if she had the right. Will you not make this possible.

"You have wronged the woman to whom I refer many times, in many ways. You are entirely wrong in accusing her. She is as blameless and as pure as you ever were."

Judge Sullivan granted Mrs. Wormly a divorce, and $7000 alimony settlement and custody of their two children, a girl of 18 and a boy of 16.

MAN FROM IOWA IS TRIMMED.

Chicago Visitor from the Hog Belt New to City's Poker.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—Out in Iowa where Jesse Lee resides, they play poker with fifty-two cards, all of them different and there are only four aces.

Jesse had saved up $62.37 and came to Chicago to see the Pageant of Progress and whatever else there was to be seen. Out in Iowa, Jesse was no mean shark at poker, so he did not hesitate when invited to sit in a game here. When he emerged he had the 37 cents of his capital left.

He happened to look under the table and saw five aces, three deuces and two kings, held between the bare toes of one of his opponents. He remonstrated, whereupon the other players propelled him swiftly to the street.

"It was lucky they threw you out," said the sergeant at the police station. "You still have 37 cents. If you had stayed there any longer they would have taken that and also your pants. Better get back to old Ioway before they cut off your ears."

OCTOGENARIANS MEET.

Club Celebrates Birthday of Member at Gathering in Park.

A past—eighty years of it—is the chief eligibility requirement of the Octogenarian Club, which held its monthly meeting in Westlake Park yesterday afternoon. The twelve "active" members made the eighty-sixth birthday of Capt. L. A. Ross, of the younger set of the organization, the occasion for yesterday's gathering. Speeches by the various members, including that of former United States Senator Cornelius Cole of California, who is 99 years old and the oldest living ex-Senator, marked the affair.

Meetings of the Octogenarian Club are held monthly to celebrate the birthdays of each one of the twelve members of the organization. The club was founded in 1913 by Gen. John S. Wilcox, who is the only one of the ten original members still living. Dr. James M. Peebles, Minister to Turkey under President Grant, and who is now 99 years old, is president of the society. C. E. Buell, 85 years old, is secretary, and the membership list includes Dr. Dwight Satterlee, 84 years old; Rev. Henry L. Campbell, 93; Charles M. Slyver, 85; Charles Wake, 84; William Knight, 86; Dr. W. A. Shepard, 85, and Charles B. Ford, 86. Reuben Heffelfinger is the "baby" member of the organization, being only 82 years of age.

OPPORTUNITY TO SEE EUROPE IS OFFERED.

An opportunity is being offered to two young men with globe-trotting aspirations to visit many of the largest cities of Northern Europe, as well as to make a round trip through the Panama Canal, with all expenses paid.

The Swedish motorship Balboa lost two messmen at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday and Capt. Grundberg issued a call for two young Americans to take their places.

The vessel is due to sail for the north tomorrow to load cargo for Europe. The two men will be guaranteed their safe return to Los Angeles Harbor.

WILSON AND COMPANY EMPLOYEES PICNIC.

Hermosa Beach was the scene of Wilson & Co.'s annual picnic yesterday, when 600 employees threw care to the winds and spent a day at games and "eats." The plant and offices of the company were closed all day to enable every employee to take part in the activities.

OWNER Says "Sacrifice His WILSHIRE CITY HOME."

The above is a beautiful residence in an exclusive section of the Wilshire district; this home is one of the most beautifully decorated and one of the best constructed residences in Southern California. Everything to make a home complete has been carried out to the most minute detail—intercommunicating telephones, vacuum cleaning system, steam heat, provision for installation of pipe organ; the morning or sun room is treated in Louis XVI period, breakfast porch in pure Pompeian treatment, with black and white marble floor; the reception hall walls of Caen stone with a ceiling elevation of 18 feet make a most beautiful effect; the large living-room with its Italian mantel is very unusual; the dining-room is 20x20, and is purely Italian. The interior colorings and decorations throughout are very soft in tone, creating a very restful feeling. We guarantee to deliver this property at a reduction of $25,000. No obligation for closest inspection. Get key at our Wilshire office, or tel. Wilshire 1464 for full details.

LORENA HEIGHTS TRACT

Closest-in Subdivision in Los Angeles.

We put this tract on the market two weeks ago today. We have sold 52 lots up to date. There are only 64 lots left.

NOW LISTEN FOLKS

Why live in the outskirts of the city and wait for city improvements and conveniences to come in and then have to pay extra for them when they do come in? We have every improvement and convenience to be found in Los Angeles. Gas, water, electricity, sewer, sidewalks, curbs, streets graded, oiled and graveled. ALL PAID FOR. There is no assessment against any lot.

At the rate these lots are being sold, our tract will be sold out in about two weeks. The time is short. You better get one of these lots at rock-bottom price. There is nothing in the city to compare with them for the price.

This tract is 15 minutes from Seventh and Broadway by street car. It is a stone's throw from the car line. There is one of the best schools in the city adjoining the tract. It is built up solid on three sides with a very good class of houses.

There are some lots left, as low as $600. We are selling these lots for 20 per cent down, balance $15 per month, including interest at 7 per cent.

Beverly Hills.

FOR SALE—
HAVE YOU $2500 FOR INVESTMENT?
IF SO, READ THIS CAREFULLY.
The business district of Beverly Hills is restricted to south of the P. E. tracks. Go out and study the situation. Note the fine new brick stores now being erected on Canyon Drive, adjoining is the City Hall building, and 150 feet south of that is a business lot, east front, 50x150 to 20-ft. alley. Our sign is on it. It has just been listed with us for the very low price of $2500 cash.

Think of it, a good business lot for only $50 PER FRONT FOOT! Yes, there's a sewer in the alley.

This bargain will not last long. Take our advice, buy this lot and forget it for a while, and you will thank us.

Better see us Monday, if possible.

FOR SALE—

A REAL CATTLE RANCH.
A REAL CATTLE RANCH.

CONTAINS NEARLY 400,000 ACRES.
CONTAINS NEARLY 400,000 ACRES.

I am authorized to offer to responsible parties on the easiest of terms, the finest cattle ranch on the Coast without exception. There are altogether, including the government range, about 400,000 acres, of which about 50,000 acres is rich level land capable of irrigation from a river running through the ranch. The soil is excellent for alfalfa, vetch, rye grasses, all kinds of grain, sugar beets, potatoes, etc. From a standpoint of feed for cattle there is nothing like it to be had. We can raise from 40,000 to 50,000 tons of hay a year, besides carrying on the range over 20,000 head of Herefords and 15,000 to 20,000 head of sheep. A river, two railroads, State highway, transcontinental telephone and telegraph lines extend directly through the ranch. Shipping stations and corrals on both roads. There are some 7000 head of cattle now on the ranch, but there should be three times that number.

There are excellent reasons for selling, and this great property in the hands of progressive men, will make them exceedingly large profits.

The price is $1,500,000, and it is a genuine bargain at that. There is no mortgage. I have an intimate knowledge of this property and am qualified to discuss its merits.

PECOS COUNTY OIL FIELD LOOKING BETTER EVERY DAY.

Luse No. 1, now drilling, and Luse No. 2 and No. 3 to start drilling in the near future.

I have just returned from a 10-days' trip to Pecos county, where I closed a deal with a drilling contractor to drill my three wells.

Geologists advise me that my leases are on excellent structure, and that I should get big production in all of my wells.

Now is your greatest opportunity to make some big money by purchasing a 20 years' commercial oil lease on the structure in eastern Pecos county, and share in the production of my three wells.

I am going back to Pecos county next week to start another well.

Delay will certainly cost you money. Quick action may make you a fortune.

Our titles are absolutely perfect; locations cannot be beat, and our prices are right.

The greatest selling proposition ever offered salesmen and brokers, and the best investment for the investor.

BARGAIN DAY IN OIL—
An experienced oil man has just returned from close inspection of Texas oil fields. The froth of speculation is off and there are opportunities now to pick up producing properties with proven undrilled acreage that will make the man who knows how to pick the bargains dollars for cents invested. This is bargain day in the oil fields of Texas. A little syndicate is being formed to take advantage of some of these rare bargains. Do you want to get into a real bargain? If you do and have cash write at once, giving your phone number and amount of cash you have to put in when you are convinced things are right. Address S, box 600, TIMES BRANCH.

FOR SALE—A 1-24 interest in an oil well and all equipment for only $750; this well is now sitting on the oil sand surrounded by production in absolutely proven territory, and should come in within the next few days; this is not stock but an undivided interest in an oil well; this interest should conservatively pay 200 per cent per annum from the oil produced from this well. It might pay several times that much. Many, many other wells in this same field have paid such returns. If you want a REAL OIL INVESTMENT see me at once. This cannot last long. McCARTHY, 323 Stock Exchange Bldg. Phone 66916.

FOR SALE—Only 750 shares left, $15 per share; this oil stock is paying 1 per cent per month now from production; the company has another well that would flow 500 per day now if opened up, but they are drilling it 500 feet deeper to reach the BIG PAY SAND which their neighbors (the Dutch Shell Co.) have and which is producing from 2000 to 15,000 barrels per day; the company has only 90,000 shares outstanding, out of a total of 200,000 shares; this is a wonderful buy and should pay enormous dividends within a very short time. Come in and let me show it to you. McCARTHY, 323 Stock Exchange Bldg. Phone 66916.

MINES AND MINING.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

Don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill small diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 ft. deep. Write for particulars and circulars.

My house has never been on the market before, and my reason for selling is that I want to take a long vacation. It consists of 126 rooms, 8 doubles, and the balance in single apartments. My lease runs better than 8 years at a monthly rental of $6.00 per room. I know my price is low at $24,500. Will take $12,000 cash down and balance can be paid at the rate of $300 a month. There is a very pretty lobby, teakwood furniture, player piano; in fact, my house is overly well furnished and everything is in first-class condition. There are private and public baths; building is situated on a corner and all rooms are outside. They are large and airy. Location is close in on west side, and my net profit is $1100 a month. According to other valuations, I know my place is a bargain for the price I am asking. Address L, box 288, TIMES OFFICE.

LISTEN, FOLKS.

Are you a believer in clean, wholesome, virile moving pictures being shown on the screen—the kind that your child, daughter or wife can go to see without fear of having her sensibilities shocked—the kind of picture that your boy or girl can see without a chaperone—a picture that is censor proof and yet tells a story of real life, one that uplifts, one that creates an ambition in the bosom of every young man or woman who sees it to achieve something in life worth while? If so, I am forming a syndicate of 100 such believers to produce such a motion picture, from an adaptation of a novel by one of England's greatest authors. This is the kind of production the exhibitors are clamoring for. I predict this picture will make a profit for the syndicate of $100,000 in 4 months. The advertiser is an experienced motion picture producer and knows with the great States of New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, Chicago, Kansas, Missouri and Pennsylvania, having censorship laws, that this is the kind of pictures the public wants now and for the future. Whether you want to assist in financing such a production or not, won't every person reading this ad write me their views on this subject? I want to see if the public is with me or not. Address S, box 592, TIMES BRANCH.

AN Exceptional Opportunity.
I own a soft drink and light lunch business in the downtown district, doing an average of $150 a day now. This business will go to $300 or better as soon as the hot weather is over. If the buyer will fill orders for a particular line which I am making to the wholesale trade, there is hardly any limit on the business he can do. I opened this place as an experiment and have proven what can be done. I must leave early in August to get this business developed throughout the entire country, and am going to make some one a most attractive offer for a quick sale. If you are in the market and have a few thousand dollars of actual money, I'll give you an opportunity to make a little fortune, but you must step on it, as time is everything to me now.

TABLET AT MISSION IS UNVEILED.

Granite Memorial Marks Spot of Old San Gabriel Structure.

A granite memorial tablet was unveiled yesterday on the grounds of the old San Gabriel Mission, opposite the Temple oil lease near Montebello. The tablet was donated by Walter P. Temple and it was unveiled by his two little sons, Edgar and Walter. Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell, bishop of the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, assisted by representatives of the clergy of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Alhambra, blessed the tablet. Antonio Orfila, Los Angeles attorney, spoke in Spanish, and Luther A. Ingersoll, authority on California history, in English. The Elks' band played.

"As we reflect upon times and conditions of the mission days, we find much of sadness and of heavily burdened endurance of our men and women of pioneer days," said Mr. Ingersoll. "It is sad to reflect that they can never know of the great blessings and delights their heartaches and their toil have vouchsafed to us. Let us never cease to cherish the memory of those who have made possible the great blessings we today enjoy.

"It was this sentiment, many times expressed to me by Walter P. Temple, that has prompted him to see that this, an enduring granite tablet, permanently locates the sacred spot where first stood old San Gabriel Mission, the hallowed name of which is music and inspiration to the human heart."

The mission was the fourth in California and the first to be established in this vicinity. It was founded in 1771 by the Franciscans.

Mr. Temple entertained a group of Elks at his Puente home after the ceremonies.

MRS. BAKER SPONSOR AT SHIP LAUNCHING.

HUGE FREIGHTER SLIDES TO WATER AT THE PLANT OF LOS ANGELES COMPANY.

Mrs. Milo A. Baker, wife of the vice-president of the Baker Iron Works, sponsored the 11,000-ton Shipping Board freighter West Prospect at the launching of the vessel at Los Angeles Harbor last night. The West Prospect was sent into the West Basin from the plant of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at 5:15 p.m.

The launching program was very successful, the freighter sliding easily into the water of the bay to the tune of the "Star Spangled Banner," played by the shipyard band. Mr. and Mrs. Baker and a party of friends stood on the platform as the vessel was launched, while a large group of spectators stood in the yard below.

The West Prospect is the thirty-fourth freighter built at the local yard. Ground for the plant was broken on Dec. 15, 1917. Since then steel vessels totaling 308,000 tons have been launched at the yard, a 12,000-ton floating dry dock has been installed and many large vessels repaired.

The West Lewark, first of the 11,000-ton type of freighters built at the yard, was delivered on July 7 and chartered immediately by the Williams-Dimond Company for the Pacific Coast-European service. On her maiden run up the Coast to Portland the vessel made a speed of 11.5 knots per hour, developing 4092 horsepower at ninety-two revolutions, although rated at only 3500 horsepower. The 11,000-ton freighters built at the Los Angeles yard have been classed as among the most economical vessels afloat from a standpoint of economy in operation, cargo-loading and storage, and other features.

The SAN DIEGO ARMY and NAVY ACADEMY
Pacific Beach, California

It is one of two military schools in Southern California which enjoys the University of California's highest scholastic rating, "Division A."

It is one of two accredited at West Point and is ranked by the War Department as "an essentially military" school.

It has a system which is unexcelled in looking after, and bringing up, the work of individual students.

It has a real heart interest in developing boys along Christian character lines.

Its advantages of location, near the bay and ocean, in a charming suburb of San Diego, are unsurpassed.

The Academy has purchased the property which it formerly leased, consisting of twenty acres of land and the large buildings on them. Hot and cold water are being put in the rooms and additional extensions, repairs and alterations are being made. Every physical comfort will be provided. Although these improvements will cost many thousands of dollars, there will be no increase in rates for the coming year.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED AT INDIANA STATE PICNIC.

REUNION AT EXPOSITION PARK DECLARED TO BE LARGEST HELD BY HOOSIERS.

What was declared to be the largest and most successful Indiana State picnic ever held in Southern California was enjoyed yesterday at Exposition Park by a crowd estimated at between 1500 and 2000 persons.

F. L. Sims of South Bend, Ind., delivered the principal address. Mr. Sims, who has just returned from a visit to his home State, also brought a message from Gov. McCrea of Indiana to Indiana visitors here asking them to enjoy themselves, but to return in time to help his re-election.

Many reunions took place among old-time friends around the county registers, which were posted on the trees. Clarence Lawler and Miss Golda B. Young had charge of the program, which included whistling solos by Miss George Williams and Miss Edith Snyder.

RESORT COLONY NEAR VENTURA.

Plans Completed and Will be Rushed Through.

Bathing and Fishing Already Attracting Many.

Game Warden Confiscates and Gives Away Barracuda.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, July 31.—Plans have been completed for Ventura's first resort colony, and are to be put into effect at once. Attractive summer cottages are to be erected by the bathhouse management at the bathhouse grounds. Thousands of dollars are to be spent upon this, the most important development of its kind ever instituted along the California coast between Santa Monica and Santa Barbara.

The Rincon beach, extending many miles northwest of Ventura, has attained a sudden popularity this year, wholly without precedent. Literally hundreds of campers, chiefly weekenders from the interior, or through travelers, pitch camp in the sand dunes every week. The bathing and surf fishing are fine at many points.

POOR GIVEN FISH.

Two hundred and fifty pounds of baby barracuda, confiscated by Game Warden Barnett, was distributed among poor families here yesterday while the epicures looked on grief-stricken. The fish were confiscated at Oxnard where they were being illegally sold. Barnett called Miss Leila Tayler, who devotes her life to work among the poor, on the long-distance phone and asked her if she would accept the fish for distribution here. She accepted gladly and was at the depot to receive the fish, which arrived by express on ice. A partial distribution took place there. Only those persons known to Miss Taylor as needy got any, though many who are not at all needy would have paid a good sum to have secured even one fish.

WATER EXTENSION FOR FULLERTON TO START.

FULLERTON, July 30.—Maps, plans and detailed specifications for the $230,000 city water extension project, authorized by the voters of Fullerton at a recent bond election, are being prepared by the staff of the City Engineer's office, aided by Los Angeles specialists.

The work involves the laying of 85,000 feet of mains, approximately sixteen miles, and the building of a 5,000,000-gallon storage reservoir, located in the hills at the north edge of the city.

Nearly 10,000 feet of these mains, which are to be of the cast-iron variety, will be of fourteen-inch diameter, the others running down through the various sizes to the minimum of three inches. Fifteen hundred tons of pipe will be required for the job, equal to about seventy-five ordinary carloads.

The reservoir is to be constructed of reinforced concrete, the dimensions being 312 by 252 and the capacity over 5,000,000 gallons, equal to a five-day supply at the present rate of consumption. It will be covered with a tight, wooden roof to which a coat of tar or asphalt composition will be applied as a preservative.

The estimated cost of the reservoir is $62,000, the plans contemplating that $3000 of this amount be expended for a reasonable amount of ornamentation of the site and immediate surroundings, features of which will be a covered walk all the way around the reservoir and a small concrete pavilion near by.

Bond houses are already making inquiries and it is anticipated that the issue will be marketed and the money in hand by the time the plans are completed.

Investigator Declares This Section Prosperous.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, July 30.—Daniel S. Fox, County Farm Adviser of San Bernardino county, has been elected the new head of the agricultural department of Pasadena High School.

He will resign his post in San Bernardino and come here to take the new position with the beginning of the fall term, succeeding C. N. Carter, who resigned to become head of the agricultural department of the Riverside schools.

The agricultural department of the local school will be reorganized, citriculture and horticulture being specially stressed. Mr. Fox is a graduate of Cornell University. His staff here has been enlarged by the appointment of Willard Coke as a new instructor.

SCHOOL BUDGETS.

The budgets for the Pasadena elementary and high schools and kindergartens total between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 for the coming school year. The budgets were mailed today to the county superintendent from the office of the Pasadena Board of Education. A total of $834,000 will be required for all the purposes of the elementary schools; $815,000 for the High School, and $83,000 for the kindergartens. The board will act on the proposed raise in the teachers' schedule at its next meeting, but provision for it was made in the budget.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Walter W. Biddick, field secretary of the California Automobile Trade Association, is here conferring with officers of the San Gabriel Valley Automobile Trade Association, a until of the State body, and says that business conditions appear to be better here than in any section of the State. He was an honor guest at a dinner of the San Gabriel Association members last evening.

William C. Vaughan has been appointed the new field executive of the Boy Scouts for Pasadena, according to the announcement today of Tallman H. Trask, scout executive and in charge of the general activities of the organization in this city. Mr. Vaughan has traveled all over the world and is familier with the work of the Boy Scouts. He will be in immediate charge of the field work of the scouts here and will conduct the week-end camps at Camp Huntington, the local Scouts' club in Rubio Canyon.

UNABLE TO WAKE VENICE WOMAN.

Young Wife Had Premonition and Tried to Ward Off Unconsciousness.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, July 30.—Mrs. W. W. Overstreet, wife of the operator of a Venice tram car, has been sleeping most of the time since last Wednesday and her husband and relatives are greatly worried over her condition. She can be aroused to eat, but takes only a littl enourishment and says she is too sleepy to eat. All efforts to keep Mrs. Overstreet awake have failed. She seems perfectly contented to sleep and in the few moments she is awake tells her relatives not to worry about her. She seems to have had a premonition that she was going to fall into a state of long drowsiness, however, for last Wednesday she begged her mother not to let her go to sleep for fear she would not wake up again. Mrs. Overstreet is 20 years old.

"SEA MONSTER" IS A FERN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, July 30.—An octoparasitic or crustacean fern is what S. M. Joiner of 1806 Trolleyway has found is the correct description of the marine curio he picked up on the Venice shore line and placed on exhibit at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters. It was thought at first that it was a strange specimen of animal life, but it belongs to the vegetable kingdom, the conclusion now is, except for the mussels or other shell creatures that cling to its branches. Mr. Joiner states that investigation has brought out that there has been some kind of a marine disturbance recently that has damaged the beautiful marine gardens known to lie off the Venice shore. Many specimens of these octoparasitic ferns have been torn loose, it is said and lie along the beach between the two piers. A collection of them has been gathered by Mr. Joiner and placed on exhibit in the Chamber of Commerce.

Hayward succeeded in stopping his own car just as it was about to plunge over the embankment. He was uninjured.

Pens Note to Son and Then Kills Herself.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA BARBARA, July 30.—"My Dear Son: I hold you in my arms and ask you to forgive me for leaving you in this way. I simply have not the courage to stand the constant pain any longer."

So wrote Mrs. Charles Farrington Slawson of 91 Williams street, New York City, and Bay City, Mich., late last night, then slipping an automatic revolver into her coat pocket, she took an automobile from the bungalow at San Ysidro cottages, Montecito, alighted at Miramar, dismissed the automobile, telling the driver she would return home by taxi, and going onto the Miramar pleasure pier she fired a bullet into her right temple, dying instantly.

For ten years she had been an invalid, suffering from a nervous malady which had distorted her neck. Before firing the fatal shot she had discharged her automatic into the sea to be sure it was working properly. Both shots were heard by persons walking on the beach and at Miramar bungalows nearby. George Meyers and Wendell Palmer, Santa Barbara youths, attracted to the pier by the first shot, having seen the woman in the glare of the discharge, seated on a box on the pier, strolled onto the pier and found that the woman had changed her position and had gone to the ocean end of the structure and was seated on a railing, her feet dangling over the side.

They called, as though in search of a friend, and she turned toward them and answered "What?" By the lights streaming from arcs on the shore the youths could plainly see her fifty feet from where they stood. A moment later she fired the fatal shot and fell backward from the railing onto the bed of the wharf.

Early this morning the body was brought to Santa Barbara, and later in the day the son by a first marriage, William Farrington, found his mother's death message where she had slipped it into a book on his bureau. Death by gunshot self-inflicted while suffering temporary aberration, was the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

Mrs. Parsons was on her way to the Municipal Band concert, when a man stepped from a vacant lot and grabbed her left wrist. The handbag blow followed with her right and the attacker fled in pain, eluding the police, who were immediately notified.

Admits Helped Murder a Man Ten Years Ago.

At that time Sheriff Shay wired to Shelby Junction, telling of the arrest and confession, but has not received word of any kind from the officers there. EAST IS "SOLD" ON LOS ANGELES.

President of Realty Board so Announces.

Reports Work of Delegation at Chicago.

California Gets Next Year's Convention.

That the convention of realty men held in Chicago two weeks ago was one of the most successful, from a constructive viewpoint, ever held by the organization is the statement made by Frank Ryan, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board. Mr. Ryan returned from Chicago last week, stopping over for a few days en route home at San Francisco, where the next national convention of the real estate boards is to be held.

"Secretary Hoover struck a most enthusiastic response from the realtors," said Mr. Ryan, "when he urged that the amendment to the Federal Usury Act be passed, by whic hthe larger proportion of the savings deposits of national banks may be used for building purposes. He further urged that from 40 to 50 per cent of the deposits in postal savings banks should be diverted into home building, as is the case with savings banks.

"Secretary Hoover also strongly advocated Federal co-operation in the development of nation-wide uniformity in building regulation and in the manufacture of building materials, thus absolutely concurring which the larger proportion of the made a study of this question, in the belief that such uniformity would be the greatest means of decreasing the cost of building, and also in decreasing the great amount of waste due to irregularities in operation and inefficient methods of distribution of materials.

"Senator Calder, too, emphasized the advisability of the use of savings deposits of national banks and the postal savings accounts to make them available for building—particularly home building.

"Senator Calder laid particular stress on the housing needs, and pointed out to the convention that unless all possible, practical, sound support is given to new construction through the help of legislation that will encourage private initiative and enterprise, the day may come soon when the housing needs throughout the United States must be met through Federal or State paternalism.

"Senator Calder stated, too, that his fear is not alone a personal one, but that many of the conservative big-business men of the country are also awake and apprehend the moral and economic danger of government paternalism relating to home building, and these men, who have been many times in conference with him, are as eager as he that every facility be opened up for the man who wants to build and own a home of his own.

CITY PLANNING.

"We were particularly interested in the discussions on zoning and city planning, this being so pertinent to the Los Angeles situation at the present time. In Chicago—right in the city holding the convention—on South Michigan avenue, one of the world's greatest thoroughfares, is an apt and tremendously serious illustration of the encroachment of an undesirable tenantry, which has, to a great extent either ruined, or, at least, delayed, the southward movement of Michigan avenue for a great many years—all this due to the lack of proper zoning restrictions on this avenue.

"The thing that particularly struck all of us who had the privilege of talking with many of the substantial men of the convention and of Chicago, was the undeniable fact that the country as a whole is sold on the Pacific Coast, and particularly on Southern California and Los Angeles.

BOOKLET EFFECTIVE.

"The booklet distributed at the convention by the Los Angeles Realty Board this year, particularly referring to Los Angeles' potential industrial abilities, brought much comment, and practically all the meat of this comment given to me by eastern business men was their full recognition that Los Angeles had finally begun to find herself. And I was certainly impelled to believe that the biggest collective boosting I have A Milestone in the Progress of Los Angeles.

Views of the New Pacific Mutual Building.

This fine structure, erected at a cost of nearly $4,000,000, will be practically completed and turned over to its owners within a few days. Tenants are now moving in, more than a hundred offices being already occupied. Dodd & Richards were the architects.

BIG STRUCTURE COMPLETED ON CONTRACT TIME.

New Four-Million-Dollar Home of Pacific Mutual Will Be Turned Over to Owners This Week.

After a year of work and an expenditure of nearly $4,000,000, the magnificent new home of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company at the corner of Sixth street and Grand avenue is nearing completion and in all probability will be turned over to its owners this week. In the erection of this structure, the largest of its kind in the city, a notable record has been established, the building having been finished on contract time despite the fact that for nearly five months construction work was delayed on account of the steel strike in the East, during which time the builders were unable to obtain the necessary structural steel for the frame.

In the interior finish marble, bronze and hardwoods have been extensively used. The floors and walls of the lobbies and corridors throughout are of marble, more than $400,000 worth of this material alone having been used in the structure. All four frontages of the exterior are finished in terra cotta, this feature involving the largest single order of terra cotta ever placed on the Pacific Coast, it is claimed.

The central features of the first floor are the great lobbies, with entrances from both the Sixth-street and the Grand-avenue frontages of the building. The Sixth-street lobby extends for a distance of about sixty feet, where it intersects the Grand-avenue lobby, which contains the grand staircases leading to the mezzanine floor, and the batteries of elevators. The elevator lobby is approximately 200 feet in length, running from the Grand-avenue entrance to the structure connecting the old Pacific Mutual Building with the new. The first floor lobbies are finished throughout in Tavernelle marble, imported from Italy, while the corridors of the upper floors have a marble wainscoting, extending from the floor to the ceiling, of Alabama marble. More marble has been used in the interior finish of this building than in any other structure of its kind in the country, according to the Scofield Engineering Construction Company, under whose supervision the building was erected. In the main lobbies, the great window frames, fixtures and elevator doors are all of solid bronze.

RECREATION ROOM.

The east wing of the first floor also contains a large cafeteria and recreation room for the employees of the company, a room which, with the large balcony at the rear, is capable of seating 1000 people. The interior decoration of the recreation room, done under the supervision of the Tiffany Studios, as were also the main lobbies, is richly carried out in mahogany, blue-and-gold-frescoed ceiling, and caen stone walls. At one end there is a modern stage, completely equipped, for the presentation of plays. A smaller room, adjoining the kitchens, has been designed as a lunchroom and lounging room for officials of the Pacific Mutual Company. This room, with a finish similar to that of the main diningroom, wil be available for banquets for 75 to 100 people.

In the same wing of the building, on the mezzanine floor, is located an employees' rest room, 80 by 50 feet, with a small hospital and dispensary adjoining. A balcony opening off the rest room overlooks the private park located between the old and the new buildings. For the employees of the company there is also a large roof garden, with a stage, retiring and rest rooms, serving pantries, and a dance floor, surrounded by pergolas.

Offices of the building, of which there are more than 500, are supplied with direct steam heat, hot and cold water, iced, filtered drinking water, gas, compressed air, and alternating and direct X-ray currents for doctors and dentists. The building, is served by eight high-speed passenger elevators and a freight elevator. Equipment also includes a water softening and purifying plant, a refrigeration plant, air compressors, electric transformers, a vacuum cleaning plant, a dumb waiter service for carrying papers and documents to different parts of the building, and intercommunicating telephones.

TO OCCUPY EAST WING.

The Pacific Mutual Company will occupy a portion of six floors of the east wing, with direct communication with the old building by a connecting structure. A large workroom for the company is also located in the basement, as are also the big fireproof vaults, eight in number. The ninth, tenth and eleventh floors are especially designed for occupation by doctors and dentists, the rooms being equipped especially for their convenience.

The first floor contains five storerooms, each with a full-sized storage room in the basement. Of these stores, two have already been leased, according to Metcalf & Ryan, the agents for the building. The Sun Drug Company has taken a fifteen-year lease on the store at the corner of Grand avenue and Sixth street, at an average rental of $20,000 per

ALUMINUM PLANT PROGESS.

Officials Announce That Building Operations Will Begin Within Thirty Days.

Announcement comes from the offices of the American Aluminum-Metal Products Company in the Pacific Finance Buolding that definite progress is being made toward the commencement of construction of the big plant proposed for its site in the industrial district of Burbank. Delays incident to the financial conditions under which many new enterprises have been compelled to wait for financing, have been met and difficulties in connection with securing title to the land for the proposed location have been overcome, and it is believed the work on buildings can be started within thirty days.

In addition to the original five-and-a-half-acres directly north of the Empire China Company's plant another tract of nine acres has been acquired so that the company owns by actual purchase nearly fifteen acres. The intention is to build the plant on the newer tract, which has a frontage on the right of way of the Southern Pacific railway as well as on San Fernando Boulevard, simplifying the freight loading and unloading.

The equipment for the aluminum plant at Burbank consists of the entire mechanical outfit of the New Castle Stamping Works of New Castle, Pa., which is to be shipped here as soon as the buildings are ready to install the machinery. This includes presses, lathes, dies, punches, drawing, stamping and spinning machinery to the value of $200,000 and represents the Eastern investment, which is to be supplemented with a local cash investment of $300,000 for lands, buildings and working capital to represent the total capitalization of $500,000.

Before dismantling the New Castle plant for shipment to the Coast a complete sample line of aluminum utensils, wire, brass and copper goods is being made up with the stamp and trade mark of the Burbank plant, and the first shipment of this sample line has been received at the local offices and is on exhibition, as earnest of what the local plant will turn out.

BUILDING PLANS.

Plans for the building have been prepared by Richard D. King, local architect, including a two-story office and administration building, connected by peristyle with the shops which consist of a mammoth E-shaped structure of cement and brick which with machine shops, die shops, spinning, stamping, wire drawing and other divisions involves a total of 60,000 square feet. This plant is a first unit only, but will have a capacity of about 8000 pieces of metal ware daily, with an annual turnover value of about $2,000,000.

The American Aluminum-Metal Products Company at Burbank, which is to all intents and purposes a Los Angeles institution, being but eleven miles from the business center of the city, even with this first unit of 60,000 square feet, will be the largest metalware factory west of Chicago, but it is expected that within a very short time a second unit will be built, increasing the total floor space to 132,000 square feet, putting this plant among the leaders in the United States.

While aluminum housewares and flat and hollow wares of all descriptions will form the bulk of the production, copper and brass wares, for domestic, business and art purposes, and wire wares in great variety, will be also manufactured.

TO INVADE THE EAST.

While the entire western field is open for the products, and this will be first cultivated, the men behind the enterprise are convinced that the labor and working economies possible in Southern California will eventually enable them to compete with the East in its own field, in price as well as in design and quality. Besides this, it is expected to interest the trans-Pacific islands and nations, and to take advantage of the harbor and export facilities of Los Angeles in developing a big trade across the ocean.

William E. Duersten, the vice-president and general manager, has moved his family to this city for permanent residence. His record of twelve years with the Western Electric Company and executive in several large eastern industrial concerns appears to indicate special fitness for putting through such a project as the metal works, and the balance of the official personnel indicates responsibility and ability.

George L. Patterson, the president, is at present vice-president of two banks at New Castle, and director in several metal plants in the East. Ewell D. Moore, secretary, is a local attorney and specialist in accounting practice. Harry M. Rubey, treasurer, became a resident of Los Angeles three years ago, after thirty years in the banking business in Missouri, during which time he served for several years as president of the Missouri State Bankers' Association.

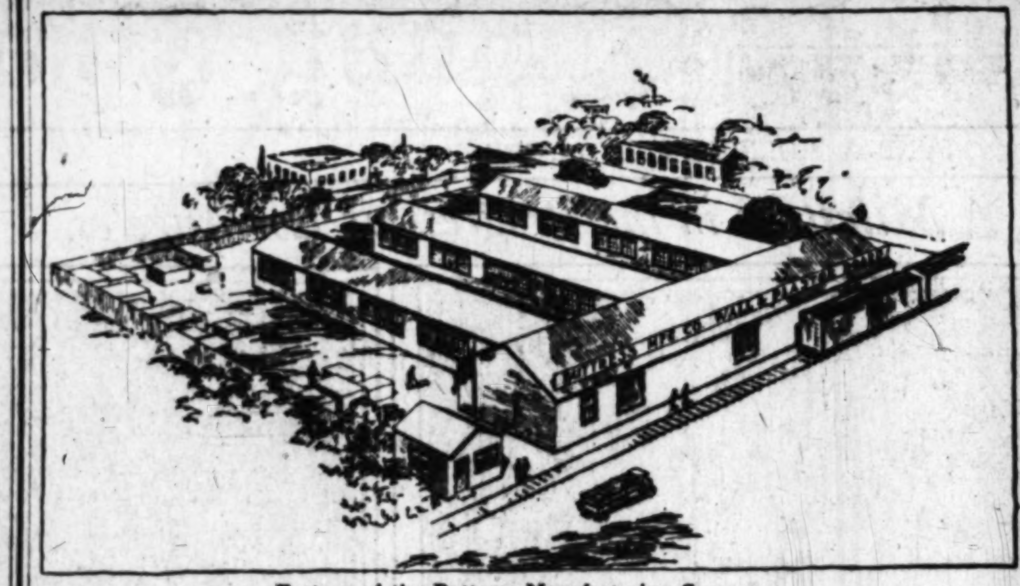
Big Industrial Plant Under Construction.



Factory of the Buttress Manufacturing Company,
Now nearing completion at Florence avenue and Alameda street. The company will manufacture a new form of fireproof plaster board.

FACTORY FOR MAKING WALL BOARD.

Will Also Manufacture New Fireproof Plaster Board; Factory is Built.

A new factory for the manufacture of wall board is under construction, at the northeast corner of Florence and Alameda streets, by a newly formed company that also has developed a new form of fireproof plaster board, which is to be added to its line of manufactures as soon as the first unit of the wall board plant has settled in production. The buildings are nearly completed and the machinery equipment is being installed, so that the first products will be turned out within a week. Commercial production will begin not later than the middle of August.

The Buttress Manufacturing Company, as the concern is to be known, is capitalized at $100,000, practically all of which is owned by the officers, who are: Daniel W. Shoemaker, president; George Buttress, superintendent and production manager; George D. Ament, vice-president; and Charles F. Craig, secretary-treasurer.

The first unit of the plant now under construction will consist of buildings approximating 70 by 200 feet including yard space for certain processes in the manufacture; but the property which the company owns consists of six acres, all of which it is expected to occupy with a total of ten units similar to the first, to be erected as fast as the sales and business conditions make possible under careful and conservative development. The productive capacity of the first unit will be 40,000 square feet per day of wall board.

George Buttress, who will be superintendent, production manager and at the head of operations, is well known in wall board and building circles in Los Angeles, in which he has been active for a number of years. The wall board to be made by the new company, while involving no radical departure from the standard wall boards already on the market, will have points of fineness and smoothness that it is claimed will distinguish it and win quick recognition in the trade, building and architectural channels.

What the Buttress company regards as its most important contribution to the building trades, is an entirely new composition fireproof plaster board for sheathing and as a laht substitute, which will have greater tensile strength and plasticity than any plaster compound or product as yet produced. While it is the invention of Mr. Buttress, patents and processes are owned by the company, and it is proposed to begin the manufacture not later than fall of the present year, involving the building of the second unit of the plant.

The men engaged in the formation of the Buttress Manufacturing Company are all well known in Los Angeles. The company is fully financed and ready to proceed with the enterprise, and its officials are confident that the growing demand for products of the nature they propose to turn out, due to the increasing activities throughout the West, will reward investment and careful management with an ample market.

It is pointed out also that there is a tremendously growing demand for light building materials of this nature in Japan, the Philippines, China, Australia and the Orient generally, all of which can be relied on by Los Angeles manufacturers, as fast as they can bring their plants up to the greater production required to meet this situation. General offices of the Buttress Manufacturing Company will be at the plant, Alameda street, corner of Florence avenue.

Drug Company Plans to Build New Warehouse.

The Los Angeles Drug Company, a wholesale and manufacturing corporation organized a little over a year ago, has purchased from Eugene Barry a site at 1136-1138 San Julian street, according to an announcement made yesterday. The drug company plans to improve the property, which is 50x150 feet in size, with a two-story brick office and warehouse building.

One of the features to be incorporated in the new building will be a complete drug and chemical laboratory. Part of the structure will be arranged for use as the general offices of the firm. Plans and specifications for the new building have been completed, and it is expected to start work as soon as the bids are in and the contract has been awarded.

The new plant will represent an investment of approximately $35,000, and will contain more than three times the working space of the present quarters of the company at 412 East Twelfth street. The sale of the building site was made by George H. Webb of the commercial properties department of the W. A. Heitman Company.

CORNER AT SEVENTH AND BEACON SOLD.

W. W. Paden has purchased from Roland Bishop the one-story brick building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Beacon streets for $150,000. The building, 150x140 feet to an alley, contains seven stores. It was bought by Mr. Paden as an investment, and no further improvements are contemplated. H. K. Huntsberger represented the seller in the deal, while the buyer was represented by E. B. Giffen.

PLANS FOR INCE HOME.

Roy Price is preparing plans for the residence to be built by Thomas Ince on a thirty-five-acre site recently purchased at Beverly Hills. Among the buildings contemplated will be a residence, garages, stables, employees' cottages and storage buildings.

ROOFS OF OIL TANKS TO FLOAT.

Coast Headquarters May Include Plant for Their Manufacture Here.

A safety floating roof for oil tanks, which by floating on the surface of the oil content, eliminates all possibility of gas forming in the tanks; and by closely conforming to the walls of the tank makes fire impossible, while reducing loss from evaporation to a minimum, has been invented by a resident of Oklahoma. Offices for the coast have been established in Los Angeles and organization is going forward looking to the general adoption of this form of tank, with the purpose of manufacturing them here when the orders warrant investment in such a plant.

The device has been the subject of demonstrations before executives and engineers of the leading oil companies of Southern California, representatives of the fire department, Chief Clark of the Fire Prevention Bureau and other interested parties.

Brush was piled around the partially filled tanks and on top of the floating roof. This was saturated with gasoline and the whole ignited burning itself out without igniting the oil in the tank or damaging the tank or contents, according to the statement of the observers. Scenes of these demonstrations were pictured in the Rotogravure Section of The Times of two weks ago, taken by the Keystone Films.

The floating roof is made of sheet steel of varying gauge, to conform to the size of the tanks, in the form of a cup or basin, reaching to within twelve inches of the sides of the tank. The intervening twelve-inch space is occupied with a succession of hinged and jointed containers, filled with gravel, which yield to any irregularities of the tank walls, but maintain contact of the roof with the sides, while the roof sinks with the running off of oil, until it rests on the bottom when the tank is emptied.

Provision is made for drainage of rain that may fall on the roof, for connected flow pipe; and for cleaning and repairs, by ingenious contrivances. The cost is no greater than the present types of roofs, it is claimed, while the insurance against fire by lighting or any other form of ignition, as well as against loss by evaporation is about perfect.

The inventor is F. W. Kueffer of Oklahoma City, and a parent company known as the Safety Oil Tank Company has been formed for the manufacture of the roofs, at Tulsa. Pacific States rights for sale and manufacture have been secured by D. A. Lewis and E. D. Taylor of this city and offices have been opened here, with the purpose of organizing for the general introduction of the safety roofs or safety tanks, with a manufacturing plant for making both tanks and roofs, as the ultimate goal.

GLENDALE CHURCH.

Plans for the new Glendale Presbyterian Church, which will be erected at a cost of about $150,000, will be prepared by Architect Robert H. Orr. The building will be of masonry construction, and will occupy a site 150x150 feet.

RESEARCH WORK.

d Frost, president of the Pressed Brick Company, that progress in clay prodmanufacture, particularly in arterra cotta, would have some years ago had the facturers not learned from exthat the presence of unitrained men to initiate and research work was vital to dustry. Since the employment versity graduates, especially qualified in ceramic art, by the plants noteworthy strides in dustry have been made, Mr. says. As the direct result of search findings of these techtrained men—frequently exthrough months in order to a certain color or effect in product—the Los Angehave been able to produce the beautiful and distinctive varieties of terra cotta sought by architects in the construction of the larger modern buildings.

Mr. Frost dates the rise of this branch of the clay products industry in Los Angeles to a commanding position on the Pacific Coast to the day when the university graduate entered this field; and he adds the interesting comment that this field could absorb many more ceramic engineers—or C. E. graduates, as they are called—if they were available.

In the Los Angeles plant of this company a graduate of the Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y., the first college in the United States to establish a course of ceramic art, is in charge of the important color branch of the research work. Two graduates of the Ohio State University are in charge of branches of the architectural terra cotta production. Both are high-trained ceramic engineers. So marked was the improvement in the manufactured products in charge of these college men that the company sent one of its best practical men to take a partial course in the same study at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J. It also employs as its refractories chemist a former instructor in the University of California at Berkeley.

This famous place—perhaps the choicest bit of beach in the world—standing in its majestic and pristine beauty until now—is open to the public today.

ALADDIN PLANS LOCAL PLANT.

Representative of Ready-Cut Houses Visitor.

Report Favor-ble for $400,000 Factory Here.

Building and Transportation Are Incentives.

Addition to Los Angeles' industrial institutions of a $400,000 or $500,000 plant to take care of the southwestern, Mexican and portions of the foreign export business of the Aladdin Company, pioneers in the fabrication of ready-cut houses, and now grown to a concern with $2,000,000 capital and doing an annual business of several times that amount, is forecast for the immediate future, as the result of a mission of investigation on the part of A. F. Huebner, promotion and development manager for the Aladdin Company.

Mr. Huebner has been in Los Angeles for several weeks, for the express purpose of making careful inquiry into the building reports that have been sent broadcast over the United States, showing that in the face of adverse general conditions, and stagnation in the building trades, Los Angeles and its tributary territory is breaking all records every month in building construction. Other subjects for investigation were lumber markets, freight rates and routes, and if possible, the attitude toward quality as distinguished from cheapness, in home construction.

While the period allotted for the investigation still has a couple of weeks to run, Mr. Huebner, for whom this is the first visit to Southern California, expresses himself as already thoroughly sold on Los Angeles and ready to make a report, not only unequivocally in favor of the immediate establishment of a Los Angeles plant, but urging such action on the officials of the Aladdin Company.

He finds the building activity a settled condition and not a temporary spasm, with every indication that it will continue to increase with the influx of population whose trend toward Southern California becomes constantly more pronounced. He finds the lumber market very satisfactory, and that means of distribution by rail and water are exceptionally favorable; and in the matter of freight rates, he feels that remaining discriminations against the Southwest are likely to be wiped out as the result of the Union Pacific's purchase of the Salt Lake Line and the active competition for business which will result.

Mr. Huebner's report to this effect will go to the headquarters' offices at Bay City, Mich., during the present week, and will be followed by the coming to Los Angeles of W. J. Sovereign, president, and his brother, Otto J. Sovereign, secretary-treasurer of the Aladdin Company, and also J. L. Hudson, traffic manager, for the selection of a site and other preliminaries, on which to base the creation of a plant at least as large as the $400,000 plant at Portland, and possibly as large as the main or parent plant at Bay City. Besides these two the Aladdin company also has plants at Hattiesburg, Miss., and at Wilmington, N. C.

The Portland plant embraces twenty-seven acres, of which about nine acres are under roof with substantial buildings of concrete and frame, mill construction, for the various cutting and fabricating processes, the remaining acres being given over to dry kilns and storage yards. The Los Angeles plant will require facilities as great as these or greater, and an investment of not less than $400,000. Employment will be given to a large force of skilled mechanics, the weekly pay roll will be large, and an industry of first magnitude will be established.

STARTED IN 1903.

The building of ready-cut houses originated with W. J. Sovereign eighteen years ago, at Bay City, Mich., with the idea of furnishing ready-cut houseboats or river houses. The original advertisements brought more responses from people wanting homes than houseboats, and from that time the business has grown to mammoth proportions, involving $2,000,000 of invested capital, an annual turnover of many millions of dollars, doing business in every State in the Union and many foreign countries, and continually advancing in the grade of houses, until the Aladdin Company now includes homes costing as much as $20,000 in its long list of designs, as well as the simplest of bungalows costing not much over a thousand.

A wonderfully efficient organization has been built up during these eighteen years of development, and its success has naturally resulted in the encouragement of competition, in which Southern California has produced concerns that have also grown to considerable proportions, which may account for some of the interest displayed in this section by the originators.

REALTORS MEET BIG SUCCESS.

ever heard came from Chicago bankers. It seems to be the general opinion that we have here, all to ourselves, an empire in the making of which we have just begun, and all that was advertised and said for Los Angeles at the national realtors' convention will bear immediate fruit, for it surely seems that thousands upon thousands are booked for the Pacific Coast the minute they can get away from the part of the country where they now are.

"The Los Angeles Realty Board exhibit in the mezzanine floor of the Congress Hotel, in charge of the secretary, S. Ross Fenner, made a fine showing and brought about a wonderful distribution of literature, badges and 12,000 glasses of frappe, in addition to 200 boxes of oranges that were said by many to have been the finest oranges ever brought to Chicago.

"To the banks and individuals who co-operated with the board and contributed to the fund for the Chicago publicity campaign, a view at any hour during the entire time of the convention, of the Los Angeles headquarters, would have made them enthusiasts over what was accomplished.

"Of course, one of our most important tasks was to co-operate with San Francisco in securing the convention of the association for San Francisco in 1922, and the Los Angeles public is now aware that we were successful in our efforts, which means that from 15,000 to 20,000 people will see Los Angeles and Southern California in May or June of next year as a result of the effort, following the convention to be held in San Francisco.

"All in all, I firmly believe that the energy given forth by the Los Angeles Realty Board, and by those members of it who, at their own expense, took a very hard, hot two weeks away from business, has been well given for the upbuilding and advertising of Los Angeles.

"Incidentally, nothing in the wide, wide world could have looked or felt better on our return than this old town; cool, clean, and inviting in every sense of the word; for verily we struck the East in at least an 'unusually hot spell.'" year, and Nicoll the Tailor has leased for ten years the adjoining store at a rental of $9600 per year. These stores are to be finished immediately, and the others will be completed in the near future.

The new building has a frontage of 207 feet on Sixth street, with a depth of 167 feet, rising to a height of twelve stories. The first five floors are connected with the present quarters of the company by a structure which rises to the full height of the new building. The entire area of the new building, including the connecting building and basement, is 362,500 square feet, and the old building has an area of 52,600 square feet, making a total of 415,000 square feet, or more than eight times the floor space now occupied by the company.

Excavations are now under way for the big two-story underground garage which is being erected by the Pacific Mutual Company at the rear of the present building. This garage, which will be of fireproof construction throughout, and ventilated by a modern system, will house 176 machines. The garage is to extend through from Olive street to Grand avenue, and the roof will be so constructed that it can be used as a thoroughfare and parking space by the tenants of the building and their guests or patons. The underground garage, for use of the tenants of the building only, will be in charge of a uniformed attendant.

TO BUILD ON FLOWER.

Mrs. Anna A. M. Douglas has sold to Albert H. Wallace the property at 621 South Flower street, at present improved with a frame cottage. The lot has a frontage of fifty feet on Flower street, and extends through to Lebanon street, a depth of 150 feet. Mr. Wallace, who purchased the property as an investment, will erect a modern two-story commercial building on the site about the first of next year, it is stated. The sale was handled through W. W. Robson of the firm of Metcalf & Ryan.

COTTON MILLS NEGOTIATING.

Interest in the announcement authorized by the Chamber of Commerce some weeks ago, that eastern cotton millers were actively considering the early establishment of a cotton mill in Los Angeles for the weaving of sheetings, ducks and drills, has been revived by letters from a prominent Los Angeles business man, now in New York, stating that he has been in conference with the eastern capitalists and that the project is very much alive.

The information received by the Chamber of Commerce was to the effect that the capitalists were ready to invest up to several million dollars in a modern cotton-weaving mill in Los Angeles or near the harbor. Since that time other factors interested in the extention of the weaving centers to the West, where advantage could be taken of the accessibility of the cotton crop and the advantages of water transportation for export of the textiles, have been looking over the ground, and it seems likely that there will be something in the nature of competition to see who will be the first to secure establishment of a cotton mill.

The Chamber of Commerce reports increased activity in several textile directions, indicating that with the general improvement of trade and financial conditions, the textile trades will be among the first to conclude negotiations for local plants.

TAX LAW IS TO BE ENFORCED.

Realty Brokers Handling Business Chance Deals Must Pay $50 Per Year.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OAKLAND, July 30.—Real-estate dealers of the West will note that a Federal license tax of $50 per year is required to handle a "business chance deal," according to an announcement of the California Real Estate Association, from its general offices in Oakland.

The announcement follows a conference between officials of the revenue collector's office and R. Porter Giles, secretary of the State association.

"If you have handled any 'business chance' deal since Jan. 1, 1919," says this statement, "you will have to pay a Federal tax of $50 per year. If you have sold a rooming-house or apartment-house or hotel, as a business, and have transferred the furniture and fixtures, you are elected to pay.

"Section 1001 of the U. S. Revenue Act of 1919, paragraph F, is the law referred to. It has never been enforced in Oakland until now, but the inspector for this district is now collecting for the entire period plus a fine of $12.50, making the total due from an office that has been conducting this branch of the brokerage business all of the time since Jan. 1, 1919, $137.50.

"A ruling from A. C. Holden, deputy U. S. Revenue Commissioner, in a department letter of Feb. 12, 1921, to W. M. Robertson, inspector at the Oakland postoffice, holds that furniture and fixtures of a hotel, rooming-house or apartment-house, etc., are 'merchandise,' and that puts the broker in the same class with him who sells a store with its stock of goods. He must pay the Federal tax.

"You had better communicate with your closest internal revenue office on this subject at once if you have handled any such business. The Treasury Department is inclined to be severe in the enforcement of this matter."

There are more than 30,000 real estate brokers and salesmen who come under the specifications of this tax law, provided they deal in the business chance property. Realtors are advised to get in touch with their nearest revenue office at Los Angeles or San Francisco.

WORK IS STARTED ON NEW PACKING-HOUSE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

STRATHMORE, July 30. — The Strathmore Co-operative Association has commenced excavation on the Santa Fe right-of-way in Strathmore on a site for its modern citrus packing-house. The building is expected to be ready for the coming navel crop and will cost approximately $40,000. About 500 acres have been signed up by the association and with the building of this packing-house Strathmore will realize a long-felt want in one of the most modern plants of the kind in this portion of the valley. R. E. Stark will be manager of the house.

FACT AND COMMENT.

will be in full harmony with the natural beauty of its setting.

Co-Operatice Optimism.

Some of the industrial and realty operators of the city, and also some of those interested in the promotive bodies, such as the Chamber of Commerce, are advocating an educational course for the bankers of Los Angeles in co-operative optimism. Complaint is frequently heard that certain financial interests have not absorbed the spirit of Southern California to anything like the degree manifested by the commercial and industrial elements, and that many a good proposition has been throttled by being viewed by these interests through Eastern goggles instead of with the open vision of the West.

"The spirit of the white spot needs to be inculcated in the bankers, so they will see Western opportunities in Western light, and not in Eastern gloom," is the way one emphatic individual expressed his opinion. It isn't a bad idea for the men whose financial support is needed in all development enterprises, to take a little time to ask themselves if they have warmed up sufficiently to the essential difference between the East and the West as regards opportunities.

There may be good reasons for deducing that the very conditions demanding ultra-conservatism in Eastern enterprise should operate for open-mindedness on the Coast. There are apparent indications that the very forces causing Eastern depression may operate to Western advantage, and that this is the time to encourage the location here of the capital that has been eyeing the Coast as an eventual goal.

Instead of absorbing the gloom of the interests in the districts of depression, there is the opportunity to radiate the optimism and point to the white spot of the Southwest; and while it is the true banker temperament to be conservative, the white spot and the opportunities it offers should be added incentive to throw the weight of their support into the encouragement of enterprise.

ORANGE GROVES NEAR LINDSAY ARE SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LINDSAY, July 30.—A. A. Hill of Exeter has sold his twenty-acre orange grove to W. D. MacLennan, formerly a resident of Canada. Mr. MacLennan took immediate possession. The sale was made through the agency of the Fox Ridge Realty Company of Lindsay. The ten-acre orange grove on the Lindsay-Exeter highway belonging to C. H. Cobb has just been sold to Walter McClure, who owns the 100-acre Kauke ranch adjoining.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SPRINGVILLE, July 30.—W. R. Neale has taken possession of his newly acquired business, located in the Crayes Building. Mr. Neal, who has been the leading merchant of Springville for fourteen years, recently purchased the Crayes property, remodeling it to meet the demands of his business.

The postoffice, which has also been under Mr. Neal's charge for several years, has been removed to the new quarters. The office of the Bell Telephone Company, formerly located in this building will be moved in the near future.

Many Buildings Erected During Year by Banks.

One of the evidences that now is the time to build in Los Angeles and Southern California is presented in the record of new construction and remodeling which banks and financial institutions have been doing for the past year, according to the viewpoint of members of the Forward Los Angeles Movement.

The members of this organization have gathered information which shows that some twenty-five banking and financial institutions in Los Angeles and immediate vicinity have built new buildings or have remodeled old buildings to meet their growing business. A number of new banks have been started in the last twelve months and they, in most cases, have been housed in new buildings.

The Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank, Bank of Italy, Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank, Security Trust & Savings Bank, First National Bank and the Hellman bank are among the Los Angeles financial institutions that have built or remodeled buildings for branches or for the expansion of business.

Among the banks in outside communities that either have put up new buildings or remodeled their older quarters are the Culver City First National, Inglewood Savings Bank, Long Beach National, Long Beach Farmers' & Merchants', San Pedro Marine Bank, San Pedro First National, Lynwood Farmers' & Merchants', Lomita Farmers' & Merchants', Moneta Farmers' & Merchants', Huntington Park First National, Huntington Park Savings, Glendale First National, Ontario National, Orange First National, National Bank of Orange, Upland First National, Ocean Park Bank, Crescent Heights Bank, La Habra Bank, and the Alhambra Commercial Savings Bank.

Angeleno is Inventor of Pony Tractor.

A Los Angeles inventor claims to have perfected a small garden and orchard tractor that will make a stir in the farm machinery world when it is brought to commercial production, for which he is now negotiating.

A peculiar feature of the little tractors is the adaptation of a number of standard Ford automobile parts, which, being obtainable in every garage in the country, will render cheap and easy the making of repairs and relpacement of parts. The Ford parts used include piston, connecting rod, wrist pin, valves, springs and roller bearings.

These tractors are made in two types. One of these is a one-cylinder, four horsepower tractor, only fourteen inches wide, designed for hand guiding and for work between rows. This tractor has clutch in each wheel for steering and control with the fingers, twenty-eight-inch wheels, and can make a complete turn in space of eighteen inches. The larger type has a two-cylinder engine, nine horsepower, thirty-two-inch wheels, is thirty-two inches wide, and is designed for straddling the rows. It can be worked on foot or can be ridden, has the same control as the smaller tractor, and turns in the space of thirty-two inches.

The inventor is W. S. Anderson, who has been for three years developing the machines in a small shop at 3673 Moneta avenue. He points to the fact that while there are several hudred makers of large tractors in the United States, there are only eight that have produced the small types of tractor required for garden and orchard work, and that but two of these may be considered fully successful. Mr. Anderson claims to have received offers from machinery manufacturers at Atlanta, Ga., to take over the making of these tractors, but that he prefers to make and distribute them from Los Angeles.

NEW FACTORY.

Recently Organized Company Leases Buildings for Making Auto Bodies.

The J. W. Lewis Company reports a lease just closed with the Motor Bodies Company, covering two buildings at 722 Decatur street, owned by the Los Angeles Canning Company.

The Motor Bodies Company is a newly organized concern with G. E. Porter at its head, and will engage in the manufacture of special bodies for trucks, busses and other types of commercial cars. Mr. Porter, until recently a member of the Porter-Brown Auto Body Company, has had wide experience in auto body building, coming to this city a few years ago from Detroit, Mich., where he was for many years in the business of manufacturing automobiles and bodies. With contracts already on hand, the new plant, which is being equipped with the latest machinery, will soon be operated to its fullest capacity.

Another new industry located in this city by the J. W. Lewis Company is the Symons-Kraussmanh Company, manufacturers of the "Flor De Baltimore" cigar, who will transfer their New York factory to Los Angeles. The premises leased are at the southeast corner of San Pedro and Boyd streets, comprising two stories with basement, and are owned by E. E. Modine of Chicago, Ill.

DRUG COMPANY BUYS ON SOUTH SAN PEDRO.

An old landmark of Los Angeles, recently improved with brick warehouses and salesrooms, has just passed into the hands of a progressive wholesale company through a series of negotiations arranged by Richard C. Willis of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company. The property, situated at 225 South San Pedro street, was acquired years ago by the Youmans estate and later became known as the Boothe property. It has a frontage of approximately 175 feet on San Pedro and runs back 360 feet to a Southern Pacific spur track.

Improvement made recently consists of two structures, one a two-story salesroom at present leased to Harron, Rickard & McCone; the other a three-story warehouse temporarily leased to the Owl Drug Company.

The purchaser of this property is the Western Wholesale Drug Company, which has acquired it for purposes of expansion and for warehousing their growing lines. Florence Humans Boothe is the other principal in the transaction, the consideration she received being reported as about $75,000.

The Crown Jewel of all Architecture

The whole ensemble of architectural design can be nullified and made discordant through the application of an unsightly roof. Architecture's crowning glory—its final touch of beauty—is in the roof.

The Roof of Clay Tile

harmonizes with every style of architecture while its utility is beyond dispute. Impervious, durable and economical, it presents many advantages over any other form of roofing. The clay tile roof reduces insurance premiums; is a guaranty against fire, weather and time, and, because it never wears out or needs replacements, it is ultimately the most economical roof. The wide variety of colorations and patterns make it particularly adaptable to every form of architecture. Its great popularity is strongly exemplified in and about Los Angeles.

As manufacturers of the largest variety of patterns and colors in the United States, we cordially invite your inspection of our roofing tile displays.

Three-Cent Postage Plan Not Popular in Los Angeles; Growing Bank Clearings Keep White Spot White.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Three-cent postage is a contingency of the near future. The Postoffice Department deficit for 1920 was $17,172,397. The public, as usual, must foot the bill. The farther we probe peace the more the taxpayers are called upon to pay for war.

It is estimated that the proposed raise in postal rates will turn the deficit into net earnings around $200,000,000. Los Angeles business men are almost unanimously opposed to the increase, but the government must have the money, and it looks as though another nuisance tax is soon to be added to those already in vogue.

The Postmaster-General also intimates an increase from 10 to 25 cents for special-delivery letters with the suggestion that the service will be improved. There is plenty of room for improvement in this branch, for the average 10-cent delivery charge now secures service which should be available at regular rates.

Higher priced postal service is distinctly a step backwards, but if the pill is proffered it will be swallowed with such grace as the public is able to command.

Los Angeles will be the hardest-hit city in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District because its postal business is growing so much faster than any other. The percentage of increase in June business over the corresponding month in 1920 was 18.9. Salt Lake City was next with 9.7. Then came San Francisco with 8.9; Portland with 4.2, and Seattle with 2. Fifty other cities in the United States report a decrease of .19 per cent.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Comparisons are always interesting and usually they accurately reflect the trend of business in a community. For a long term of months the Los Angeles bank clearings have been conspicuous by their consistent gain in the face of losses almost everywhere else.

According to the Federal reserve statement the Southern California cities of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Long Beach and Ogden, Utah, were the only ones in the district to report increases for June over the same month a year ago.

Of these Ogden has the greatest increase, 67.7 per cent. Pasadena comes next with 55.2 per cent; then Long Beach with 32.6 per cent and Los Angeles with 5.1 per cent. For the half-year period Pasadena leads with 45.1 per cent increase, Long Beach is second with 17.2; Los Angeles third with 8, and Berkeley fourth with 1.6 per cent. Ogden, with its record showing for the single month, reports a decrease for the six months of 22.2 per cent.

While the business failures for the month increased from 103 to 143 the liabilities decreased from $6,900,596 a year ago to $1,965,917 this year. For the half year the figures run very evenly as to liabilities; $13,489,600 in 1921 as compared with $13,457,015 in 1920, although the number increased from 509 a year ago to 843 this year. In other words for the month there was a decrease of 71.5 per cent and for the six months an increase of .2 per cent.

CALIFORNIA OIL.

California oil statistics for the half year ended June 30 prepared by the statistical bureau of the Independent Oil Producers' Agency in Los Angeles show a production for the period indicated of 60,495,485 barrels as compared with 53,175,718 for the corresponding period in 1920.

Shipments for the period were 53,175,721 barrels which, with stocks on hand January 1 of 19,618,846, made a total reserve July 1 of 26,938,610 barrels, an increase of 7,319,764 borrels, or a daily average of 40,441 barrels.

The daily average production for the six months was 334,229 barrels as compared with 275,884 in 1920. May holds the record for wells completed (seventy-one) but the initial production was greatest in March (28,142 barrels.) At the end of June 594 wells were drilling; 104 new rigs were up, and 9886 wells were actually producing.

FRUIT SHIPMENTS HEAVY.

Car lot interstate shipments of fruit and vegetables, moving in refrigerator cars under supervision of the Pacific Fruit Express Company on all lines from January 1 to July 25 of this year, amounted to 53,972 carloads, as against 47,468 carloads for the same period last year. These were from the territory west of Ogden, Salt Lake and El Paso and south of Ashland, Or.

The shipments included oranges, lemons, apples, vegetables, cantaloupes and potatoes.

Out of the Imperial Valley alone enough cantaloupes have been shipped to allow one mmelon to each person in the entire United States and still have melons left for a second helping. Up to July 15, according to railroad advices from Los Angeles, a total of 10,500 carloads of cantaloupes had been shipped to eastern markets—i.e., 330 crates per car and 45 cantaloupes to a crate, or 156,000,000 melons. Last year up to July 15 8900 cars of cantaloupes had been shipped out of the Imperial Valley.

"Remarkable as it may seem," according to the Railway Age, "while farm products have declined more in price within the last year than any other large class of commodities, the total value of farm products which actually are being shipped at the present rates is larger than it was either in 1919 or 1920.

"From January 1 to June 11, 1921, the total carloads of grain shipped was 876,581. This was 61,803 carloads more than in the same part of 1919 and 119,628 carloads more than in 1920."

EYES FRONT AT HERMOSA.

Sylvester L. Weaver, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and Charles F. Stern, vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, will be the chief speakers tomorrow evening at the first annual civic dinner at Hermosa Beach. The affair is in connection with the all-year Chamber of Commerce campaign which will be inaugurated on Tuesday, August 2.

Hermosa Beach plans to enroll a minimum of 300 members in its reorganized Chamber of Commerce and to raise a fund of $500 a month for the all-the-year Chamber of Commerce work, including the services of a paid secretary. Under the direction of James O. Stevenson, the campaign director, the town has been divided into twelve districts, each district will be canvassed by a team consisting of a captain and from five to ten lieutenants. The team captains are: H. E. Preston, R. M. MacLennan, B. H. Hiss, J. H. Kibler, E. C. Jones, R. J. Hall, Cal Littleton, W. W. Bloomfield, E. C. Hudson, Don Fallis, George E. Reader and J. L. Hotchkiss.

A feature of the civic dinner will be community singing under the direction of Hugo Kerkhoffer.

WHAT IS A WILDCAT?

A correspondent writes to ask, "what is a wildcat?"

A wildcat is a company in which the management raises money, often by exaggerated and misleading statements, intending to use the funds so raised for personal profit rather than for development of the property, and without regard to securing an adaquate return for investors.

A legitimate development company is one in which the management raises funds for exploration and development with the idea of securing an adaquate return to investors.

WEEK IN REVIEW.

There has been little out of the ordinary to mark the progress of the week. The slowly upward tendency which commenced six weeks ago continues and in a general way the situation may be said to show moderate improvement.

The lowering discount rates by the Federal Reserve Bank in four important centers, including the Twelfth District, has had the effect of making for somewhat easier credits.

Steel, copper and cotton industries remain at low ebb and goods in transit have decreased, according to late reports of idle freight cars. On the other hand there is more activity in the textile and leather centers, and the financial situation is sound.

Export trade is still small and accumulated stores have not commenced to move in any appreciable degree. New financing is being held back pending a better digestive market, and stocks are still on a low level with the public remaining in an abstemious mood.

The relative improvement which Los Angeles has maintained over the rest of the country continues and local business still more than holds its own.

BUSINESS NEWS.

It is agreed that Los Angeles is practically free from disturbing factors in business other than those which are manifesting themselves as a result of the midsummer calm and further retrenchment which is going on in some of the eastern industrial centers.

There is no over-expansion of bank loans here and commercial credits and inventories of consumable goods are smaller than at any time for months, while the element of apprehension which tends to shatter business morale is absent.

The first two factors can be determined and the statements supported; as to the third, there is only the general and apparent feeling of optimism on the part of business men and the fact that the Federal reserve ratio has gradually climbed to a safe level.

Careful observers express certainty that Southern California has safely passed through the worst of business depression, and that better conditions may be expected in the fall.

WAR DEBT REDUCTION.

Whereas there was a reduction in the funded war debt as represented by Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1921, of $431,947,243, the reduction in the gross debt of the United States in the same period was $321,870,915. The difference of $110,076,328 was partially due to issue by the treasury in June of $311,191,600 new 5¾ per cent three-year notes, part of Secretary Mellon's plan to fund part of Victory loan and distribute maturities of floating debt.

War debt of the United States was at its peak Aug. 31, 1919, when gross debt was reported at $26,596,701,648. On June 30, 1921, gross debt was $23,977,450,552, a reduction of $2,619,251,096 from the peak. Of this reduction $2,283,589,550 was in Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

A statement made by a Los Angeles publication not long ago to the effect that local banks had been forced to take some heavy losses in commercial paper is not borne out by the facts in the case, according to bankers.

Further refutation of the suggestion is also made by E. Naumburg & Co., dealers in this class of security, who quote Arthur D. Whiteside, president of the National Credit Office, to the following effect:

"During the last eighteen months only eighty-nine concerns or 2.4 per cent of the 3676 selling their paper in the open market have been forced to ask indulgence from their banks and from information obtained so far, at least 60 per cent of these concerns will ultimately pay in full.

"While this is the largest number of names ever involved in any period of like duration, the factors causing this condition were without precedent and paper names as a whole withstood the recent shock with a lower depreciation than any other form of short-terms mercantile investment for we find that out of 3676 concerns, 3587 automatically liquidated at maturity dollar for dollar on the amount invested at a time when inventories were shrinking from 40 to 60 per cent and business in general had become utterly demoralized.

"Fifty-three of the eighty-nine concerns involved paid or will pay 100 cents on the dollar and it is reasonable to suppose from information obtained so far that the remaining concerns will make average adjustments of about 55 per cent with their creditors.

"The total amount of open-market paper sold through note brokers from Jan. 1, 1920 until July 1, 1921, was approximately $4,000,000,000, and of this amount $3,896,000,000 was liquidated at par without effort on the part of the holding banker. Only $104,000,000 of this immense sum was not paid at maturity, and of this amount $62,400,000 has since been or will be liquidated in full leaving a residue of only $41,600,000 to be adjusted.

"This residue will probably yield dividends of $22,880,000, netting a loss to the entire banking community of the United States through this form of investment, during the most critical readjustment period in our economic history, of about $18,720,000, or .00047 per cent of the total amount purchased."

NEW BRAZILIAN ISSUE.

A new Brazilian 5 per cent external will be offered this week by Drake, Riley & Thomas; R. H. Moulton & Co.; Stevens, Page & Sterling, Banks, Huntley & Co.

The issue will prove attractive, in the opinion of the underwriters, not only from a standpoint of yield and safety, but because purchasers will participate in the advantages of the present low rate of exchange, as well as the yield itself, which is around 8 per cent. The return of sterling to par would give the American investor 11 per cent.

A cumulative sinking fund of 1½ per cent per annum is provided, to be applied half yearly to the purchase of bonds on the market when available at less than par, and by drawings when the price is par or over.

The original issue authorized in 1903 was for £8,500,000, of which £801,900 have already been retired. The bonds are the direct and general external obligation of the Brazilian Republic, whose entire resources are applicable to their interest and discharge. Brazil has a total indebtedness at the present time of only $33 per capita, which compares favorably with any of the great nations, that of the United States, for example, being as high as $227.83.

A criterion of the popularity of the Brazilian issue may be had in the response that a similar dollar issue, recently brought out. This issue was first offered at 97½. In a month's time, it climbed two points and is now bringing prices of 99½ and par.

AGAINST TAX EXEMPTS.

"It is the present policy of the Federal government not to issue its own obligations with exemptions from Federal taxes and profit taxes, but States and municipalities are issuing fully tax-exempt securities in great volume," says Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in the Journal of the American Bankers' Association.

"The existence of this mass of fully tax-exempt securities constitutes an economic evil of the first magnitude. Even though the exemptions of outstanding securities of this nature cannot be disturbed, it is highly important that further issues be controlled or prohibited by mutual consent of State and Federal governments."

LIBERTY BONDS RETIRED.

The Secretary of the Treasury announced yesterday that during the fiscal year ended June 30, $73,939,300 face amount of Liberty Bonds were purchased and retired by the treasury out of repayments of principal by foreign governments.

These purchases were made in accordance with the Liberty Bond Act, which provides that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to apply any payments received from foreign governments on account of the principal of their obligations to the redemption or purchase at no more than par and accrued obligations of outstanding Liberty Bonds.

NEW WELLS STARTED.

Oil-field operations reported to State Oil and Gas Supervisor R. E. Collom during the week ended July 23, show twenty-four new wells started, as compared with twenty-three during the preceding week. Total number of new wells this year is 848 as compared with 480 the same date last year.

Traffic officials of the Southern Pacific agree that the company's June statement of earnings do not reflect the improvement in traffic which reports of crop movements in California and the Southwest had led many to expect. Despite increases in freight and passenger rates, the gross earnings of the Southern Pacific lines were $1,221,000 less than last year. The net showing, however, was good, due, it was explained, in some measure to reductions in maintenance.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

The Great Western Smelting & Refining Company announce the immediate occupancy of a modern office and warehouse building at Nos. 1217-1221 East Sixth street.

Eight million women in the United States are at present engaged in gainful occupations. Fifty per cent of this number are teachers, while 37 per cent hold secretarial jobs.

Water Company Bonds are sure-footed investments

WATER COMPANY BONDS are dependable investments because the business of supplying water to stable communities is about the most dependable of all business activities.

The very nature of the business is such that operating expenses do not fluctuate widely. Taxes may vary slightly and the cost of fuel for pumping may vary slightly.

But the principal element in the cost of supplying water is the investment in property for impounding, purifying and distributing water.

To a basically dependable business in California the investor should add the stabilizing power of Railroad Commission supervision. Assuming a fair capitalization and satisfactory service, earnings vary in the same proportion as expenses. Thus the investor is always assured of an earning power adequate to meet all charges and a proper balance for surplus reserves.

This is why Water Company bonds represent the very highest type of public service corporation securities. This why Water Company bonds are sure-footed investments.

And this is why we unhesitatingly recommend your investment in EAST BAY WATER COMPANY Unifying and Refunding Mortgage 7½% Gold Bonds at 100 to pay you 7½%. Are you in position to take advantage of this offering? Then call on us in person or let us call on you in person and discuss this matter.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Although stocks were regular today there appeared to be some anxious short coverings in the major issues shortly before the close, this being especially true in the rails and steel stocks. The absence of traders was noticeable and the turnover was small.

Rails continued to attract attention by their strength and most of these issues closed with fractional gains.

The action of the rails created a sympathetic movement throughout the list before the close which resulted in several substantial recoveries from the low prices of the day.

Early in the day several specialties were under extreme pressure, but they recovered much of the losses. Professional traders endeavored to depress the list by selling the specialties, but the weakness of these stocks was ignored by the market in general.

The closing was marked by strength in United States Steel which advanced a full point from the day's low. Other steel and equipment shares also showed small gains. Scarcity of stocks caused a large part of the late advance when shorts endeavored to cover some of their commitments.

International stock displayed a steadier tone and made moderate gains for the day. Sterling demand bills were stronger.

Government and railroad bonds were strong. The strength in the latter issues was looked on as an encouraging feature.

Total sales amounted to 135,400 shares. Bond sales, par value, $5,927,000.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—The stock market this week experienced another dull and reactionary period, offset, however, by the strength of bonds, where an unusualy active demand on rising values was noted.

Selling of stocks converged mainly around junior or secondary industrials of the equipment variety, in which offerings were accelerated by additional dividend suspensions. Losses in the issues ran from five to almost twenty-five points, with very irregular recoveries.

Returns of the United States Steel and Bethlehem Steel corporations for the year's second quarter were slightly better than popular forecasts. Advices in the final day of July pointed to further reduction of industrial operations and lower prices and wages.

President Harding's message to Congress, urging that increased powers be granted the War Finance Corporation, particularly in relation to railway financing and farmers' credits, was well received, but proved little of a market factor, beyond infusing a firm tone to transportations.

Reduction of the French bank's discount rate placed the institution on the same level with the Bank of England and the leading reserve centers of this country. Call money fell to 3½ per cent, establishing a low record for almost two years, and easier rates were quoted for bank acceptances and merchants' paper.

In several more important branches of commerce, a turn for the better was reported. This applied more directly to the Middle West than to remote centers, where large sums of grain and cotton bills remain unliquidated.

British and French exchanges were unsettled and most of the other European remittances, notably Italian and Dutch, weakened. Decline in the latter rate was attributed to heavy purchases of American bills by Germany, preliminary to further reparations payments here.

SPOT COTTON.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 points advance. 12.12 cents for middling upland.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 11.45c, 15 points advance; New Orleans, 11c, unchanged; Augusta, 10.75c, unchanged; Houston, 11.35c, unchanged; Memphis, 10.75c, 15 points advance; Little Rock, 10.50c, unchanged.

JULY BANK CLEARINGS.

July business of the Los Angeles clearinghouse totaled $322,929,774.99, a decline of $4,576,000 from July, 1920. This slight decrease is accounted for by the fact that there was one less business day in July this year, a fifth Sunday intervening.

Allowing for this circumstance, the total for the month would have shown a substantial increase, which, in view of more extended depression, lower prices and general slowing down, reflects accurately and pointedly the remarkable maintenance in this community of the business morale.

United States of Brazil
5% External Sterling Bonds

In the past Brazil has been financed in Europe. Her tremendous resources attracted the European investor and at the outbreak of the world war her 5% bonds sold at a premium in London. Owing to the present depreciation of sterling exchange it is possible for the American investor to buy these issues on a most attractive basis.

The present low price of Pound Sterling is caused by the readjustment following the war. For over 30 years preceding the world conflict, the extreme variation of sterling did not exceed 5 cents from normal.

We have selected one out of the many issues listed on the London Stock Exchange as being worthy of special consideration. In addition to being a general obligation of Brazil, and backed by its entire resources, they are secured by import duties and revenues derived at the port of Rio de Janeiro.

The advisability of purchasing bonds payable in pounds sterling is shown by the following table. The purchaser benefits by any increase in Sterling Exchange and receives a varying yield according to exchange rates plus a possibility of profit of over 100%.

Assuming a Price of $450 per £200

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, July 30.—Valencias of desirable sizes have shown an advance of fully 50 cents per box the past week. Small sizes show practically no price change, although there is a generally better feeling. The supply of Valencias in all markets is being cut down steadily. Shipments the past week totaled 825 cars as against 911 cars the previous week.

Estimates are now under way on the remaining crop for shipment. It is generally figured that there are close to 10,000 cars remaining.

F.o.b. quotations, usual terms, are on a basis of $3.50 on fruit from the foothill districts and $4.50 on Orange county desirable sizes.

The outlook for a bumper crop of navels for the coming season was never better, according to reports of growers from all districts. The fruit is growing well.

LEMONS.

The market on lemons is considerably easier and lower. Cooler weather has cut down the demand. The trade is buying today only what they can sell tomorrow. No surplus stock is being carried.

F.o.b. quotations have dropped to $6.50 and $7 per box as against $8 to $8.50 per box last week.

Shipments are decreasing daily.

Latest reports show a total of 80,000 boxes of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale, not including two cargoes reported afloat, quantity unknown.

Worst Mix-up in Rye That Trade Ever Saw.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 30.—There was the worst mix-up on the July rye market today that the trade has known. The Hansen Produce Company of New York, which has the rye bought against export sales, was selling the July and buying the September at 17½ cents difference. This let the shorts in for July, but many did not care to go short on September fearing there might be a repetition of the conditions prevailing in July. There were plenty of sellers of July at the last, closing ⅝ cent lower, September moved up from $1.11½ to $1.15 and closed there, gaining 2⅝ cents.

Sales were 335,000 bushels for the day and there were said to be liberal defaults, which will have to be settled by a committee. For the month of July deliveries were 1,025,000 bushels. No. 3 rye was taken by eastern interests at 7 cents under No. 2, and the No. 2 sold largely at 1 to 2 cents under.

In the grain markets generally there was a light trade with irregular movement of prices. July wheat closed 1 cent higher and distant futures were unchanged to ⅛ cent lower, September leading. July corn was off 2 cents and distant futures were up ¼ cent, while oats lost ⅛ to ⅜ cent. Provisions were stronger and 5 to 7½ cents higher on lard and 10 to 12½ cents up on ribs.

The wheat market was a comparatively small affair. Distant futures were weak with moderate pressure. The leading interests bought September at times and there was considerable general liquidation. Record receipts at primary markets for the week of 22,197,000 bushels, or nearly 13,000,000 bushels more than last year, had a depressing influence.

July corn was under pressure from leading interests and broke from 65 to 62⅝ cents, with the close at the inside. Distant futures had fair support and closed higher. The weather map showed scattered rain over corn belt States, but more is needed. Cash prices were ⅛ to 2 cents lower.

Trading in oats consisted largely in changing from September to December at 3 cents for the local interests and with northwestern people doing the business. The close was lower, with July leading at around the inside of the week. Shipping sales were 70,000 bushels.

Cash rye closed firm. No. 2 sold at $1.27 to $1.29½; No. 2 at 1.27 to $1.28½; No. 3 at $1.21½ to $1.28½; No. 4 at $1.11½. There were 15,000 bushels rye sold to go to store. Deliveries, 107,000 bushels.

Cotton Market Opening Quiet; Prices Climb.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—The New York cotton opening was quiet today, but support from New Orleans gave the market a steady tone and first prices showed 3 to 7 points advance. A little Wall-street selling was the only other feature and most of the local trade was for evening-up account in view of the bureau report. At the end of the first fifteen minutes the market was firm at 8 points advance.

At 11 o'clock December sold up to 12.70 cents, but net realizing sales caused a small reaction and the close was steady at 10 to 15 points net advance, December closing at 12.65 cents.

AN INVESTMENT

That is worthy of your immediate investigation—a legitimate opportunity to share in the profits made by a well known oil producer, not a broker or promoter; not a stock proposition but an interest in the profits made on the production and sale of oil, which should on a conservative estimate net you from

5% to 20% a Month

This may sound too good to be true, consequently all I ask is an opportunity to show you, to let you see for yourself and furnish you every opportunity to make the most careful investigation and satisfy yourself thoroughly as to my ability and standing and the safety and earning power of the investment before you invest a dollar. This is a legitimate opportunity to make money by securing an interest with me in the actual oil produced where I am now operating in a proven field, where I can take you and show you what I am doing. Do not confuse this with any stock proposition or promotion. Brokers and promoters, please do not waste your time and mine answering this advertisement. This opportunity is open for quick action only and to people who can invest from $1,000 to $10,000 after satisfying themselves as to the desirability of the investment. Profits paid every month in cash as fast as made.

COUNTRY CLUB TAKES OVER MOUNTAIN LODGE.

CAMP EUREKA, AT BIG BEAR LAKE, SOLD FOR $90,000; NEW IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BIG BEAR VALLEY, July 30—The biggest deal ever completed in Big Bear Valley was the sale this week by Mrs. Margaret Betterly, owner of Camp Eureka, of the entire camp with its lodge, social hall and sixteen cabins to the Big Bear Country Club, which was represented by Carl Sternlov. The price paid was $90,000.

The Big Bear Country Club is a co-operative corporation, limited to 1000 members and the club will be operated exclusively for the benefit of the members and their friends. The camp, as it is now built, will accommodate about 100 guests and will be the temporary headquarters for the club.

The first building to be erected will be the clubhouse which will be of the Swiss rustic type, steam heated, and with a large number of rooms and suites with private baths, private dining rooms and other conveniences.

Camp Eureka will be the center of the lodge and many smaller lodges will be scattered at various places throughout the valley. There will also be room for private cabins and there will be a hunting lodge at Baldwin Lake for the duck season, fishing lodges at Deer, Bear and other creeks. A special playground and nursery will be built for the children.

A portion of the grounds will be set aside for revenues. A motion picture studio plant with several complete units, warehouses, carpenter shops and stables, will be built. One building will be devoted to winter scene props, since most of the winter scenes in pictures will be made there.

The club has been incorporated for $400,000, one half common and one half 8 per cent cumulative stock. Officers and directors are: President, Gus Inglis; vice-president, Carl Sternlov; vice-president, Roland H. Holbrook, Los Angeles; treasurer, Theodore Newman; secretary, Warren Pinney.

AWAR DCONTRACT FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT.

WORK WILL BE STARTED SOON ON NEW BOULEVARD FROM INGLEWOOD TO VENICE.

Development of the Los Angeles Investment Company's 2000-acre home tract at Inglewood is expected to be hastened by the construction of a new boulevard through this tract from Inglewood to Venice. The contract for paving the first mile, which is along Centinela avenue, has been let and work is scheduled to begin at once.

The Inglewood tract was opened about five weeks ago by the Los Angeles Investment Company in anticipation of this new highway being built. One unit of the tract, consisting of seventy-one lots, was put on the market with the understanding that each purchaser could have a new three or four-room house built on the lot by the company. All of this unit has been sold, the company reports, and fifty houses have been completed for buyers within the last thirty days. This is claimed to be a record for small home building in Los Angeles.

The second unit has been opened, and the houses will be built as fast as the building crews can get over the ground. These new houses are all inside the city of Inglewood, about four blocks from the business center. The tract extends west and southwesterly from Inglewood over the mesa of the Baldwin Hills section. It is expected that this district will be built up rapidly. This is only a part of the big building program announced by the Los Angeles Investment Company for this year. New building development is being pushed at Angeles Vista Heights, where three new blocks along West Forty-eighth street between Sixth and Eighth avenues have been scheduled for improvement with fine homes, and in the Slauson-Normandie tract lots are being sold with the privilege to purchasers, of erecting temporary homes.

August to See Record Output of Ford Cars.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, July 30. — While some plants report a slightly decreased demand for their product, the Ford plant will turn out 109,700 automobiles and trucks during August, surpassing all previous records, company officials announced this week. July's output will total 109,000, it was said.

There has been an increase in production since May when 101,464 cars were made, and 108,962 in June. These figures are for the United States alone. The British and Canadian plants expect to increase from 225 cars daily to 300 cars during August.

Added to the car and truck production is the output of the River Rouge tractor plant, which announces a daily output for August of 200 tractors, or 5400 for the month. Thus the output of cars, trucks and tractors for August will be 123,200.

In addition to the complete car production of 4063 cars every working day in August, repair parts which would make 150 cars daily are also being turned out.

The schedule for the motor department calls for a daily output of 4300 motors.

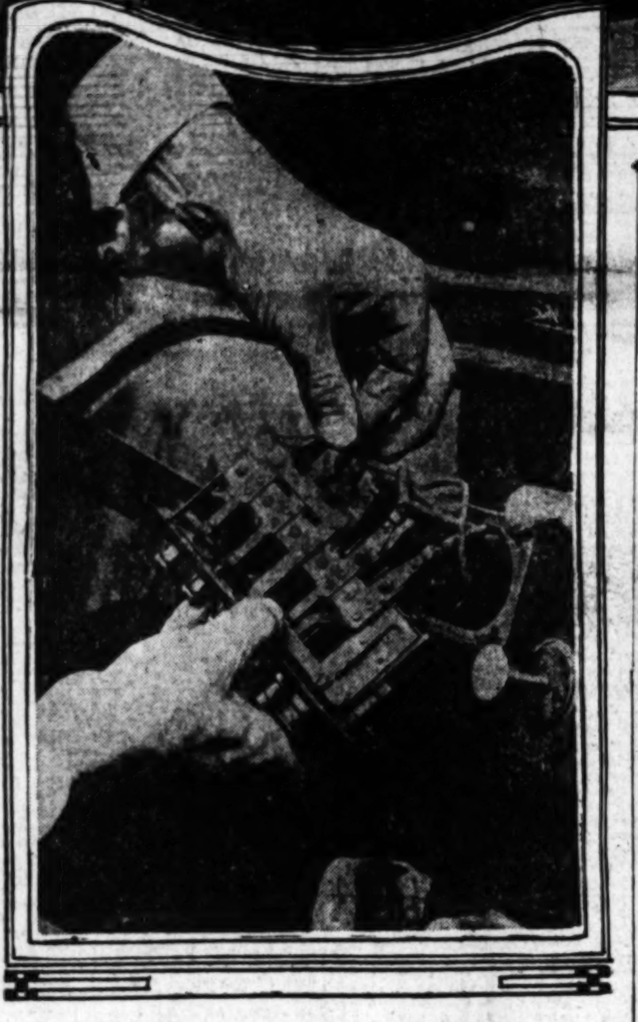
MICHIGAN PASSES LAW TO SAFEGUARD OWNERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LANSING (Mich.) July 30.—Great interest is shown in the new Michigan law which is aimed to safeguard ownership and prevent unlawful sales. W. P. Young, secretary and general manager of the National Automobile Underwriters Conference, stated that one of the causes contributing to the increasing theft of motor vehicles has been the inadequate penalties imposed generally through the country and that public sentiment must be aroused to a more vigorous enforcement of all antitheft statutes.

HEADQUARTERS FOR DORT.

F. A. Petrie, assistant sales manager of the Dort Motor Car Company of Flint, Mich., arrived in Los Angeles last week to select a Pacific Coast headquarters branch for the concern which he represents. San Francisco has been the company's Coast headquarters in the past, but it is being moved here, and Mr. Petrie will be the head.



It's Very Easy to Catch Fleeing Thieves.

Detectives Rose and Hickok simply run them into the curb and pull the hip cannon on their prey. It's dangerous, but very thrilling, and has cut down the avalanche of thefts to a great extent. To aid in the quick recovery of stolen cars, Detective Erven has invented a card identification plan which is to be put into effect by the Auto club this week. Facsimiles are shown above. Below is depicted the hair-pin stunt used by auto thieves when they want to start a "locked" car.

AUTO THEFTS MOUNTING.

Statistics Prove That This Year's Toll Will Exceed That of 1920 by 400 to 500 Cars.

Auto thefts are jumping by leaps and bounds to exceed the record set last year when $1,315,970 in stolen autos was the toll exacted here by automobile thieves.

According to figures issued yesterday by the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, there were 1635 cars stolen locally in 1920. But during the first six months of this year there have been 1259 machines taken, indicating that the total will exceed 2000 by the last of December.

SIMPLE IGNORANCE.

Kindergarten ignorance regarding essential but simple details pertaining to the identification of stolen autos on the part of owners is responsible, according to Auto Club officials, for the great success of auto thief gangs in this section.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY.

AUTOMOBILES. Announcement of the organization of a $5,000,000 corporation with Eddie Rickenbacker at its head, to produce a new type of automobile was the biggest bit of news in automotive circles the past week. Detroit will be the seat of production, and work will be started within thirty days, America's Ace of Aces announces.

Figures compiled by the Automobile Club of Southern California show a large increase in the stolen car percentage column, over that of a year ago. Ford thefts predominate.

Less than four miles remain to be built of a new mountain road that will connect Los Angeles and Southern California by automobile with large, and little explored section of the high Sierras.

Entry of Emil Lautenschlager, German racing star, received for Thanksgiving race at Beverly bowl, has stirred up a turmoil among speedway officials.

Other plants may decrease production, but not the Ford. Company officials in Detroit announce that August's output will surpass all previous records.

In view of the money appropriated by Congress for good roads, sentiment in Washington is strongly in favor of a tax on automobile owners as one of the means of raising revenue next year.

Washington in Favor of Tax on Motor Cars.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Sentiment in Washington seems strongly in favor of a tax on automobile owners as one of the means of raising revenue next year. President Harding told his friends, it is reported, that he favored such a tax. He made it clear, however, that the tax would not embody a Federal license system.

In view of the money appropriated by Congress for good roads, the President feels that the owners of cars should bear part of this expense. Two hundred million dollars have been appropriated for good roads, and the proposed auto levy will yield, according to Chairman Fordney of the Ways and Means Committee, approximately $100,000,000.

With the sanction of the proposed levy, from the President, it is believed such a tax will be exacted by Congress. Automobile owners, numbering nearly 6,000,000 throughout the country, are expected to make vigorous objection to an additional auto tax. It is probably too late now to prevent the tax provision going into the revenue bill. That means that the fight against it must be made on the floor of the House.

The program that the leaders in Congress favor is a tax of $10 on owners of automobiles costing less than $1000; $15 on cars costing less than $2000 and more than $1000; $20 on cars costing more than $2000.

Chairman Fordney has assured President Harding that the bill will have passed the House by August 6, and that he expected its final enactment around the latter part of September.

OVERLAND HANGS UP PRODUCTION RECORD.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, July 30.—Willys-Overland has passed the peak of sales for the present season, it is believed by officials of the Toledo plant, as orders were poster this week calling for five-day working schedule and lowering of production for August.

The mark set for July was 12,000 cars. This has been reduced to 10,500 cars, and the August schedule set at only 6500. The September program is placed at 2750. These are only tentative figures, and if the trade continues as brisk as it has been during the last few weeks they will have to be revised upward, officials say. The sales of the present week will probably temper the schedule for next month.

Rarely has the Overland operated extensively during the summer months. Last week hundreds of men were laid off and during the next week the force will probably be cut by 2500 men. It is planned to keep a normal force of about 5000 men at work during the fall months.

TOURS FOR THE MOTORISTS.

Midsummer vacation tours which occupy the attention of motorists this season can be made more pleasant if the auto owner knows just the condition of the roads he is to follow.

NEW ROAD TO HIGH SIERRAS.

A Nine-Mile Mountain Wind from the Tule River.

Completion Will Open Up a Little-Explored Section.

Eventually Drive is to be Extended to Mt. Whitney.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP NELSON (Tulare County) July 29.—Less than four miles remain to be built of a new mountain road that will connect Los Angeles and Southern California by automobile with a large and but little explored section of the High Sierras.

Starting at the junction of two forks of the Tule River, twenty-five miles east of Porterville, this road climbs the mountain side in an easterly direction for nine miles to Camp Nelson, the jumping-off place for Mt. Whitney and the Kern River Canyon.

RAH FOR 1922!

At the opening of the camping season next year, one may leave Los Angeles in the morning, drive to Camp Nelson by way of Bakersfield, Porterville and Springville the same day, leave Nelson with pack animals on the following morning, and that night sleep under the stars at Trout Meadow, well on the way to the famed Kern River country, and to the summit of the highest peak in the United States, outside of Alaska.

A paved highway connecting Porterville with Springville, seventeen miles distant, will be completed this summer. From Springville, a good mountain road threads the foothills for eight miles to the junction of the north and south forks of the Middle Tule River, where starts the new scenic mountain line.

AN EASY GRADE.

Climbing along the north wall of the south fork of the river, far above the tumbling falls and glittering waters of the rushing stream, the road curves gracefully for several miles through the chaparral, the grade at no point on the entire route being greater than 3 per cent. A few miles below Nelson, the highway passes into a forest of pines, cedars and black oaks, and becomes a heavily shaded avenue, from there to the terminus.

Eventually this road will be extended farther back into the mountains and ultimately, it is believed, to Mt. Whitney. Thus it will become the great southern entrance to the proposed Roosevelt National Park, embracing California's highest mountain peaks, the Kern and Kings River canyons, myriads of streams, hundreds of alpine lakes, majestic forests, and a wealth of scenic grandeur comparable to that of the Yosemite.

Within the 1600-square-mile area of the proposed new park are hundreds of thousands of the Sequoia Washingtoniana, the celebrated Big Tree of California, thousands of which are more than ten feet in diameter, and one of which, the Gen. Sherman tree, is the oldest and biggest living thing in the world. This tree, which is 279.9 feet high, with a diameter of 36.5 feet, and several others of nearly equal size, are in the present Sequoia National Park, which, it is planned, is to be included in the Roosevelt Park.

HOTEL CHAIN FOR AUTOISTS.

Main Arteries of Travel in State to be Covered.

Provide Accommodations at a Nominal Figure.

First Unit is Being Built in Boyle Heights.

Already recognized as leading the world in the matter of motor travel, California is soon to offer something unique in hotel accommodations for motorists, according to the announcement of the Motor Inns of California, which has started the construction of what will be a chain of hotels operated under this name and covering the State.

The interesting part of the plan is that the purpose of the company will be to furnish accommodations particularly designed for the motor traveler, and at rates which they can easily afford. A room for two persons, including garage and use of cooking quarters, will be offered as low as $1 per day for the two. For rooms with bath the price will be a little higher, not to exceed $1.50 to $2 for two persons, per day.

PRESSING NEED.

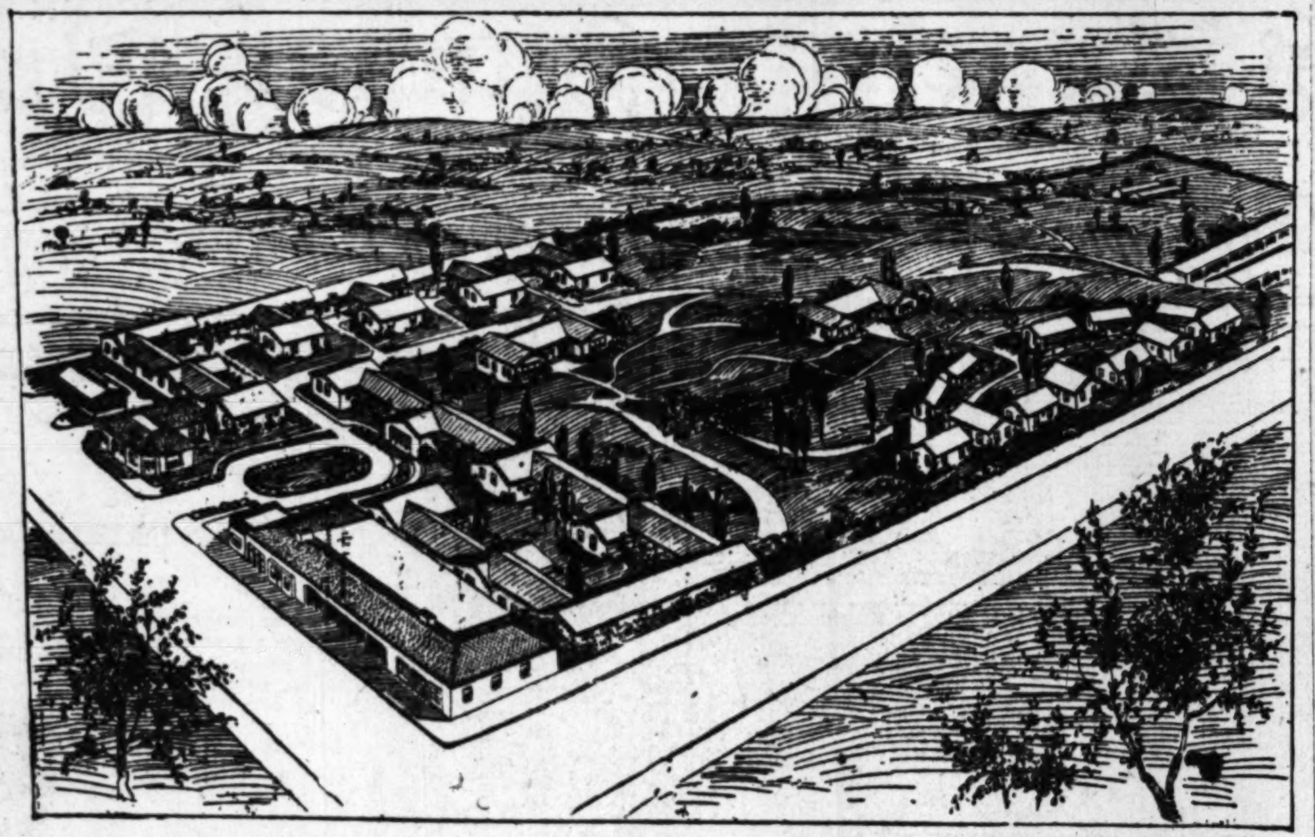
"The really great need," says Mr. Brill, the president of the company, "which confronts the vast number of people now traveling by automobile, is the matter of suitable hotel accommodations. Everyone who has traveled at all knows the scarcity of them, and something of the prices which are charged.

"The Motor Inns of California have solved the problem in a distinctly Californian way. We are building our inns of a bungalow type of construction, every one in the middle of spacious, parklike grounds, with each room an outside one.

"Of particular interest to the motorist is the fact that there will be a separate locked stall in the garages, for the machine of each guest. There will be no need to hunt around a strange town for a garage to put up the car."

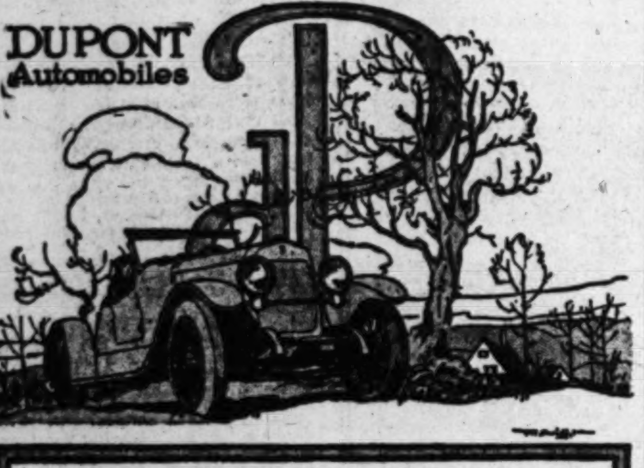
The inn at Los Angeles, being constructed on five acres at Stephenson avenue and Soto street, will be ready for occupancy about August 15. The plans for this structure provide for close to 200 rooms. The company has purchased a site at Fresno and will soon commence the construction of the second of its inns there. These will be followed by others along the main motor routes throughout the State as fast as construction will permit.

Mr. Brill, who is the president of the new enterprise, was vice-president and secretary of the Acme Stores Company until it was absorbed by the Chaffee Company a few months ago. He has had a wide experience in handling chain-store enterprises and has associated a number of prominent local business men with him in the new venture.



Something New in the Way of Hotel Accommodation Interesting to the Motorist.

Herewith is a reproduction of the first unit of the Motor Inns system, now being built at the corner of Stephenson and Soto streets. The plan is to furnish autoists with lodgings at prices that will fit the pocket of all. The Inns are to be of bungalow type of construction, erected in the middle of spacious, park-like grounds. Eventually, it is the intention of the company to dot the State with these Inns. Already four acres of ground has been purchased at Fresno for the second unit. Main arteries of travel will be selected for sites.



The duPont four-cylindered power plant combines simplicity, accessibility and economy with a reliability that is absolute. The attention which duPont engineers have given the smaller units will be gratifying to motorists who know their importance.

SPEEDWAY GETS GERMAN ENTRY.

bosom friends, but officially the two countries are not "agin" each other.

According to members of the racing committee of the Los Angeles Speedway Association, Congress may be right—and then again she may not be. It all depends on what the American racing drivers and the American racing fans say about it.

Lautenschlager's entry has stirred up a generous turmoil, with opinions about evenly divided. "Sure! Forget the war and give the Hun another licking" says one faction. "Nothing doing! We cannot meet such low persons in sporting competition" says another. Temporarily, the matter is on the shelf, and will probably be decided by a vote of Yankee racing drivers who are regular participants in local speedway events.

Before the war, Lautenschlager and his Mercedes would have been welcomed with open arms by Angeleno gasoline fans. The Hun was right up in the front rank of track daredevils, and in road competition he ranked above par. The Grand Prix de France, greatest of all races from a glory standpoint, fell victim to his prowess twice, and in other stellar events he more than held his own. The German Mercedes was driven to countless victories in America, with Italian-American Ralph de Palma as its charioteer.

Last May Lautenschlager and the Mercedes factory tried to enter the International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis. America and Germany were still at war, officially, so finally the Hoosiers turned down the Hun. Drivers entered in the big classic were willing to let the German try his luck, but the track management was not sure of its ground, and refused to risk public censure by accepting the entry.

Last month Germany broke into the racing game again via the great Targa Floria event, staged under Italian auspices on a mountainous course in Sicily. Seller and a Mercedes comprised the German entry, and before the finish of the contest threw a big scare into their Italian hosts. At times the Mercedes was showing its tail to the field of thirty Italian cars, and only by superhuman effort was Masetti with his Fiat able to lead the invader over the finish line for first place.

Evidently the Mercedes is still as formidable as it was in the days when Ralph de Palma drove it to victory at Santa Monica, Indianapolis and Elgin, and when the German-built Benz was a close competitor. However, the Mercedes which finished second in the Targa Floria was motored with a 460-cubic-inch engine, while the Fiats, Alfa-Romeos, Italas and Cerianos of the Italians measured from 300 cubic inches down to 120. Perhaps the Hun, under present-day 183-cubic-inch speedway restrictions, will prove the rankest kind of a joke in competition.

BOOST OUTPUT OF PNEUMATICS

day and 30,000 tubes; the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company has boosted production from 21,000 a day to 23,000 tires and 2000 additional tubes, and while neither the Miller Rubber Company nor the B. F. Goodrich Company have given out new production figures, it is known that sufficient men have been taken on by both to increase the output of Goodrich at least 2000 and Miller at least 500.

It may be of interest to know that in 1918 the Goodyear had a daily output of 26,000 tires in Akron, Goodrich an output of 20,000, Firestone 22,000 and Miller 3500.

Kelly-Springfield, which in 1918 made 1500 tires a day, is now making 2000 and is still a month behind orders.

Truck tires continue to show increased sales, Goodyear reporting that June sales were at least 18 per cent better than the previous month, but the revival of this department is dependent upon better business generally and the truck-tire ends of the rubber factories are not yet running anywhere near the speed registered a year ago.

Incidentally, however, it may be of some importance to state that Goodyear also reported a 19-per-cent increase in sales of mechanical goods, principally belting, hose and packing for June over May, which is an indication that railroads are gradually beginning to purchase necessary supplies.

Figures gathered by the Chamber of Commerce during the past week show that not only are there as many automobiles operating in the United States today as in 1920, but that the past half year has seen an increase of 215,819 registrations, not counting New York or Maryland, in which States definite figures for the first half of the year were not available.

This cannot help but mean that the tire requirement for the present year will be close to that of 1920, although many owners may have determined to run their cars as little as possible during the summer. The good weather reported throughout the United States was too much of a temptation, and it is believed that practically every automobile registered was on the roads and wearing out tires and thereby helping to use up what little surplus is remaining.

Reports from Goodyear, Goodrich, Miller and Firestone indicate that export business has almost doubled since the first of the present year. The increase in orders has come from Europe principally, where business is taking a turn for the better.

In South America and Mexico, looked forward to as good fields for American and Akron merchandise, the dealers have insisted upon closing out their wares now on the shelves at the war prices, and the buyers' strike has made sales almost impossible.

The orders for Akron goods are principally in pleasure-car tires. The increase has been steady since the first of the year, and it is believed that the trade has set in for a period of betterment.

Buy Standard Products and Avoid Trouble.

The average motorists does not realize that he is protecting himself when he buys products that are nationally advertised. He has an idea that a manufacturer merely conducts an advertising campaign to sell goods to the public. In part he is correct in this assumption, but he does not consider the other phases of national advertising.

"In buying a product that is nationally advertised," said Hal Baker, salesmanager of the Western Auto Supply Company, "the motorist is protected because the public is familiar with the name under which the product is marketed. If the product does not stand up with service, its familiarity is far from being the cause of the customer's purchasing any more of the same goods. On the contrary, it is a warning not to purchase them.

"A national advertiser spends many thousand of dollars per year in telling the public that his goods are for sale and reminding them of their quality. He knows very well that his product, whatever it may be, must live up to its advertised standard. If he cuts the quality of his goods, his advertising becomes an expensive bomerang for him.

"We have tried to impress upon the public at large, wherever our stores are located that the Western Auto Supply Company's goods are all reliable."

AUTO DEALERS ARE TO GATHER.

State Trade Association to Meet at Lake Tahoe.

Representatives from Many Branches to Attend.

Problems of the Industry to be Discussed.

Automobile men from all parts of California will gather at Lake Tahoe August 15 and 16 for the northern division meeting of the California Automobile Trade Association, that organization which is doing so much to eliminate the cut-throat garage men and the unfair automotive dealer and repair man.

George Haberfelde, who was re-elected president at the general meeting in Santa Barbara last June, will preside, and will be assisted by Robert W. Martland, secretary-manager of the State association.

ITS BRANCHES.

The State association is divided into more than forty local associations, each with a secretary-manager in charge. Representatives from practically every local in Northern California will be there, and much important business will be transacted.

Price reductions and general trend in the automotive industry will be discussed, and the reorganization methods of various business bodies threshed out.

That the "California plan" of automobile trade associations is a success is proved by the adoption of the system in more than eighteen States.

Robert W. Martland leaves this week for Seattle, Tacoma and Vancouver, B. C., where he will address the State associations there and tell them of the success of the California idea.

HOW IT'S DONE.

The California Association is now being put into effect in the Northwest, and Martland will tell them how it was done in the Golden State. This is the second time in less than a year that he has gone north to lend a helping hand in organizing Oregon and Washington associations.

The well-known wheel and radiator insignia that you see in front of good garages, motor car and accessory dealers means that you will get a square deal there. This is the insignia of the California Automobile Trade Association. Look for it when you need service for your automobile.

Mack TRUCKS

Quality Appreciation Counts Most

During the period through which we have passed recently thousands of motor trucks were sold to conservative buyers solely on the basis of an early delivery date. The demand did not exceed the supply.

The present is a different period —one in which buyers are giving careful consideration to economies of all kinds. Buyers are looking at their truck operating and maintenance cost sheets as never before and the lowest achieveable cost per ton mile is the all-absorbing topic.

QUALITY is what makes low costs. The thought and attention now being given to quality equipment as related to operating costs have never been equaled in American motor truck history. QUALITY IS KING.

Somewhere in Rainier National Park.

EXTOLS NATIONAL PARKS.

Writing from Paradise Inn, Ranier National Park, E. C. Layton extolls the wonders of the national parks of the Pacific Coast. He and his wife left Los Angeles in their 1918 Franklin Brougham with the avowed purpose of visiting as many of the national parks as possible, and state that "seeing America first" is a most pleasurable duty.

Sequoia, Gen. Grant and Yosemite national parks were visited in succession, but at Shasta Springs they were forced to leave during the night on account of forest fires. Crater Lake in Oregon was next visited, and it was quite a sensation to drive through snow canyons sometimes ten feet high. The Columbia River Highway trip was taken in, and then the faithful Franklin was hustled up to Ranier National Park, where Layton states the glistening snow fields and blue glacial ice are a sight to behold. The fact that he had an air-cooled car was most comforting, for he had no radiator to worry about.

In closing Layton said: "I have often felt that as a nation we neglected our national parks and since I have started on this trip I have felt that the neglect is almost criminal. However, I have noted with a certain comfort that along the road we are meeting more and more automobiles with license plates from this and that State, California being predominant, of course, but many from the far eastern part of the country."

Promise Better Things Still at Oakland Factory

Following the announcement of the change in the personnel of the management of the Oakland Motor Car Company at Pontiac, Mich., comes the news that the new officials are more determined than their predecessors to develop and produce a motor car that would perpetuate the name Oakland throughout the years to come.

"Reeve Gartzmann, the president of the California Oakland Motor Company, has been at the factory for more than a week," says H. E. Franklin, "and he has advised us that we can go the limit in boosting the Oakland of today.

"There have been so many improvements that the present Oakland is in a class by itself. No radical changes have been effected, but just the countless small changes that go to give a car greater efficiency and longer life, have been made.

"With the already high standing that the Oakland enjoys in the West, there should be but little trouble in convincing anyone of the great value expressed in this automobile, which stands today as the lowest-price six-cylinder car in the world."

HUDSON AND ESSEX SALES INCREASING.

OPTIMISTIC LETTER FROM SALES MANAGER OF THE EASTERN FACTORY.

"Hudson and Essex sales are showing a decided increase," states O. H. McCornack, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Company, Detroit, in a letter to Harold L. Arnold, distributor of those cars for California, Nevada and Arizona.

"There is every indication that our summer sales will beat our record of last year.

"This activity naturally is gratifying to us and also establishes three outstanding facts.

"First: That general business conditions are improving.

"Second: That our organization has retained its full enthusiasm and morale and is working confidently and hard, taking advantage of every opportunity.

"Third: The buying public is giving greater recognition to the real value of Hudson and Essex cars."

DRIVE YOUR CAR AND BE HEALTHY.

"Because motoring acts as either a physical or mental stimulant, or both, the automobile has become looked upon as either a health creator or a health restorer," says Gilbert Woodill, Pacific Coast representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company.

"There are two big benefits from owning a car-mind-diversion while riding with somebody else driving, or physical exercise and mind-diversion when driving. In addition to getting plenty of air, the riding motion and changing scenes accelerate the pulse and respiration, steady the nerves, create quick mental response and develop alertness and pep."

The Cylinder Grinders of Los Angeles

There are many signs of warning which enable the motorist to determine a defective cylinder—one that is scored, enlarged, or inaccurately bored.

Some of these signs are,— —lack of original power and pep
—use of an excessive amount of gas and oil —spark-plugs continually fouled
—motor "choppy," especially when idling.

Regrinding Effects a Speedy Cure

Any or all of these conditions may be speedily corrected by having the cylinders reground.

Regrinding brings back to a leaky cylinder that compression which has been lost—it will save in gas and oil, because the leakage of gas has been corrected—it will keep spark plugs clean, because it assures a correct mixture in the combustion chamber.

Motorists have found that after a complete overhaul job has been made on the motor, cylinders properly reground, and fitted with new pistons, rings and pins, that they are able, not only to add thousands of miles to the life of their cars, but speed along, assured of that smoothness of operation—that care-free feeling which comes to every motorist when motor troubles have been entirely eliminated.

CONQUERS SIERRA ROUTE.

Last month, while The Times Essex was making its terrific trip inspecting the Tioga and bringing back information of interest to every motorist about that wonderful vacation road, A. H. Patterson, with another Essex was fighting his way across the summit of Ebbett's Pass between the Calaveras Big Trees and Markleeville.

Ebbett's is the third highest mountain pass accessible to motor cars in California, the highest being Tioga and the second highest, Sonora-Mono. Ebbett's Pass is 8800 feet and Sonora-Mono, 9540 feet high. Snow continues on both until well into the summer. One stretch encountered by Patterson was 100 feet long and could not be avoided. Against this barrier Patterson hurled the Essex time and again only to hang up on the differential. Each time it was necessary to dig the car out. Finally by adopting the expedient of racing his engine and letting in the clutch suddenly while in second gear, Patterson was able to climb on top of the frozen crust and proceeded up the grade to a point where the soil had been swept clear of snow.

Incidentally, while climbing the east slope "Pat" sent his Essex to victory in lowering the best previous time over the double S grade near the summit. The Essex cut one minute and five seconds off the former record. Those who know this terrific pitch say that Patterson's record is one which will stand until the State carries out its plan for reducing to a 6 per cent grade this terror of all trans-Sierra roads.

GUARANTEE SUSPICIOUS TO AUTOIST.

Not Necessary to Shout the Praises of a Product to Convince Buyer.

Many car owners today are being attracted by long-time guarantees when buying batteries. The wise motorist will stop to consider whether he wants to buy a guarantee of a battery of dependable service.

More and more, the American motorist is coming to regard the long guarantee battery with a bit of suspicion. "If the battery is made right in the first place," says A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, distributors of Willard batteries, "and the manufacturer is sincere in his desire to protect his good reputation, why should it be necessary for him to shout his guarantee from the house tops in his effort to sell his product?

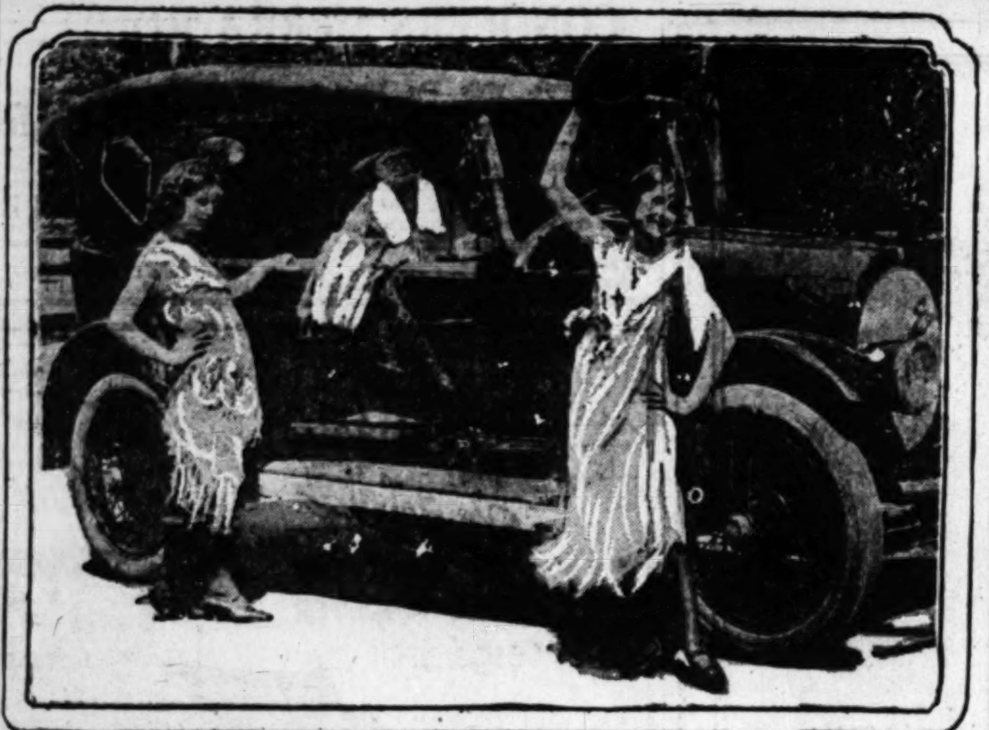
"The wise motorist who believes in the principles of 'safety first' will buy his storage battery of a concern whose only guarantee is that it must be satisfactory. Such a manufacturer has a reputation to maintain and protect and he will use his last dollar to do this.

"Usually long battery guarantees are simply selling points, and because of the peculiar circumstances surrounding a storage battery, it is almost impossible for the average motorist to live up to the many conditions with which his guarantee is hedged about. The safest rule to follow is to buy a storage battery with a reputation, and not a guarantee," concluded Mr. Tobey.

POPULARITY OF THE FORDSON IS GROWING.

"The Fordson tractor is daily growing more popular in the industrial field," stated I. B. Groves assistant manager of Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company. Among the satisfied users in Los Angeles and vicinity are Patten & Daves Lumber Company, who find that the sturdy Fordson displaces from four to six horses in their yard operations.

"This progressive lumber company has found the Ford car and truck indespensable in maintaining their reputation for prompt deliveries, and when the Fordson tractor was made available for general hauling by the addition of rubber-tired wheels they were quick to obtain this equipment. So satisfactory did it prove that an additional tractor has been purchased for their San Pedro yards. They report that the Fordson takes the place of two teams and is being maintained at the cost at which one horse can be fed."



The Pageant of San Gabriel Certainly Ought to Be Worth Seeing.

Here we have a few of the bewitching principals. From left to right, Miss Rhodora Plannette as Yaldora Gonzales; Mrs. Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith, author of the pageant (in the car,) and Miss Elizabeth Kevane, as Concepcion from Old Madrid. The pageant, commemorating the founding of the Mission San Gabriel Archangel, is heralded as an excellent portrayal of the days of 150 years ago in Southern California. The car is an Apperson Anniversary Eight, loaned by the local factory branch.

PAGEANT OF OLD RIOT OF ATMOSPHERE

California of Eighteenth Century to be Represented at San Gabriel Today.

Would that the shades of the good padres, Somera and Cambon, or of their successors Paterno and Cruzado might be with us today at San Gabriel to mingle with the throngs of sight-seers and celebrants making merry in memory of that day, just a century and a half ago when the Mission San Gabriel Archangel was born.

Imagine how their eyes would open wide in astonishment at the thousands of horseless carriages, at the dress of our day, and at the wonderful development of the San Gabriel Valley as a "land of milk and honey." Undoubtedly, too, they would be astounded at the crowds of people and houses and mansions that stretch away from the old mission in almost every direction in countless thousands.

Still more, perhaps, would they wonder at the interest that we are taking in commemorating their deeds of the long ago with a wonderful pageant, in which much that would be somewhat familiar to them would be portrayed in its original splendor and gayety.

Thanks to the genius of Mrs. Lilian Burkhart Goldsmith, who has in the past produced such inimitable creations as "The Spirit of Love," "The Birth of a Soul," "A Friend of Peter Pan" and "The Pageant of the Nativity." The Pageant of San Gabriel, which opens this afternoon at 3 o'clock, will bring back to us in its riot of color and its spirit of old Spain the real atmosphere of California in the later days of the eighteenth century.

Last week Mrs. Goldsmith, anxious to try out two of her star dancers in the production, loaded them into an Apperson anniversary eight and took them out where they could go through a few steps typical of those they will do today. The girls were Miss Rhodora Plannette, who takes the part of Yaldora Gonzalez, and Elizabeth Kevane, who is to play the part of Concepcion from Old Madrid. The girls enjoyed their outdoor trip, as the guests of the local Apperson factory branch, as did Mrs. Goldsmith, who appreciated the chance to get away for a few minutes at least from the cares of directing rehearsals and producing a great community play.

AUTO OUSTS HORSE IN LOGGING CAMPS.

The day of the horse is passing in the logging camps. The cost records of the horse compared with the records of the motor vehicle in several recent carefully checked tests, show that the use of power equipment cuts the cost of log hauling as high as 70 per cent.

These figures were presented by practical woodsmen during the recent convention of the woodlands section of the American Paper and Pulp Association, who have been forced to substitute power operations for animal hauling by the far greater economy of the motor hauler.

The figures given by these operators apply equally well to lumber operations as to woods camps of the paper industry, for the hauling problem is identical in both types of cuttings.

Trailer Fleet Saves Company Time and Money.

One of the strongest advocates of trailers in conjunction with trucks is H. G. Appelton of the Advance Truck Company and his recommendation for their use is based on years of experience.

The work which his company handles is nearly all heavy hauling such as oil well supplies for the oil well districts, miles of pipe for water mains, tons of bean straw from the Beverly Hills acreage and other like propositions.

Having learned the disadvantage of overloading the trucks themselves above a certain point the drivers are required to limit the load on a five-ton truck to six tons maximum and if they have no trailer with them to leave the balance.

When more than twelve tons are to be handled on a sinle trip the overload is placed on the trailer so that the truck load limit is not exceeded. While this will result in breaking down the trailer eventually it is less expensive to repair it than the truck.

A few years ago Appelton had a truck that was being overloaded regularly and a total of eleven rear axle housings were installed as the heavy loads broke them near the spring saddle. Later this same truck ran for months and months with no such trouble when it had a trailer attached and the total load was even greater than the truck had been able to carry on its own back alone.

The fleet of trucks and trailers which the company operates makes up quite a stable of vehicles. All of their modern trailers are of the Utility make on which they have standardized.

In the Silly Season.

From the musical magazines it is surmised that the musicians' silly season is on, when they romp off to the seashore and the mountains, to forget all troubles, cares, engagements, work and managers—forgetting everything, in fact, except how to pose for the news man's camera.—[Kansas City Star.

More Than 50,000 Owners Share This Reliance

Dr. Foster W. Bassett, Well known L. A. physician, says:

"After 32,000 miles constant use of the Essex purchased in March 1919, I can sincerely say that it fills the requirements of a busy physician's car better than any of the several automobiles I had previously owned.

"Operating cost is low on gas, oil and tires. As an evidence of Essex tire economy, one of the original tires is still on the car at 32,316 miles. The others gave over 20,000 miles each."

CADILLAC

Greatest Value in Europe and America, Say World's Motor Car Experts

If it were possible to take a census of public opinion in Europe and America, experienced judgment would overwhelmingly pronounce the Cadillac far and away the greatest motor car value in the world.

English, French, and Italian engineers have unhesitatingly admitted as much—the first American motorist you meet on the street, no matter whether he owns a Cadillac or not, will instantly register the same opinion.

There could not be such a solid body of conviction if every Cadillac did not deliver everything that is conceded to it by the motorists of the world.

It is the aim and the ambition of every manufacturer of good cars in America to secure a share of the overwhelming preference conceded to the Cadillac.

Yet the Cadillac ownership remains substantially unmoved; public opinion at home and abroad remains unconvinced; and the Cadillac continues to be considered by common agreement, the greatest outstanding motor car value in the world.

The simple reason is that the Cadillac case is proven—not once but tens of thousands of times, and by 110,000 eight-cylinder cars; not by a few years, but by eighteen years; not by promise, but by performance which is without peer or parallel.

DISSERTATION ON AUTO RACING.

PETALUMA, July 30.—Never in the history of the world has there been any pastime that could take the place of racing. For thousands of years it has been in the crucible of man's ingenuity, until every objectionable element has been eliminated from race track and vehicle, and the speedway and the automobile has resulted.

There is a question fermenting in the minds of members of California's sporting public, who have their eyes fixed on the 150-mile race at the Cotati track, on August 14, as to whether the racing driver is really playing chess with death when he enters the race. His car, after days of careful grooming, is transformed into a power that, infused with his own spirit, lends itself to his will. The most careful attention is given to every detail of his car. Is this done for conquest or to protect himself from accident and death? Does he go into the contest without one conscious thought of any result but to win, or does he weigh carefully the chances he is taking?

If there is any loss of nerve, any faltering from his purpose it will always come before he steps into his car for the start and, be it ever so little, unfortunately it weakens his chances for winning the race. The psychic moment must be that moment when, seated firmly for the start his hands first grip the wheel. Something, who shall say what it is, thrills from that mass of vibrant steel to the hands of its master. He would not turn back now if he could, the purr of his engine is as the breath of his own life.

He is conscious only of his car and his purpose, and that purpose is to win, the applause is as the beating of the drum to marching armies, the flutter of white handkerchiefs, and the wild cheering from the crowd give a thousand new wings to his flying wheels.

It is no mortal man who guides that car, but a spirit unhindered. The man has lost himself, as it were, for he has reached that supreme moment where concentration has shaken the consciousness of mortality. If he holds to it, the race is his. Will he do it?

Another car striving for better position swerves perilously close to his front wheel, for the fraction of a second his thought is diverted and he loses ground, and so it goes. There are drivers who are born drivers, and there are drivers who acquire driving, and there are those who are neither born to it nor do they acquire it, who yet drive.

The king of drivers is he who is able to keep a steady hand on both his wheel and his concentration. He must be one who cannot be diverted.

AUTO THEFTS ON INCREASE.

whose cars are stolen are able to give the license numbers of their autos. In the majority of instances, the theft bureau must telegraph to Sacramento to secure the license number of the stolen machine because the owner has "forgotten" it or has mislaid the slip of paper on which he wrote it down, according to club detectives.

Auto thieves are thus given plenty of time to make a get-away while the authorities are waiting for the necessary information to scatter broadcast throughout the country. If the average auto owner remembered his State license number, says the club, only about one-half the number of cars would be lost through theft.

RUN THEM DOWN.

However, it is shown in the report, many thieves and theft gangs have been run to earth in the last few days, cutting down the avalanche of thefts for the time being, at least. Detective Harry Hickok of the club bureau has evolved and perfected a special method of catching thieves which has proved effective in many instances recently.

This is the dangerous system of running them into the curb. It was first employed in capturing the famous gang of so-called "drug store bandits" on Broadway during the business rush hour when Detectives Raymond and Hickok cut in front of the fleeing thieves and forced them to the curb.

Another instance is that of last Sunday when Hickok, working single handed, forced James Wall and Henry Swan, fleeing in a car stolen from Monroe Bennett of this city, into the curb on Normandie avenue. This method of thief catching, while extremely perilous, is being adopted throughout eastern cities following the example set in its success by Los Angeles.

TIME NO ELEMENT.

That "time" is not an element in the recovery of stolen autos is also shown in the club's statement which advises auto owners to record all information which may prove vital in recovering their stolen property. A car belonging to Fred W. Eisele, also of this city, was recovered recently after a three year search.

It was stolen in Los Angeles but was recovered in Stoyes Town, Penn., after the owner has despaired of ever seeing it again. In the meantime it had changed hands many times. But the authorities, represented by Detective Sergeant Hickok, did not give up any more than does Scotland Yard, and the machine was returned for the simple reason that the owner was able to give definite descriptions of it.

In order to aid motorists in bolstering up their memories, Auto club officials have devised a plan which will be put into operation this week. This plan includes the issuing of a printed identification card for the exclusive use of motorists—but instead of identifying the individual, it will identify his automobile.

ARE ESSENTIAL.

There are certain characteristics about an auto which are absolutely necessary to its recovery in case it should be stolen. Each of these items is included on the card which is to be filled out by all auto owners in Southern California and filed with the club free of charge to be referred to in case a machine is stolen.

The card identification plan which is to be adopted by the club was devised by Detective Erven of the theft bureau to do away with the necessity of taking the time to wire Sacramento for this information, thus allowing the wily thieves time to escape to Arizona or nearby States.

Efforts are being directed at this time to break up entire gangs of thieves, which, because of their close business-like organization, are able to get away with more stolen cars, and to find more markets for them.

A REST—MAYBE.

With the scattering of these highly specialized gangs, which operate both the stealing end of the business and also the marketing end of it, it is believed that Southern California can rest easier for a while.

The ease with which auto thieves are working now is shown by the photos accompanying this article where the old "hairpin trick" is exposed, putting motorists on their guard against this device.

Here is an accurate list compiled by the Auto Club Detectives Raymond, Rose, Benedict, Erven and Hickok showing exactly the percentage of various makes of cars stolen in the year 1920 in Los Angeles and vicinity:

No. 8

The Wood Separator

"Separators, more than any other feature of battery construction, have been the subject of discussion and controversy. Many extravagant claims have been made respecting the virtues of various types.

"With the entire field from which to choose, Westinghouse engineers were able to make their decision with all the facts before them. They have tested every type for life, resistance and insulating qualities. As a result of their findings they selected the wood separator as the most satisfactory. Should a superior separator ever be developed, it will be utilized in the WESTINGHOUSE Battery."

July, 1921, Now

It was a five-passenger touring then. It was a new car and a good one. It sold for $1785. Many of the Chandlers built that year are still in active service.

The big, handsome, powerful seven-passenger Chandler of today, developed and refined as these years have passed, would have sold for twice as much then. It sells for $1785 now.

The Chandler policy then was high quality at low price, and that is the policy now, always has been and always will be.

Other cars of many kinds and many motors have come and gone in those eight years, while the Chandler lives and multiplies its friendships.

The Good Maxwell

MAXWELL

Some Folks Have Greatness Thrust Upon Them.

But C. M. Fuller of Richfield Oil would rather have the loving cup seen above than a whole barrel of fame. The cup was presented to him by "Knights of the Roaring Road." The inscription reads: "C. M. Fuller, our dependable friend—from Roscoe Sarles, Jimmy Murphy, Eddie Pullen, Joe Thomas. In appreciation of favors extended us by Richfield—manufacturers of the world's best gasoline and oil."

LOVING CUP FOR FULLER.

Two messengers entered C. M. Fuller's office last Monday. Both of them carried particular pleasure to the jovial manager of the Richfield Oil Company.

The first one carried the cablegram from Jimmy Murphy, announcing his victory with Richfield gasoline, over one of the greatest fields of drivers ever combined in the Grand Prix race, staged at Le Mans, France.

Murphy's Duesenberg made the 322-mile stretch in precisely four hours, seven minutes and ten seconds. De Palma, the favorite, had to content himself with second place.

The second messenger brought a mysterious package, which, when opened, proved to be a loving cup bearing the following inscription:

"C. M. Fuller, our dependable friend—from Roscoe Sarles, Jimmy Murphy, Eddie Pullen, Joe Thomas. In appreciation of favors extended us by Richfield—manufacturers of the world's best gasoline and oil."

These four drivers, according to Mr. Fuller, use Richfield gasoline and Richlube oils exclusively, and all of them hold important places in the racing world today.

The loving cup was ordered by the Duesenberg team just after the Indianapolis race, and just before Murphy left for France. Several days before the race Fuller received a wire from Fred Duesenberg, as follows:

"Find no gasoline here equals Richfield. Rush by express at least 400 gallons, regardless of expenses. All Duesenberg team feel they must have it. Wire advice."

After the race Murphy left immediately for France, taking with him the remainder of the shipment, except for a quantity which Sarles and Hearne expressed to Uniontown for their race there, in which Sarles finished first and Hearne second.

AUTO WORLD IS STIRRED.

ers are going to buy newer and better cars if the prices are right."

REACHES TOP.

In entering the production end of the business, Rickenbacker has reached the top rung of the ladder he set out to climb when, as a youth, he qualified as a mechanical engineer.

"The racing game is a turned page with me," he said. "It was just a step up the ladder, mainly to gather experience and knowledge of the best in motors."

Capt. Rickenbacker entered the automobile business in 1902 and since then has been engaged in every branch of the industry. In the new company he will have direction of the sales, but will also have much to do with the engineering.

Associated with Everitt and Rickenbacker in the company are: Harry L. Cunningham, secretary-treasurer, and Walter E. Flanders, Roy Hood, Carl Tichenor and E. R. Evans, directors. All are well known in the automobile manufacturing world.

Everitt and Flanders belonged to the old E.M.F. group, which preceded the present Studebaker corporation. Cunningham is one of their close associates. Hood acquired his experience as purchasing agent with Studebaker, and later with the Maxwell-Chalmers organization. Tichenor has recently been engaged as production manager for the Pierce Motor Car Company. During the war he had much to do with the production of the Liberty motor.

Surprise is expressed over the return of B. F. Everitt to the automobile manufacturing field. Since the sale of the old E.M.F. interests he has confined his attention entirely to his original business of automobile body building until today he is the second largest, if not indeed the largest, body builder in the world.

Walter E. Flanders took over the defunct United States Motors Company, from which he created the Maxwell company, of which he was head from 1911 to 1920. During this time he earned for the shareholders from what had been "a pile of scrap," $13,000,000 in profits.

A year ago he announced his intention of retiring from business permanently, as he had all the money he wanted and felt like resting on his laurels. Mr. Flanders's closest friends will be surprised also at the announcement that he will again engage in business, for only a couple of weeks ago he insisted he was through for good. But while in Detroit he went up to the temporary factory and examined the Rickenbacher car. He stated that it was "the best manufactured proposition" he had ever seen.

It seems the design of this car was started some two and a half years ago, when Capt. Rickenbacher returned from Europe with the determination to enter business for himself, and with a lot of new and novel ideas on engineering, which he had absorbed while in France. Messrs. Everitt, Flanders and Cunningham offered to back him in the enterprise, and C. R. Evans began to put Rickenbacher's ideas into a car.

When Mr. Flanders decided to retire, he indicated his desire to turn his interests over to the others, but early this week he wired back from the White Mountains, where he is vacationing, saying he would participate.

FORD SALES FORCE IS SHIFTED AROUND.

THREE NEW DEALERS APPOINTED AND SEVERAL CONCERNS CHANGE HANDS.

There have been some very important changes along the line of Ford dealers in Los Angeles during the past several weks. Three new dealers have been appointed, and a few concerns have changed hands.

The partnership of Clark & Coberly, Ford agents at 2219 West Pico street, has been dissolved, Mr. C. L. Clark retaining his interests, and Mr. A. L. Leonard, who for the past seven years has been with the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, taking over an interest.

Mr. J. E. Coberly has severed his connection with Clark & Coberly and has bought out the Ford agency at 1915 South Main street, formerly known as the Heinie Auto Sales Company. This Ford agency will be conducted under the name of the J. E. Coberly Company.

There will be no important changes in the way these Ford agencies will be handled. The same aggressive policies of sales and service, characteristic of the old firms will be carried out.

Buick About—

"One Book" Authors
"One Battle" Generals
—and—
"One Year" Automobiles

The history of the world's endeavor finds an interesting analogy in the motor car industry.

Authors who write one book and then the flame of inspiration burns low, generals who win one battle, but fail in the next great test, find an analogy in the present-day motor car manufacturers who build a "one-year" car, but are unable to keep abreast of the swift march of progress that characterizes the successful motor car manufacturer of today.

Some of the motor car industry's most colossal failures have been of cars that have been the most widely heralded as the ideal car, but were unable to stand up long enough to win a permanent place among the real contenders for supremacy.

The Buick is unique in that it does not have to apologize for any previous model. Buick's reputation is built over a period of twenty years without a single year's failure. So the name "Buick" on the radiator means more than so much steel, wood and leather—it means personal transportation, guaranteed by the prestige behind twenty years of successful manufacture.

The new 1922 Buick—the greatest Buick ever built—has the famous Buick valve-in-head motor, velvet disc clutch, patented "one-finger" gear shift, but one universal joint automatically oiled, tortion drive, NOT through the springs, and the Buick patented full-floating ball-bearing rear axle. The Delco electrical system, good enough to use on the Liberty motor; Exide battery, good enough to use in Uncle Sam's submarines; Alemite lubricating system, Cord tires and a host of last-word equipment that you should have NOW.

HUDSON

Endurance Is Almost Doubled

In all Hudson's records this important fact is clear: No ability is sacrificed in one direction to gain supremacy in another.

For instance the great speed of the Hudson means no forfeit of other qualities. For in official tests the Super-Six has also outperformed all other types in endurance, hill-climbing and acceleration.

Only a supreme advantage could account for such all-round dominance. Hudson has it in the Super-Six motor. In the same size motor the Super-Six principle adds 72% to power and 80% to efficiency. Endurance is practically doubled, through minimizing vibration almost to nil—nearer the ideal than any type we know.

Moreover this extra ability in speed and power means driving at half load in all ordinary motoring. It means absence of strain, thus much less mechanical deterioration.

How these qualities are valued by motorists is shown by Hudson's position as a sales leader among fine cars, for nearly six years.

REO

Announcing

The Reo Motor Car Company of California

(Two Direct Factory Branches)

LOS ANGELES:

Sales and Service—2200 S. Figueroa St.

This is a move of the highest importance from our standpoint and will prove highly beneficial to present Reo owners, as well as to the thousands of prospective buyers.

Having our own branch distributing houses at these two strategic points we will be enabled to give buyers of Reo automobiles and Speed Wagons that service and that value that is Reo.

Both branches open for business August First.

SAN FRANCISCO:

Salesrooms—1730-40 Van Ness Ave.

Service—Gough and Post.

You are cordially invited to call, inspect our facilities, and get acquainted.

This invitation is extended especially to present Reo owners.

Our plan is to give you such values, and to render you such service that Reo automobiles and Speed Wagons will become still better known and more generally popular in California — in a word, First Choice of Discriminating Buyers — even as Reo is elsewhere throughout the nation.

New Models—
New Prices

Here's the news you have been waiting for.

For months past the one query most often propounded in motoring circles has been, "What is Reo going to say — and when?" Here's the answer.

New Closed Models—4-passenger Coupe and 5-passenger Sedan —are now available.

New Prices on Touring and Roadster models effective August 1st.

Story is too long to tell here. 'Twould take a page to tell you about one model alone.

Besides you will have to see these new Reos to fully appreciate. Suffice to say, all Passenger Car Models have that wonderfully silent, sweet-running, amazingly powerful Reo Six Motor—the greatest motor in the world of its size and for its purpose.

In every genuine advance in automotive science — in all that makes for greater motoring satisfaction — this Six upholds Reo traditions of leadership and merits the title, "The Incomparable —the Six of Sixty Superiorities."

The epitome of Reo engineering experience — the last word in coach building.

In that mighty Reo Speed Wagon we now have something sensational to offer you.

Nobby Cord Tires all 'round and — a greatly reduced price — also effective August 1st.

This Speed Wagon dominates the Field regardless of carrying capacities. Wherever Motor Trucks are known this Speed Wagon is known as the best.

It fits every business—meets every carrying need.

Range of usefulness is practically unlimited—most versatile as well as most dependable.

Always the lowest priced commercial car of its carrying capacity, this Speed Wagon is now a better buy than ever.

When you've seen these new Reos and heard the new prices, you'll say, Reo is today, more than ever, "The Gold Standard of Values."

Come in and see and hear the whole story.

Reo Motor Car Company, Lansing, Mich.

REO BRANCHES IN CALIFORNIA.

New Places Are Opened to Handle Big Trade.

Local Plant to Make Official Appearance Tomorrow.

Byron C. Foy to be in Charge of Business Here.

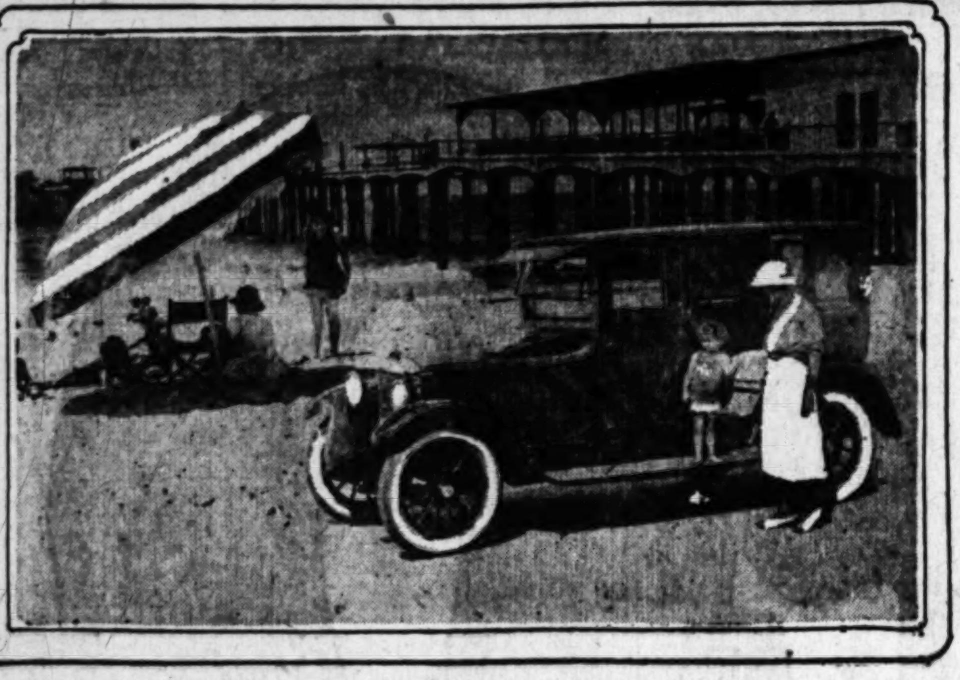
Simultaneously with the announcement of the new prices of Reo passenger cars and speed wagons came the news of the opening of two California factory branches for Los Angeles and San Francisco. Headed by P. L. Emerson, a veteran merchandiser of motor vehicles and a recent Reo factory official, the Reo Motor Car Company of California makes its official appearance Monday.

The company, as its name implies, is State-wide. All business, wholesale and retail, for Southern California, will be handled from Los Angeles. Byron C. Foy, vice-president and manager, will have active direction of the business here. A building has been leased on the corner of Figueroa and Twenty-second streets, which provides ample sales and service facilities.

A prominent location on San Francisco's automobile row 1730-1740 Van Ness avenue, and a two-story service building conveniently located near by, will serve as the central point for the Northern California and oriental business.

Foy comes to Los Angeles with a record of success in the automobile business in the East. Among other important position he has held was that of assistant manager of the Reo branch in Detroit which he left to come California.

Emerson, president and general manager of the concern, needs no introduction to the automobile trade. Prior to joining the Reo in a factory executive position, he was general sales manager of the Oldsmobile factory. He has directed the affairs of two successful, State-wide distributing organizations in the Central West.



Closed Cars Make Ideal Portable Bath-Houses.

Little Jane Baldwin finds the Saxon Duplex Sedan very handy as a dressing-room when she takes her dip in the surf. The rest of the scenery was provided by Redondo Beach.

SEDANS ARE NOT STUFFY IN SUMMER.

Erroneous Idea Prevails on Temperature Inside Closed Cars in Hot Weather.

Most all motorists are agreed that a closed car is far more comfortable in wintertime, but those who have not experienced the delights of a sedan in the summer months are inclined to the erroneous belief that they are stuffy and warm as compared with the open touring car. Such, however, is not the case, as was proven one warm afternoon last week, when Andrew Baldwin of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company had some tests made with a Saxon duplex sedan and the Saxon duplex open touring car, which won the Yosemite cup in its class in the recent economy contest.

The two cars were driven side by side and each had a thermometer placed in the same relative position in either car.

First the test was made with the thermometer in the tonneau, hanging from the robe rail. Both cars registered exactly the same. Then the instruments were suspended from the top, just over the front seat, and once more the same reading was found. The final test was made with the instruments hung at the back of the tonneau in positions where the sun could not strike them, and in that position the duplex sedan had a slightly lower reading. It was one degree cooler on the back seat of the sedan than it was in the open-type car.

Child Welfare Day Donations Are Requested.

Have you any old stockings or discarded underwear which you can contribute to a worthy cause?

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Dennis P. Kearney, a number of prominent women are busily engaged in making up a quantity of "orphan dolls" for Child Welfare Day, to be held later in the summer under the auspices of the Bureau of Catholic Charities.

The little dolls are fashioned from discarded hosiery or from silk or knit underwear and there is an urgent need for these materials, so this appeal for these articles of wear from milady's wardrobe is sent forth in behalf of the cause.

A telephone call to Mrs. Kearney, Wilshire 977, will bring a volunteer messenger to collect any donations offered, or these may be left at 505 Higgins Building.

There is also an urgent need of volunteer workers to aid in making the orphan dolls, and any women who will contribute a few hours one day each week to assisting in this work are asked to proffer their services to Mrs. Kearney at the address above given, 505 Higgins Building.

GLEN IVY RESORT. PLEASES AUTOIST.

PLAYGROUND HAS PICTURESQUE LOCATION IN THE SANTA ANA MOUNTAINS.

One of the most ideal and perhaps the most advantageous and attractive mountain resorts within close proximity to Los Angeles, is Glen Ivy Hot Springs, according to Glenn R. Keith, of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, Southern California distributors of the Standard eight.

Keith recently made a trip to the above-mentioned resort and he declares it to be an ideal spot for motorists who enjoy driving in the mountains, and especially those in search of picturesque locale for a week-end tour.

"With the Santa Ana mountains on the west, where Santiago Peak rises to an altitude of 5680 feet, the Temescal Canyon and mountains in front, and the Cold Water Canyon on the south, no other hot springs resort in Southern California enjoys a more picturesque and imposing setting," said Keith.

"A mountain stream of cold water which maintains an ice-cold temperature throughout the summer months, runs in front of the cottages," he continued. "Leading up the Cold Water Canyon is a fine foot trail of several miles breaking into a most wildly picturesque spot of beauty. On either side are banks covered with green moss and ferns, and overhead, wide, spreading trees. All the comforts of home are to be found here. In addition, recreation of any kind is also offered. There are tennis courts, a billiard hall and bowling alley and a splendid dance hall.

"Glen Ivy is ten miles south of Corona in Temescal Canyon, on the shortest inland road between Los Angeles and San Diego, via Corona."

Genuine Common Sense

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Many Ford owners can afford to own and operate any car they may choose, but they prefer a Ford "because it is a Ford."

For, "because it is a Ford" means dependability, ease of operation in traffic, ability to park in small spaces—and it means quick, sure transportation.

And "because it is a Ford" means pride of ownership, good taste and genuine Common Sense.

A Ford gives all that any car can give—plus real utility, minus extravagance.

The demand for Ford Cars of all types is greater now than ever before; yet, due to tremendously increased production it is possible to secure reasonably prompt delivery—if you act at once.

EW SPORT CAR MAKES SENSATION.

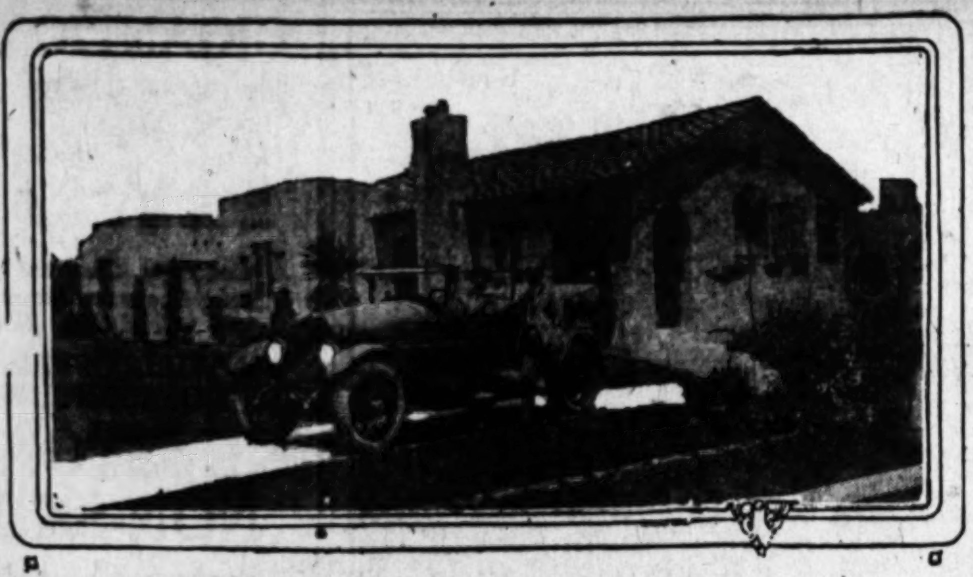
addition to cord tires on the wire wheels, a spare wheel and tire is carried on each running at the side of the hood and is a trunk rack and a trunk in ear. The color of the Lark is al and can be had in the fol- shades: Submarine blue, red, Pike's Peak gray, old-wine maroon, polo brown or canary yellow. It is a liberal four-passenger car with ample leg room and deep-cushioned seats tilted at just the angle for comfort.



What Do the Speed Hounds Do with Their Dough?

Here's Tommy Milton and Mrs. Milton in their Marmon, decorating the front of their new Beverly Hills home on Canyon Drive. Although Tommy has won many thousand dollars in Beverly Speedway contests, he invested more in the home than he won in the Coast races. It will be noted that the Sheriff is not hovering in the offing in defiance of the "dollar-down-and-dollar-when-you-catch-me" plan. Milton paid cash for his home. Bill Pickens requests St. Paul papers to copy.

CHALMERS

TRAP GUN AND ROD
BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the ninety-fourth of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

Apartment-houses minus profiteering landlords. "Hain't no such animal," you say. Give me a chance to wise you up. Those apartments were constructed and inhabited by the first families of America over 700 years ago. They are located in Montezuma county, thirty miles from Mancos, on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, in Southwestern Colorado. The homes of America's cliff dwellers.

BY COW BOYS.

These interesting ruins were discovered by two cowboys in search of cattle in 1888. Congress in 1906, created the Mesa Verde National Park, a tract of 48,966 acres, in which area is located the ruined homes of a prehistoric race. At one period, thousands of people inhabited the homes, which are now being excavated and exposed by United States government employees. They built community houses four and five stories high, housing 500 natives. Their material for construction was red sandstone and their architectural work is a marvel. They built many temples, workshops, watch towers and kivas all of which are today standing in good state of preservation, located in America's back yard, accessible and awaiting tourists' invasion. The word kiva is from the Hopi Indian language and descriptive of a place of worship.

Built of red sandstone, is a shallow well of circular form, about fifteen feet in diameter, located under or near their homes. The kiva was lighted and entered through a trapdoor in the top, by the "chicken ladder" route. This, a straight tree with limbs cut off about six inches from the body (yet showing the stone ax marks.) The kiva was their sacred chamber or assembly room, where religious rights and ceremonies were held. Every clan had a separate kiva, never entered by outsiders, an Indian custom yet extant with the Hopis.

DON'T MIX THESE.

Cave dwellers, should not be confused with cliff dwellers. Cave men reside in correls formed by erosion in the face of the cliffs. They made no effort to embellish or improve their surroundings, what nature provided they accepted. Cliff dwellers were home builders, with a much higher type of mentalization, reasoning from cause to effect, consequently enjoying many home comforts unknown to cave men. Both tribes were, no doubt, branches of the Pueblo Indians. In home construction and location, all were influenced by the same impulse. Selecting inaccessible caves in the face of precipitous cliffs. Safety first was their slogan. They were safeguarding against wild predatory animals or wandering tribes of hostile Indians. Roofs of their cave homes, projected out a distance, which made it impossible to drop a rock or boulder from above, causing damage.

Houses were built on solid rock floors of caves, hundreds of feet above the bottom of the canyons. Accessible only by narrow circuitous paths cut from the rock or shallow footholds, dug in the face of the cliffs. "Chicken ladders" or rope, made from the yucca palm, were also used in ascent, to be "pulled up" by the last one in. Mothers always knew when the daughters came in. Watch towers were located at the head of canyons, from this vantage point continous vigil was the order.

SOUND S.O.S.

When enemies were located a S.O.S. was sounded or the village was wig-wagged of approaching danger. Gathered in their community home, one energetic native, supplied with boulders, finger stones or a club, could hold at bay a regiment of assailants without firearms. Starvation, was the only chance of dislodgment.

Working under the community or equal interest plan, they were always directed by the oldest woman in the clan. Immediately following nuptial ceremonies, the husband became a coworker in the clan directed by his mother-in-law. Girl babies were at a premuim an dever welcomed by clan members. Roosevelt's theory of race reproduction was there indorsed to the limit. The addition of one more living-room to the community house for every daughter or female descendent married, makes it comparatively easy to compute a house census. Two adults allotted to every room, with scientific tables of reproduction, barring race suicide, added for natural increase and you have approximately the number of people in their community home.

Slash in Stutz Prices Bringing Genuine Results.

Business has evidently taken a stimulant of a very lasting nature, according to W. H. Court, sales manager for the Walter M. Brown Company.

"With the announcement of the reduction in price of the Stutz came a return of the old buying fever," says Court, "and today finds us in a very enviable position, completely sold out of some models and with orders booked ahead for ninety days.

"It reads like a fairy tale to boast of advanced delivery orders, but nevertheless that is a fact with us today. We were unprepared for the revival of motor-car buying that was stirred up by the price reductions, and our wits have been taxed to see that every prospect was finally satisfied.

"In spite of the very warm weather, we have had a busy month of it, and there is shown no indication of a let-up. In one day last week we sold four cars, which is something to pat yourself on the back for, when it comes to cars that sell for upwards of $3350."

NEW MEMBER OF TRUCK FAMILY GETS TO TOWN.

MODEL OF THE REPUBLIC LINE FOR LIGHT DELIVERY WORK RECEIVED BY BRANCH.

A new member of the Republic truck family has arrived. It is the model 75 rapid transit for light delivery work and the members of the Commercial Motor Company are as proud of their progeny as real papas.

"The development of the rapid transit model is the result of the nation-wide demand for a light Republic truck to complete the extensive line of these famous internal gear driven trucks," says Volney Beardsley, assistant manager of the Commercial Motor Company.

"All the outstanding points of the usual Republic truck have been retained in this newcomer. The motor is of the four-cylinder type, cast enbloc with a stroke of five inches and bore of three and one-half inches, developing sufficient power to meet every requirement. Its gear ratios are such as to give a great range of speed and power flexibility.

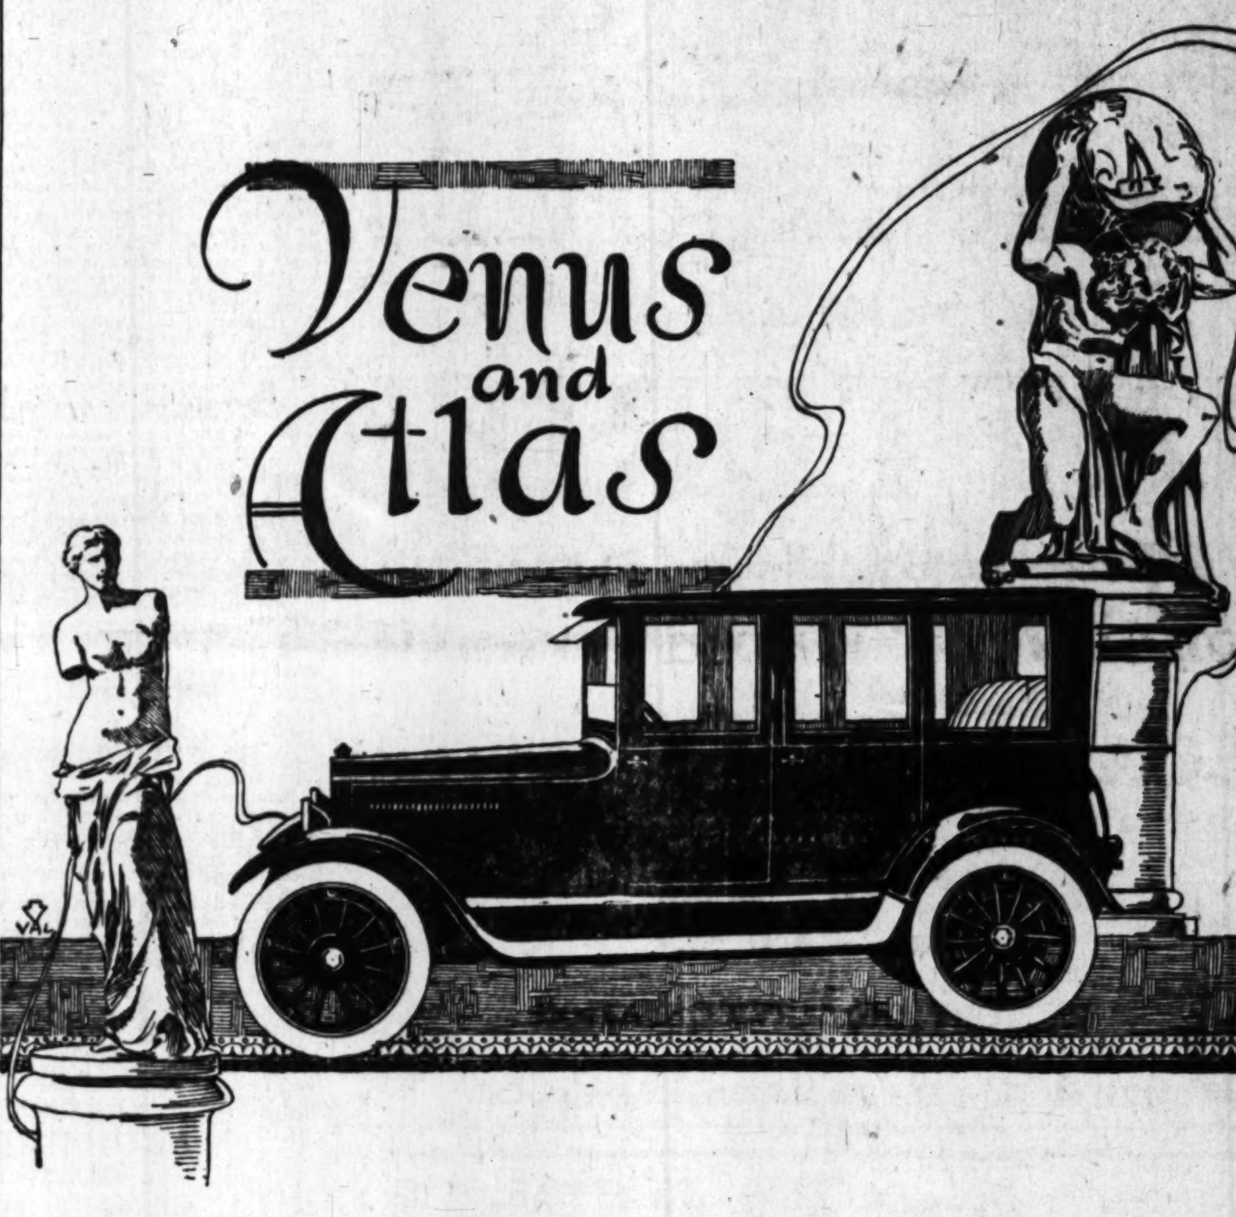
"Ample cooling for use in this country is provided by the extra large radiator and fifteen-inch fan. The cooling system is of the thermo-syphon type, with absolute freedom from wear and adjustments fo pumps and gears.

"The axles are oversize to guard against the dangers of overloading and roller bearing are used throughout. The brakes are of the usual external service and internal emergency type, but are overly large to give longer live and greater braking surface for every occasion.

"The innovation is the body equipment with which the truck comes from the factory. It is of the canopy express style with cab and adjustable ventilating rain vision windshield. Cab and canopy are completely equipped with curtains. The rapid transit Republic is delivered to the users' hands ready for the road with not extra costs other than the cost of a State license."

They're Mighty Proud of the New Addition to the Family.

A. E. Neff and V. S. Beardsley try out the recently received model 75 Rapid Transit Republic truck that has just been announced by the factory. Was it Shakespeare who said: "There's a reason for their smiles"?



BOTH men and women admire beauty as well as strength and in the Saxon Duplex Sedan can be found a combination of appealing beauty and sturdy stamina. It stands ready to be admired or runs to carry the world on its back.

The Saxon Sedan body is an excellent example of the modern coach builder's craftsmanship, for it has not only beauty and style, but comfort approaching luxury.

There is ample room, with doors high and wide enough for easy access. The deep, springy cushions banish and prevent fatigue, while the disappearing glass panels shut out the wind or rain completely yet permit of ventilation in all kinds of weather. They raise with the turn of a handle and then automatically drop into slots that seal them weather-proof.

Underneath this body is a chassis so simple that it defies age and repair shops. Under the hood is a smooth, purring motor with a steady flow of power eager enough for the open road or delicate enough for the easy drift through congested traffic.

The lubrication of the Saxon Duplex chassis is surprisingly simple. By the movement of a single lever all parts of the chassis are supplied with oil. There is not a single grease cup.

Ride with us some time on a real test trip. Learn for yourself the surprisingly comfortable coolness of these August days. Feel the gliding motion of the car even on the rougher roads. Watch it loaf along Broadway without a change of gears and then note the snappy pick-up when the throttle is pressed down quickly.

We invite you to take such a ride. A telephone call will bring the car to your door for an hour of motoring enjoyment.

AUTO PLANT FASCINATING.

Huge Investment and Working Force Used to Construct Modern Car.

Of interest to every automobile owner is the story of the construction of the car he drives. Few motorists realize the infinite care which attends the construction of every motor car or the immense financial investment that is behind the better known and more standard makes of automobiles.

Take the case of the Maxwell factory for instance. The value of the plant and the current working capital behind the big Detroit automobile plant is approximately $50,000,000. And the cash requirements per week are over $1,500,000.

Believing that the facts relative to the big plants of the Maxwell company of Detroit would be of interest to the general California motoring public, George Pearson, manager of sales for the Union Motors Company, distributors in Southern California of the good Maxwell, has gathered some interesting facts on this subject through the courtesy of factory officials which are presented herewith.

"Take the new Maxwell sheet metal plant, recently completed and put into operation. It alone is a fine testimonial to the progressive character of the new and powerful Maxwell organization," says Pearson.

"The building was erected at a cost of $1,250,000 and is one of the most up-to-date, if not the best, of its kind in the country today. It occupies about 217,000 square feet of floor space and is equipped with two ten-ton electric cranes, by means of which material in any part of the building may be handled.

"Each craneway is 800 feet long, with a span of sixty feet, and contains two rows of huge presses. The freight from cars spotted on a track that runs into the building, is placed on the floor as stock. From there, as needed, it is picked up by the cranes and delivered to the proper machines.

"The sequence of processes along these rows of machines is the utmost of efficiency. The presses are placed so closely together and in such a way that truckers or extra men to act as 'go-betweens' are done away with altogether and the time required for the processes is cut down as well.

"It has also been arranged so that each piece is inspected as it goes along, instead of being finished and then sent to some other part of the factory for inspection."

SPECIALIZES IN CORD PNEUMATICS.

The "House of Cords" is the name that can now be very appropriately applied to the tire establishment of Leon S. Utter at the corner of Eighth and Figueroa streets. As distributor of Midco and California cord products, Mr. Utter occupies the unique position of being the only dealer in Los Angeles specializing in cord pneumatics alone.

For a long time Mr. Utter was well known as distributor for the Midco products only. But until just recently these high-grade pneumatics were sold in both cord and fabric grades. Then a few weeks ago Mr. Utter became local distribution representative for the new California Cord Tire Company, a concern specializing in quality cords exclusively. On top of that has come the announcement by the Midcontinental Tire Company that that factory has ceased producing fabric tires. This gave Mr. Utter the opportunity he intimates he had been preparing for, of becoming Los Angeles' first proprietor of a "house of cords."

NEW ROAD TO HIGH SIERRAS.

same name,) the United States government, which, it was expected, would share in the cost of construction, made the survey only as its contribution to the improvement. The actual cost of building the road is borne by Tulare county, the domain of which embraces much of the scenic grandeur of the High Sierras.

Principal access to this portion of the mountains is had now by trail from the forks of the Tule River to Camp Nelson. In the summer season trains of pack-animals make the round trip daily with supplies and the luggage of campers, who travel on saddle-horses.

WHEN IS SPEED COP MOSTLY OTHERWISE?

Here's the latest riddle for motor fans to figure out!

When is a "speed cop" not a "speed cop?"

"The answer to this question," declares Jack Bennel, western division factory representative of the Haynes Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind., who has recently arrived here from a tour of the Northwest territory, "is to be found in an action just taken by the State of Washington. Highways in the Northwestern State will be patrolled regularly after August 1, by twenty-five men, who will travel on motorcycles, but who will not be known as 'speed cops.'

"Their organization is to be known as the highway protection force, and their duty will be to prevent the misuse of the roads, and to enforce highway rules adopted by recent Washington State legislation. One of their very important duties will be to report sections of roads in need of repair."

Miss Olive Ann Alcorn, the girl who has been pronounced by members of Laguna Beach artists's colony as the most perfectly formed California woman, is seen here stepping from the Liberty Six Sedan she used last week in a trip to Laguna Beach. Neither Miss Alcorn nor the car appear to be ruffled over the completion of a 125-mile trip.

"BILLS" TOUR THE COAST.

W. M. (Wild Bill) Thompson of Tacoma, Wash., was among the visitors to Los Angeles during the Elks' convention. Everyone who has lived in Tacoma any length of time knows W. M. Thompson, who sells a certain well-known make of small cars which are frequently designated as "flivvers." When Mr. Thompson come to Los Angeles, however, he was driving his third Chandler.

On Sunday, July 3, the aforesaid Chandler was lying in the ditch upside-down, where one of Bill's friends had accidentally placed it while traveling a little too fast around a curve. Tuesday, the 5th, Bill got his gang out and brought it into Tacoma. It was necessary to put a new top on it, straighten the windshield and do some other work. By Thursday morning at 5 a.m., Mr. Thompson, with some other "Bills" pulled out of Tacoma. They stopped and cooked their own lunch and dinner and at 11 p.m. camped at Grant's Pass. Leaving Grant's Pass at 7 a.m., they made Woodland the second day. Leaving Woodland at 7 a.m. the third morning, they reached Los Angeles at 9 p.m. that night. The total elapsed time was sixty-four hours. The actual running time was 33 hours and 25 minutes.

Mr. Thompson says the roads in Oregon are in bad condition now, because of construction work in practically every part of the State, which causes bad detours. When the Pacific highway is finished, however, within the next year or so, it will be a wonderful road.

Mr. Thompson commented upon the splendid performance of the Chandler car, saying he drove the entire distance in high gear and without the least symptom of trouble. The total distance covered according to his speedometer was 1425 miles.

BEAUTY AND STRENGTH.

The proverb that "beauty is only skin deep" may apply to the human, but to the automobile, it goes for naught, for the average motor car prospect demands more than this before the actual purchase is effected, declares J. W. Gaffney, distributor of the DuPont four.

Discussing the beauty feature of the DuPont, Mr. Gaffney stated:

"The quality of DuPont bodies is unusual to find in the 'production care' of the quality used on DuPont cars. Equal quality has heretofore been available only in the better class of custom bodies. DuPont bodies, both opened and closed, are built from seasoned ash covered with aluminum. They are hand-made bodies throughout.

"Aluminum bodies possess several advantages as against the sheet steel construction ordinarily used. Aluminum bodies are lighter; they take and hold paint better, and they are free from the body squeaks and rattles, which develop in steel bodies. Our open bodies are built to our specifications and under our factory supervision and the upholstery is done in our own shop at Moore, Pa. Upholstery materials are the finest grades of leather fabric and trimmings throughout.

"DuPont windshields, both post and sash, are bronzed and insure against rust as the car ages. For the same reason, brass tacks instead of steel tacks are used in DuPont tops."

Little Susy at Church.

Little Susy was taken to church by her mother for the first time. During the long sermon the child grew more and more fidgety, and kept wriggling about. Finally she became very greatly interested in a small tear in her dress and, after looking at this absorbedly for a little while, she jumped to her feet on the seat and, to the great mortification of her mother, cried out:

"Has anybody in this crowd got a pin?"—[Unidentified.

Perfect Girl Likes Riding in a Liberty.

"The most beautiful girl in the world."

So say the members of the artists' colony at Laguna Beach, and who can deny them the right to pass on such a question?

Miss Olive Ann Alcorn, motion-picture actress, who has been appearing at Graumann's Rialto during the past week and giving demonstrations to women on dancing and exercise calculated to develop physical symmetry and grace, visited Laguna last week and a dozen motion-picture cameras were right on the job. They filmed Miss Alcorn in various poses preparatory to sending the reels out all over the land so the world as well may pass its judgment.

Miss Alcorn made the trip from the Rialto, at Eighth and Broadway, to Laguna and return just as a mornin's outing. Leaving the theater at seven in the morning in a Liberty six sedan, loaned for the purpose by the McKelvey Motor Sales Company, distributors of the car, Miss Alcorn made the trip to the beach, posed for the photographers in various costumes, and then returned to the city, reaching here before 1 o'clock in order to be ready when her turn came to appear on the stage at the afternoon performance. The entire distance of more than 125 miles was covered in perfect comfort and yet at a speed that would satisfy the most exacting.

The dancer already has made a name for herself as a dancer of note, and in addition to her terpsichorean ability has played the leading role in one screen production, opposite Henry B. Walthal.

Motorists Are Stampeding to Tioga Highway.

With the announcement that the famous Tioga Road, which links the Yosemite Valley with Lake Tahoe, is now officially opened throngs of Southern California motorists are leaving here daily.

The Tioga Road is one of the few highways in the world which surmount the crest of a mountain range. As it climbs the Sierra Nevadas, it affords one of the most spectacular mountain trips available to the motoring public. Originally built as a private road to reach an old mining claim, the Tioga Road was purchased and presented to the Yosemite National Park by a group of public spirited men. Their object was to afford access to the back country of Yosemite, which had been neglected because of poor travel conditions.

The famous mountain roadway ascends to an altitude of 9941 feet at the Tioga pass, passing through the beautiful Levining Canyon and the historically famous Carson Valley. It is built broad, with easy grades, and is easily traversed by any make of car. Comfortable hotel accommodations are available en route. At the Yosemite end of the journey, many of the motorists are making their headquarters at Camp Curry, where plenty of room is now to be had.

With the Yosemite Valley in its full bloom, its waterfalls still in excellent condition, and its temperature never above 80 deg., this trip affords the motorist one of the most wonderful journeys to be had anywhere in the West.

HAS OWNED EVERY CHALMERS MODEL.

BUYS HIS SIXTH MACHINE AND WOULDN'T TRY ANY OTHER TYPE OF MOTOR CAR.

When Benjamin R. Kaplan, a member of one of the city's well-known manufacturing firms took delivery last week of a Chalmers sedan, the occasion marked the purchase by himself of his sixth Chalmers. Since 1910, there have been six models of this well-known car, and beginning in that year, Kaplan has owned every one, he informed R. O. Gould, retail Chalmers sales manager for the Greer-Robbins Company, Chalmers distributors for Southern California.

"I believe my record will show that I am a confirmed Chalmers booster," stated Kaplan. "When you have owned every model that a company has produced, it is conclusive evidence that you are thoroughly satisfied with its product. In that time if there were any faults in its construction, one would find them out."

Rugged Points of Interest in the Great Yosemite.

Lynn C. Buxton and his family made a trip over Tioga Pass from Yosemite in his Stearns-Knight ten days before the official opening of the road. Some of the inspiring bits of scenery encountered on the trip are shown above. The return trip to Los Angeles was made via Lake Tahoe, Sacramento and San Francisco. Buxton is the local Stearns-Knight distributor.

RARE TIME JUGGLER ON EXHIBITION.

French Revolutionary Era Watch With Four Dials is Owned by Local Jeweler.

Puzzled inhabitants of daylight-saving communities who find themselves unable to settle the question of whether they are one hour ahead or one hour behind time can take a hint from Jean Gaillard, watchmaker of the French Revolutionary era. Back in 1793 the Paris Convention passed a law providing for the decimal subdivision of time, that makes modern attempts to juggle around the hours look conservative in comparison. By this law day and night were divided into twenty hours and each of these French Revolutionary hours was split up into a hundred Jacobin minutes.

Consequently the Parisian commuter of the year 1793 often found himself hard put to it to find out what the time tables of those revolutionary days meant when it scheduled the 5:15's departure at 3:75. Gaillard, then a watchmaker in Rouen, attempted to clear up some of the time-telling difficulties of the French, by producing a watch that would give out both varieties of time. The upper dial registered the twenty-hour system and the lower ticked off the familiar twenty-four per day. He put in another dial on the left that counted off the thirty days of the month and still another on the right that tabulated the ten months of the year. Equipped with such a timepiece, the eighteenth century Parisian could count on making the right connections and getting home before the filet mignon had gone cold on him.

E. H. Sandstrom, 401 South Hill street, has one of these rare old watches. It is solid gold and is so large and heavy that it might pass for a concealed weapon if carried in the pocket nowadays. Sandstrom has put it on display in the window of his jewelry store as a reminder of what we might have had if the daylight-saving days had lasted.

CLAIM LAW WOULD BE HARDSHIP.

Truck Owners Very Much Opposed to Speedometer Proposition.

The proposed city ordinance requiring speedometers on all motor vehicles capable of being driven fifteen miles an hour or faster is meeting with serious resistance. After having been passed, the measure was vetoed by the Mayor and it will come before the Council again soon to determine whether or not that body wishes to override the veto.

Advocating the passage of the ordinance are the City Prosecutor and ten dealers. Opposing it are the Motor Car Dealers' Association, the Draymen's Association, the Automobile Club and thousands of vehicle owners who would be affected.

According to a representative of the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation, distributors of Mack trucks, probably the first to oppose, City Prosecutor Widney takes the position that with the requirement of speedometers it is possible speeding might be curtailed. He explains that defendants frequently cite as an excuse for speeding that their vehicle did not have a speedometer and they did not know how fast they were traveling. Mr. Widney has expressed the opinion that the ordinance would help in the administration of justice.

"Any movement that would successfully prevent speeding should be encouraged," said the representative of Mack trucks. "Speedometers will not prevent speeding, however. Cars that are equipped with the instruments are those most capable of high speeds. No one ever heard of a speedometer stopping a car or preventing its operation in violation of the law. If the officers cannot get convictions for speeding on the plea that cars were not equipped with speedometers, it does not follow that the presence of a speedometer would assure conviction. Truck owners are opposing the ordinance because the use of speedometers is impractical. The instruments fall off or are made inaccurate by the vibration of the vehicle. Many operators who have tried them say they are absolutely worthless. The ordinance would require that the speedometer be 'accurate.' It is physically impossible to keep the instruments accurate on trucks. When the speedometer is installed on a truck equipped with new tires it might register correctly. These tires are three inches or more thick when new and when worn down registration cannot possibly be the same as when new. Such large fleet owners as the Bekins Storage Company, Lyons Warehouse Company, the Southern California Edison Company and others have experimented with speedometers on their trucks and found them inefficient."

MAKES SECOND-STREET HILL IN SECOND GEAR.

FROM A STANDING START THE TEMPLAR HANGS UP MARK ALL CAN SHOOT AT.

The Second-street incline between Hope and Bunker Hill streets has proven to be a stumbling block to many an ambitious driver and his car, but last Tuesday a Templar roadster driven by Leland S. Foulke, president of the Boulevard Motors Corporation, set a mark for others to shoot at. The tests were made under newspaper supervision as well as numerous spectators.

The incline which is about 125 feet long and paved with cobblestones has a 26 per cent grade, according to the City Engineer's office. Hope street running north and south at its foot is paved with asphalt, but Second street between Hope and Flower is unpaved and very rough. With a running start at Flower it is not such a difficult feat to surmount the incline on high gear. With two passengers and going at 25 miles an hour at the foot of the incline, the Templar topped it on high at 15 miles an hour. But the real test is to start at the Hope-street paving and make the grade in second gear. The run for the hill is confined to the width of Hope street.

The Templar first made the ascent easily with two passengers and then with four. Encouraged to this extent, Foulke loaded down the Templar with six people, including himself at the wheel, and topped the grade in second. Then starting from the cobblestone line on the east side of Hope and directly at the foot of the incline, he topped the grade with two passengers, also in second gear.

What of the Company Building the Marmon 34?

ON MAY 2nd Nordyke & Marmon Company turned the tide of automobile prices.

On that day it announced a reduction of over $1000, offering for $3985 the identical $5000 model. You know what followed—the hurried reductions throughout the industry.

This leadership in price reduction has brought considerable interest in Nordyke & Marmon Company and its executives.

The concern was founded in 1851 and is controlled by the second generation of one of the original founders.

The factory is situated in Indianapolis, where it occupies 66 acres and utilizes over 1,500,000 feet of floor space.

A Prize Factory

It is one of the most famous industrial institutions of the country. It won the signal honor, during the war, of leadership in aircraft, motor building, and was awarded the championship pennant by the Government.

Nordyke & Marmon Company is a pioneer in the building of fine automobiles. It was among the first to offer exclusive cars for the better class of trade, and among its first models were touring cars priced at $3000. As this was 16 years ago, it is an interesting commentary to note that today's price is but slightly over the 1905 quotation.

The Marmon 34 has always been closely priced — the limit in quality for the fairest price possible under existing production costs.

Never Better Service

Recent changes in personnel, together with closer supervision of factory executives, brings to Marmon owners in Los Angeles and vicinity the utmost in friendly and expert service.

Mr. Tom Roberts, who won great success as a distributor of the Marmon 34 in Colorado, is now manager in Los Angeles.

Nordyke & Marmon Company invite you to inspect the Marmon 34 and become acquainted with all that you can obtain for $3985. Mr. Roberts will be glad to arrange for a demonstration, so that you can make comparisons.

The Mo-lyb-den-um Car

No. 5—The Motor Fan Release

WHEN the motor fan reaches the speed necessary properly to perform its cooling function, the fan clutch is automatically released and a large saving in horse power is achieved. Tests show that the ordinary motor fan uses 6 to 8 horse power when operating at high speed.

The Wills Sainte Claire self releasing fan cannot use more than 2 horse power.

Next week we will explain what makes Wills Sainte Claire gears so smooth and silent in operation.

In the meantime we invite you to see the car itself—Ride in it—Drive it. You'll find it its own best spokesman.

NOTES AND PROBLEMS.

LICATIONS IN THE REALM OF CHECKERS.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

The annual outing of the Ohio Checker Association will be at Cedar Point during the of August 7 to 14. N. W. will be on hand and give several blindfold exhibitions.

Alfred Jordan and Louis Ginsberg have just completed a thirty-game subscription match at the Side Checker Club in Chicago. The final score is not yet to hand, but at the end of ten games the score was a win each and eight draws. F. R. Wendemuth, in his column in the Chicago Daily News, says: "Both players have sprung cooks and the win scored by Ginsberg in the eighth game of the match was the result of a cook on the black side of 10-15, 24-19, which his opponent failed to meet properly. Jordan scored with the black side of 10-14, 22-18."

The following is by Preston and is taken from his column in the Milwaukee Sentinel: "We asked one of our foreign correspondents for his opinion on the probable outcome of the Banks-Stewart match and his reply is interesting. He says that while there is no doubt Banks is a brilliant player, it is almost impossible to get a line on the Scotch players. Those who are in his class with Stewart and Ferrie never publish anything. They examine everything that appears in print and try to improve on everything they see. They keep all their play to themselves for use in their matches. Some of them are railway linemen in and out of the way stations with little work to do and spend practically their entire time over the board. Banks has a man-sized job ahead of him."

Reyburn, who is now located in Long Beach, was a visitor at the rooms Saturday evening and Sunday.

YOSEMITE PARK IS CAPTIVATING.

Los Angeles Man Lauds the Wonders of Valley.

Resort is More Fascinating Than Ever Before.

Abundance of Water Adds to Beauty of Falls.

Vacationists returning from the Yosemite Valley within the last few days report an unusual amount of water in all the streams making the hundreds of waterfalls throughout the valley more beautiful this year than ever before. Even the falls far down the valley near El Portal are carrying as much water now as they usually do early in June.

Mack A. Erwin, local manager for Camp Curry, who has just returned from a visit in the Yosemite says: "I have visited the Yosemite Valley several times a year for almost a decade and yet this visit in July showed me the beauties of the park in greater array than ever before. Never have I seen so much water in the streams at this time of the year. Usually the smaller falls become mere ribbons by the last of July, but exceptionally heavy snows and rains late in the spring have stored up a tremendous supply of water to feed these streams and falls. I fully believe that there will be plenty of water flowing over all the falls well up into the fall, even to the end of the season.

"Going into the valley by way of El Portal this time I found the Cascade Falls, Widow's Tears and the Bridal Veil in unusually fine shape. Farther up in the main valley the Yosemite, Vernal and Nevada Falls seem to have fully as much water as I have usually seen around the first of June.

"I also found the valley comfortably filled with tourists, but not crowded. There seems to have been a reaction from the Fourth of July jam and the temporary embargo placed upon the valley by Superintendent Lewis. While that embargo was removed within a few days, motorists, in many cases, are laboring under a misunderstanding of the situation, fearing that they would be unable to obtain accommodations of any kind. That is far from being the case, however, and even on week-ends when the valley is most crowded, good reservations can usually be made on very short notice."

PILOTS ARE GATHERING AT COTATI.

Three Duesenbergs Arrive in Company With Leach for Opening Event.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PETALUMA, July 30.—Four racing motor cars, accompanied by their mechanicians, have already put in an appearance at the North Bay Counties Speedway at Cotati, half way between Santa Rosa and Petaluma. Three Duesenbergs are on the job, together with a Leach car.

A Studebaker car furnished by the Chester N. Weaver Company, Northern California distributor, made the trip to the track last week, inspecting it, and testing out the surfaces already completed. The members in the party reported great satisfaction over the results of the examination.

From a general survey of things, action is to be the watch word at Cotati from now on. The eliminations, which are to be held on July 31, will start the ball rolling with the big 150-mile race definitely set for August 14. This will not end activities at Cotati, however, for the North Bay County Fair will be staged August 24 to 28. Special horse racing events are to be held then, as a one-mile dirt track has been laid out inside the big racing saucer.

An official of the North Bay County Speedway is in daily receipt of demands for seat reservations and all plans are now laid for entertaining a record crowd. Special arrangements for adequate boat service is being arranged by the Northwestern Pacific, Richmond and San Rafael Ferry Company and the Six-Minute Ferry.

DRIVES HUP IN JUNGLES OF AFRICA.

Scientist Gives Car Much Rough Treatment During Service in Wilderness.

"A car that is used in the far corners of the earth, usually receives severe treatment and it is also usually the case that news of its performance very seldom filters through to civilization," said Billy Williams, retail Hupmobile salesmanager for the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors in California and Arizona. "Recently the Hupp factory received a letter from F. A. Donnithorne, a member of the Royal Geographical Society of London, well known as a scientist and an explorer, covering some of his travels in the heart of Africa. That part of his communication covering his experiences with a Hupmobile, reads as follows:

"'I've been traveling through South and Central Africa in the interest of science for several months. During my jaunts I've had many unique and wonderful experiences. There are a number of Hupmobile cars in this wild country, and it has been my pleasure and my good luck, to be touring in one of your cars.

"'I'm going to admit that in all my experiences with motor cars, I have never seen or heard of any car doing what it was my experience on many occasions, to see the Hupmobile do. In one case, we were going through a flooded river, wi four passengers and 1350 pounds of luggage when the water began to cover the floor of the car and affect the electrical system. The driver then did a thing I have never heard of before—he got into the water, took out the spark plugs (thus removing compression,) put the car in gear, and cranking the car by hand, he moved the car and its contents right through the river to dry land.'"

MOST GOLFERS ARE AUTOISTS.

Possible to Use Variety of Links in This Way.

New Map Shows Proximity of Courses to Highway.

It is safe to say that most all of Southern California's army of golf enthusiasts — conservatively estimated at thirty-five thousand—own motor cars. In fact, the rapid increase in motor cars as a means of transportation with the consequent growth of our good-roads system has been largely responsible for the rapid spread of interest in this greatest of games.

After playing eighteen holes on one course in the morning, the golfer may drive out a few miles and play another eighteen holes in the afternoon on the links of some other club. Many players have adopted the plan of trying out several courses before deciding on permanent home links.

The great need in Southern California has been a map and guide to indicate to the golf motorist the shortest roads to the various links and also to give him some definite information concerning the various courses.

Mr. W. P. Herbert of the W. P. Herbert Company has just met this need by issuing a splendid map showing the location with relation to highways of every club in Southern California. A table just above the map gives the distance from Los Angeles to each of these clubs. On the reverse side of the map is a guide which gives the location of each club, length of the course in yards; number of holes; par for the course, name of the professional, and whether grass or sand greens.

Beautiful half-tones of twenty-four of the most important clubhouses complete the most attractive combination golf map and guide issued in the country. The maps are being distributed gratis at the W. P. Herbert Company's showroom, Eleventh and Flower streets.

AUTO HAS BECOME FAMILY NECESSITY.

"The automobile has become more of a personal utility than most people realize," says Gilbert Woodill, Pacific Coast representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company.

"In fact, the varied uses to which the family car is put really make it a basic utility. This was proven by a recent investigation which showed that families, when economizing, held and cherished the automobile often as the remaining means of recreation in addition to its utility as used in transportation."

Hupmobile

Hupmobile owners say "A Hupp is just going good when it has turned 10,000 miles." It is true that a two-year-old Hupmobile is just as easy to care for, performs just as well, costs just as little to keep up, and is just as faithful as when new.

It is not uncommon for a Hupmobile to pass on to a third and even a fourth owner—a faithful tireless veteran that takes no count of the miles. It is our experience that Hupmobile owners are in universal accord that they have the best car of its class in the world.

Homer Atterbury

Homer Atterbury and C. E. (Eddie) Kemper have been chosen to deal out the rut hoppers in a new location on Western avenue. Atterbury was formerly associated with the Fahy-Atterbury Company, as was Kemper.

City's Growth Inspires Site for New Firm.

Anyone who has lived in Los Angeles for even two or three years will have noticed the remarkable growth of the city as a whole.

Perhaps the section where more residences have been built and where more people have moved in is the locality stretching from Vermont avenue west to the Los Angeles High School, and from Washington street north to Hollywood Boulevard.

With these people moving into homes, and all for the most part owning machines, of which a good majority are Ford cars, the Ford Motor Company of Los Angeles decided that an ideal location for a dealer would be somewhere in the middle of this territory.

The location selected was 267 South Western avenue. Ford owners in this district will now enjoy within easy reach the best possible and quickest Ford service from an authorized dealer. Mr. Homer Atterbury and C. E. (Eddie) Kemper were chosen the dealers for this new agency. The firm will be known as Atterbury-Kemper Company.

Mr. Atterbury was formerly assistant manager of the Fahy-Atterbury Company from the time that agency was first formed some five years ago. Mr. Kemper has for the past nine years been identified with the Ford Motor Company in Los Angeles and Pasadena. For the last five years he has been service manager of the Fahy-Atterbury Company.

LONG LIFE DUE TO FREQUENT OILING.

D. R. McBRYDE SAYS COMMERCIAL CARS ARE LUBRICATED WHEN NEEDED.

Trucks, taxicabs and passenger busses appear to have a longer life than the ordinary passenger cars operated by private owners and yet there is no difference in the quality of their construction. Many instances of passenger stages running 200,000 and even 300,000 miles are recorded and there are many trucks operating on the roads every day that are from eight to ten years old and that have carried big loads for 100,000 miles.

This difference in their long service, as compared with the privately-operated touring car or roadster, is ascribed by D. R. McBryde of the McBryde Lubricating System to the better care and attention that the commercial vehicles receive. Many of the trucks belong to fleets and after the day's work they go into their service station where they are carefully inspected and thoroughly oiled and greased. The same methods are used by the taxicab and passenger stage companies but the private driver oils when he has a spare hour or only after a squeak develops or a rattle indicates excessive wear of some spring shackle bolt.

McBryde claims that more cars go to the junk man because they lack lubrication than for any other one cause and that if a car is properly lubricated at all times there is practically no wear-out to the mechanism.

It has been his experience with cars that have been put on the oiling racks at the numerous McBryde stations that spring shackle bolts get less attention than any other part of the chassis on account of their inaccessibility.

Ruth Roland Tells How To Instantly Have a Beautiful Rosy-White Complexion

New York—The beautiful young actress, Miss Ruth Roland, now successfully starring in that splendid serial, "The Adventures of Ruth," is famous for her beautiful complexion. When her friends inquired about it she said "It's all due to a toilet preparation called derwillo which I use twice daily. The experience I have had prompts me to make my secret public. This wonderful derwillo instantly beautified my skin and its continued use has made the result permanent." When Mae Edna Wilder, the well known beauty specialist, was interviewed in reference to Miss Roland's remarkable complexion, she stated, "Anyone can have a beautiful complexion when they know how. It's a very simple process. I use the same article in my work, and until you try it you have no idea of the marvelous results. The very first application will astonish you. Go to the toilet counter of any drug or department store and get a bottle of derwillo, then make the following test: Examine your skin critically before your mirror, note carefully its appearance, then cleanse your skin with a good cold cream (Liska Cold Cream I have found to be the best,) then apply derwillo as directed. After you have made the first application look in your mirror again and note the surprising change. A peach-like color mounts the cheeks; a baby softness comes to the skin; it skin rosy-white, velvety and beautiful. It is wonderful for sallow skin, shiny nose, freckles, skin, coarse pores, pimples, chapped, rough skin, and many other facial blemishes that short sleeves are in want beautiful hands and is nothing like derwillo for the Derwillo method is absolutely and will not produce or growth of hair. It is superior to powder, as perspiration does not it, therefore it stays on hundred thousand who have used had the same results as and I am sure if you will give it a trial you will become just as tic as she is and always use it erence to any other powder or fier."

To Messrs. Howard and Smith,
P. O. Box 484,
Los Angeles, California.

Dear Sirs—

I am extremely happy to be able to announce to you that the Gold Medal of the Concourse of Bagatelle of this year has been awarded to one of your roses. These new varieties arrived at Bagatelle in 1919, but in a very bad state, owing to a voyage much too long. On account of this situation, the Jury of last year decided to hold them for the Concourse of this year. It is the Rose 252 (Miss Lolita Armour.)

We have had the pleasure of having in our Jury, two of your countrymen, whom I think, are among your friends, Mr. Samuel Pennock and Mr. M. E. Moon. We should have been greatly annoyed not to have seen in our Jury, representatives of your country, for which, you know in France, we have so much sympathy.

Again, I ask you, my dear sir, to advise me as to the names of the new varieties which you have sent us and which are always exhibited at Bagatelle, in the Roseraie. If the opportunities of travel should offer me the pleasure of visiting America, I should be very happy indeed to see you again and to present to you personally the congratulations which this letter will bring you.

We have asked Mr. Pennock to have the kindness to cable you the result of the Concourse.

Very sincerely and cordially yours,

Le Conservateur,
J. C. N. Forestier.

TO OUR FRIENDS:

There is held each year in the Bagatelle Gardens, Bois de Boulogne Park, Paris France, international trials under the auspices of the French government, of various new seedling roses. There is one rose selected from the many exhibited, which is awarded a Premier gold medal, the highest award obtainable in the rose world. Three times has an American rose won this coveted trophy, and we are proud of the honor which twice has brought it to California through our famous roses, LOS ANGELES and MISS LOLITA ARMOUR.

The Adventures of Men Who Go to Sea.

BY EDWIN TARRISSE

THERE is now living at Honolulu, in the Hawaiian Islands, a retired sea captain, Hodson by name, who once had a most remarkable adventure while in command of a schooner trading in the Pacific.

Now, on this occasion, the vessel was several days out from land in the midst of the ocean, when it was overtaken by a severe gale and thick weather. Capt. Hodson endeavored for a time to keep the craft's head up into the wind, but soon found, in that violent storm, that there was nothing for him to do but to run before the gale. So he brought his ship about, and, pursued by a heavy following sea, scudded under almost bare poles to the northward. The captain himself stood by the wheel, to give the helmsman directions; the crew, having made everything as secure as possible, were crouched in the lee of the deckhouse.

A flaw in the wind took the schooner aback for a moment, and in that moment a tremendous wave that was following close behind mounted over the bulwarks and swept several feet deep from stern to bow. Everybody but the captain had something at hand to cling to, although the wave wrenched the man at the wheel from his hold, and threw him upon his face. However, he brought up against the deckhouse, and scrambled to his feet just in time to see the rushing water carry Capt. Hodson overboard.

Now Hodson's case was as nearly hopeless as it could well be, for it was, of course, quite impossible to put out a boat in such a sea as that, or even to bring the schooner about to pick him up. But at the very moment that the accident happened the ropes that held the gaff of the foremast in place broke, and let the mast drop to the deck. One end hung over the side of the schooner, and several broken ropes dangled from it. As Capt. Hodson swept by, these rope ends struck him on the head. Instinctively he seized one of them, and clung to it with desperation.

The ship tore on through the water, and her master, at the end of the dangling rope, was drawn in close under her bulwarks and dragged along through the waves. He could not have long withstood this sort of treatment, for the sea beat him about fiercely, and flung him again and again against the side of the vessel.

But presently a gust of wind lurched the schooner well over; her lee rail plunged beneath the water; and at the same moment another wave picked the captain up and tossed him sprawling on the sloping deck. Battered as he was he had strength enough left to seize the standing rigging and cling to it while the water poured back again into the sea.

The helmsman had seen the captain swept away to death as he firmly believed, and his astonishment at seeing him back on deck again may be imagined. Hodson was not seriously injured by his experience, and his vessel weathered the storm, and brought her cargo safe into port.

An English mariner once told how a sudden squall was the means of delivering his ship from what looked like sure loss. He was in the Indian Ocean, in time of war, and was chased by enemy's frigates. They kept after him until nightfall, and then were so near that they continually kept him in sight, despite all his maneuvers to escape. At daylight he gave up hope. The wind had dropped, and a gun was fired across his bows as a hint to him to haul down his colors.

The chief mate, an excellent seaman, had been gazing at the horizon, and now remarked, "I wish that squall would come on," and asked if he might hoist the topmast steering sail.

The captain in his anxiety had not noticed, as he should have done, the particular appearance of the sky, which now became apparent with the breaking of the day, and indicated wind; but his attention being thus drawn to it, he saw at once that there was a squall gathering, and that if it only headed his way he might escape.

He at once complied with the chief mate's request, and just as the crew were engaged in carrying out the orders the squall rushed upon them, and in a moment they were enveloped in a thick atmosphere and blinding rain.

The captain now determined upon a maneuver which would, he felt certain, save him if he could carry it out. Knowing that the squall must have struck the enemy's ships at the same time it did his, and feeling sure that they would run before it, the captain ordered his helm to be put hard down, and steered directly for the quarter where his vessel had last seen the enemy, keeping the wind full on the beam, although the force of it sent him heeling bulwarks under.

His officers became alarmed for the masts, but he knew them to be good, and carried on at all risks. By the course he steered he must have passed astern of the enemy's vessels at a very short distance, yet entirely hidden from their sight by the thickness of the atmosphere.

It was impossible to predict how long the squall would last. If it blew over soon it might leave the Englishman in sight of the enemy, who, with the whole day before them, would certainly be able to capture him. He therefore determined to make the most of it while it held out, and he carried on without taking in a single sail.

It was an exciting time. The captain's ship, which had never before made more than nine knots, was now going upward of twelve, while the captain stood on the weather side of the poop, his eyes fixed on the straining masts, from which he saw sail after sail blown away.

When the squall was over he had lost most of his sails, two boats—and the enemy.

The captain of a large coal barge, on a voyage around the coast, had taken with him his wife and two little daughters. While they were below, the vessel was capsized in a sudden squall, and those on deck were swept away and drowned. On the following day the barge, floating bottom upwards, was observed by the crew of a passing steamer, who, in anticipation of salvage, attached a rope to the wreck and towed her into the harbor at Hull.

None, of course, dreamed that any living being remained on board, but after some time had alapsed, a man who was looking at the barge heard a faint sound of knocking from within. The vessel was still upside down. A hole was made in the hull as speedily as possible, and the poor woman and her children, fearfully exhausted, were taken out. When the barge had been overturned and partly filled with water, a small space of air had still been left; the woman's head came just above the water line, and for many hours of intense suffering she had been supporting her clinging children as best she could.

One of the most dramatic and thrilling of the episodes of the World War was the escape of a boatload of British seamen from a German cruiser in the naval battle off Heilgoland. The British steamship Defender, having sunk a German craft, lowered a whaler to pick up the swimming survivors. Before the task had been completed, a German cruiser came up and chased the Defender, which thus had to abandon its small craft.

The men in the whaler were in a sad plight. Without food or water, in an open boat, twenty-five miles from land and that land a hostile one, with nothing but fog and foes surrounding them, they hardly knew which way to turn. Suddenly there was a swirl alongside, and up popped the British submarine E-4, which opened its conning tower, took the occupants of the whaler on board, closed the opening, submerged, and sped homeward, 250 miles away.

The good ship Regular, while on a voyage from Liverpool to Bombay, was caught off the Cape of Good Hope in a gale. She sprung a serious leak, and captain and crew had to take to the boisterous sea in open boats. They had run so far off the course of vessels that there was small prospect of rescue. What seemed the direct intervention of Providence was evident in their case.

Capt. Rol of the French frigate L'Alemene, who rescued the captain and crew from the boats, told how it was brought about. He was on the deck of his vessel at the moment, as afterward appeared, when the sinking vessel was abandoned, and remarking to the officer of the watch that it was time to change the course of L'Alemene, he went below to consult the chart.

"I went into my cabin," he said, "for the sole purpose of consulting the chart, but paused for a moment to glance at a book that lay open on the table. There I fell asleep, a most unusual thing for me during daylight.

"I slept on I knew not how long, but when I waked it was dark and I was both cold and hungry. My last waking thought had been of changing the vessel's course; and I went on deck, supposing that that had been done, but found the ship still steering east.

"'How is this?' I asked. 'Did I not direct the course to be altered?'

"'I was told that you were going to consult the chart,' replied the officer, 'and then fix the course.'

"'So I did; what time is it?' I asked.

"'Past midnight, sir; this is the middle watch.'

"'All right,' I said, 'we will continue on this course until we get sights for longitude in the morning.'

"Before that was done we had sighted one boat and rescued its crew; and we kept on the course until we found the second boat."

A cake of soap is said to have saved the lives of five men and a boy, off the coast of New Guinea. The story as told by an old man, the owner of several vessels engaged in pearl fishing, is as follows:

"It all happened in a moment. The ship struck a part of the reef, and went down like a lump of lead, and we had only time to jump overboard and swim ashore.

"We were at the mouth of Cloudy Bay, which meant slow roasting alive an soon as the natives got a peep at us. We were wet, hungry and miserable, with nothing to stay the pangs of hunger.

"As daylight dawned, I saw a case slowly drifting to shore. In a moment we were all wading and swimming to secure the treasure. We had it on shore in no time, and prying it open with our fingers, found it filled with soap! We bemoaned our hard luck in mournful language.

"'Close round the case, boys, they're coming!'' shouted, as I saw fifty mop-headed savages armed with spears rushing toward me. At fifteen yards' distance they paused, and the chief came out to talk with us. I grabbed an armful of the soap cakes and advanced to him. His eyes lightened as he saw the amber-colored cakes on which the sun was shining. Novelties, when they take, mean success.

"Going straight up to the man-eater, I offered him a cake. He took it, smelt it, and tasted it. Evidently he did not care for its flavor, for he scowled at me. By signs I showed him how to use it. The Papuan is fond of washing himself, and my pantomime took his fancy. Seeing a stream of fresh water, I led the chief to it. First washing my hands, I gave him the cake of soap. He did as I had done, and was delighted.

"Then for the next ten minutes there was a scrubbing among those copper skins. Their weapons were thrown down, and they lathered one another, and then tossed the water over their bodies.

"We were saved, and made on the spot medcline men of the tribe. The pictorial advertisements of the soapmakers were used to decorate the idol-house. Two weeks afterward we were rescued by an English man-of-war."

Capt. J. G. Knowles of Oakland, Cal., once had an unusual opportunity to demonstrate his possession of those qualities which have always proved the chief characteristics of the brave American mariner.

He sailed from San Francisco, in ballast, for Manila. All went well until he reached the South Seas. There, one night, his fine ship brought up on a coral reef which was not marked on any chart.

The ship was a total loss; but some sails and canvas were landed; tents were erected and, a supply of provisions having been saved, the company settled down to wait for a passing vessel. None appeared; and after some weeks Capt. Knowles, the mate and two seamen started in the ship's boat for Pitcairn Island, 1200 miles away. They reached it safely only to learn, by a placard on one of the dwellings, that every inhabitant had gone to join a new settlement at Norfolk Island, some 1200 miles still farther on!

In course of time, no ship arriving, the question of food demanded the attention of the four men on Pitcairn's. There was much wild fruit growing, and wild hogs and other game abounded; but none of the party had any weapons. An old gun barrel was found in one of the buildings, together with a keg partly filled with powder, which the rain had made into a hard crust. The gun barrel was rigged up, the powder pul-

THE PATH IN THE WOODS.

BY FRANCES WIERMAN.

THE Path was a lazy winding one as if it had forever to get where it was going. It was a country path, wide enough for two teams. The tall old trees hemmed it in all the way, and there were twists and turns inviting one on and urging him to see what was around the next bend. It was a soft, dirt path, clean and brown, and one might walk the whole way without making a sound. At intervals the tall old trees thinned a little and there came a glimpse of a river. Here and there could be seen a cottage nestling on a by-path.

The Sun had not yet appeared. He had sent his heralds of rose and blue light which touched the hilltops and made the ribbon of a river look like a fairy stream. There was that sweet and gentle quiet which rests on the woods just before the Sun appears. The birds were rousing themselves. It was the tiny space out of Eternity which seems to say:

"Now is the time to pray!"

Out of the brown house at the end of the Path came the Country Doctor, stooped from years of bending over bedsides, and somewhat unsteady on his feet, for it had been many hours since he slept. His horse welcomed him joyfully. The Doctor climbed into his buggy and settled himself for a nap. The horse needed no guidance—he knew he was going home. He started off briskly with the Doctor already asleep. As the fat old horse and the lean old Doctor turned the first bend in the Path, there came to them a thin wail—a Godspeed from the new life which the Doctor had been helping to begin.

By then the sky was a wonderfully delicate rose color, and the hills were rich in purple. There was a kinship between the gentleness of the world at that hour and the gentleness within the brown house at the end of the Path. For there is no gentleness in Nature like the first touch of dawn, and there is no gentleness among humans like that of a mother with her first baby.

The Path changed with the seasons, now clothed in the green of Spring, now in the brown of Autumn, and again in the white of Winter. It remained always the Path, changing only its robes. But the baby in the brown house changed into a fat toddler, then into a boy ready for school. On a morning in late September the Boy started on his first walk to the schoolhouse. The morning was bright and the Path was bathed in an atmosphere of briskness. There was a tang in the air that made men and animals wish to be up and doing. The leaves were turning and starting to fall, squirrels were noisily busy and occasionally a rabbit, in a great hurry, flashed across the Path. The leaves underfoot made a crackling sound.

A sturdy 6-year-old came down the Path with book and slate. He felt the impelling tang and he could scarcely wait until he reached the school where tasks awaited him. His suit was new, his blouse crackled with starch, adding delightfully to the other autumn sounds. He knew She was back there at the end of the Path. She had bid him farewell with tears in her eyes, and he feared he would cry if he looked back again. But she turned about and She was there. He waved a fat hand and She waved a slim one. What an ineffable smile she sent to her Boy! It made him strangely happy. He turned his back on her and away he went down the Path, out of his babyhood and into the world of books.

The Path remained the same, though it changed its garments of green to yellow, to brown, and to white. The Boy grew and became a Man. One day, in May, he brought his bride down the Path. The tall old trees had renewed their youth with fresh leaves. The ground on each side of the soft brown earth was like a green carpet. Thousands of tiny pale wild flowers nestled at the roots of the trees. The wood was filled with mating birds, flashing overhead in many hues. The sun's radiance was kind, sometimes coming through a white mist like a bridal veil.

Every foot of the Path was dear to the young man and woman who walked hand in hand. Every fallen stump marked an epoch in their courtship. How often had they stood at the thin place in the trees, watching the faraway ribbon of a river! They recalled the rainy day when they rushed down a by-path to take refuge in a deserted cottage. Every foot of the meandering Path held memories for them. That was why they chose to walk to the brown house at the end. A few friends followed, sending kindly thoughts to the lovers. No artificial pomp could equal the stateliness of the tall old trees, and no velvet carpet could surpass in quiet softness the brown under their feet.

The years passed. The Path remained the same; but the lovers felt the burden of time. On an August noon the Path was the only cool spot in the sweltering countryside. The birds chirped quietly, and the little wild animals kept to their haunts. The big beasts in the fields drooped wearily; the men with them drew in gasping breaths and wiped the blinding sweat from their eyes. The Man from the brown house stepped out into the hot sunshine. He was blinded, not by the Sun, but by tears. Like his neighbors in the fields, he wiped the dripping sweat, but it was cold and slow. He raised his eyes as if seeking relief to a black mass that hung low in the sky. He listened to a distant roll of thunder as though asking for a word of promise. He raised his clenched hands to Heaven and prayed that just a little longer time on Earth should be given Her. There was an instant's silence as if the powers above were considering their answer. Then a jagged strip of light struck across the sky, a long, deep roll filled the air, and the rain poured on the parched earth. The Man bowed his head in submission and reentered his home where Her spirit was freeing itself from its cumbersome shell.

Winter came. A heavy snow, the first of the season, had fallen. The tall old trees in white robes stood like guards. Not one little wild thing could be seen. Through the thin place in the trees could be seen the ice of the River sparkling with purple lights. No sound was heard but the crunch of boots upon the hard crust of the snow. Books and Love and Prayer had called the Man down the Path; and now Death was calling him. The Path had always answered his every mood, and his last mood it answered well.

SPIRIT OF FRATERNITY OF FRENCH PEOPLE.

By C. D. M.

AS YOU left America to come to France you passed under the shadow of the statue of Liberty Enlightening the World, the splendid beacon which stands in New York Harbor, the lasting memorial of the fraternal regard of the Republic of France for our republic and people. We will walk down now to the middle court of the Louvre in Paris. Here stands a magnificent statue of Lafayette, given to France by the school children of the United States. It was set up and unveiled in 1900 within this court of this richest treasure house of the world, where every day of every year, a stream of the whole world's pilgrims passes by, into that unrivaled shrine of architecture and art. The selection of that choice spot for the fraternal gift of America's children, reveals the choice secret of the heart of France in its fraternal love of America.

Let us walk round this corner from the American Embassy on Avenue Kleber to the Rue Gaillilee. What an elegant little park (500 by 1000 feet) gladdens your eyes! It is the Place des Etats Unis. Why should there be such a choice place, so beautifully shaded with plane trees, adorned with statuary and ornamented with borders of flowers, in the heart of Paris, named after the United States? Look at that group in marble at the very head of the Place. It is a fine sculpture of heroic size of George Washington grasping the hand of Lafayette, while behind them stand the banners of the two republics. It is by Bartholdi, designer of the Statue of Liberty, and is done with spirit and life. Does it touch your American heart with an answering fraternal love, that on this foreign soil and in the midst of this strange people, you see your beloved Washington standing in perfect fraternity with their splendid Lafayette, in the Place des Etats Unis?

Walk this way two blocks to the broad Place d'Jena, center of one of the finest residence districts of the city. What is this majestic equestrian statue in the center of the Place? Washington. Just there on the Champs Elysees opens a fine street where you see in white letters "Rue Washington," read by every passenger along this finest avenue in the world. And here, 1000 feet away, in the great Place Trocadero, outlined against a green bank, is the bonze statue of a great man seated and smiling as he looks out over that wonderful space, the grand entree of two world's expositions. Who is this man? Benjamin Franklin—and the bronze reliefs on the pedestal represent his reception at the court of France in 1778 as Ambassador, and the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1785.

The inscription on the front declares that he was the sage "who brought light to two continents." The blue street sign at the corner behind the statue reads "Rue Franklin," and not far on in the street is a tablet on a house indicating that Franklin lived here from 1777 till 1785, and on that roof placed the first lightning-rod ever made in France.

"Good," you say; "this is glorious!"

"It warms my heart towards France."

Then you glance down along the great Passy Bridge, which here spans the Seine, and you catch the sunglint of a gigantic statue in bronze—a replica it is of the colossal State of Liberty that for a third of a century has greeted every foreigner, and every home-coming American, entering the port of New York.

In the Victor Hugo house in the old Place Vosges, your eye lights on a photograph of Abraham Lincoln and upon a personal letter of appreciation from our martyr of liberty to the heroic French author. In a choice park you find a characteristic statue of Lincoln, and everywhere in shops and kiosks the faces of Roosevelt and Wilson, Pershing and Bliss, and as you turn into the Place del' Opera, in the very heart of Paris, you wonder if you are not in New York. For standing directly in front of the Opera House, that first corner on the left is placarded "The American Express Company," where reading-rooms, bank, postoffice, ticket and express offices are ready to do business with all customers, just as at home.

The next corner is the office of the American Steamship Companies. Four doors below is the sign of the American Chamber of Commerce, and over the doors of the next great building (the Grand Hotel) you read "American Bar" and "American Restaurant." Straight across the avenue is the American Consulate, then the Chicago Daily News, New York Herald, Brooklyn Eagle, a half-dozen American insurance companies and a score of the great business firms of the United States, and in all these places and on the streets before them, your countrymen are everywhere in evidence, and you feel that you have the keys of the city and are welcome to its unbounded hospitality. Over in the Sorbonne, American professors are lecturing on American history at the invitation of the French and the sessions are crowded to the doors.

You meet scores of Americans who have come to stay a month and have stayed a year, and there are several thousands in the permanent "American colony." One day, during your visit, a careful count from the hotel registers gives a list of 47,000 Americans, visitors in the city at that moment. Just so of all nations; thousands of each are daily here, and each foreigner sees around him the monuments and reminders, the conveniences and customs of his own home to such a degree that he feels at ease and at home. The spirit of fraternity wraps him about as with a mantle in this marvelous city, and brings him comfort and content.

Who Will Save China?

It is incontestable that no other nation on earth has ever attained to such a record of well-ordered continuity and stability as China; also that this quality of permanence has been based upon moral ideas of a very high order. As an eminent French writer has truly said: "The civilization of China has stood its tests. It has provided countless generations of men with food, not only for the body but the soul. It has been a school of moral beauty and virtue, of gentleness and wisdom. It has given to China a degree of happiness and to the life of her people a stability and harmony which have never been excelled (the Chinese would say never equalled) by any other civilization."

Sharing this writer's view, I find something pathetic, and at the same time almost impertinent, in the commonly accepted assumption that we are called upon, if not entitled, to regard our western civilization as superior to that of the East, and to impose it upon the Chinese people. I believe that the ideas and institutions by which China will in due time be "saved" will be neither American nor British, but Chinese ideas and institutions, evolved by the Chinese themselves in accordance with the genius and traditions of the race. Indeed, I hope and believe that the inroads of our western materialism will leave no deeper scars upon the soul of China than have been left upon it by the dominion of the Manchus or the invasion of Tartar hordes. And I therefore hold it to be our duty, while assisting to restore the financial stability and administrative authority of the Chinese government, to abstain from attempts to impose our type of civilization upon the Chinese people. I, who have lived for nearly thirty years among them, and have had occasion to compare their system of manners and morals with those of many other nations, have no hesitation in saying that, despite the burden of physical suffering, the hunger and the squalor imposed upon countless millions of Asiatics by their passivity and by the intensity of the struggle for survival, accentuated by their procreative recklessness, the East is wiser and happier than the West. I believe that the social institutions which have grown out of the Chinese philosophy are nearer to the truth than ours and therefore morally superior; and, believing this, I ask myself (and Prof. Dewey) upon what grounds and to what purpose we persist in endeavoring to impose upon them not only our mechanical inventions, but our political panaceas and our conflicting creeds.—[From "Saving China," by J. O. P. Bland, in Asia Magazine for June.

We Tell the Neighbors About It.

By JOHN STEVEN McGROARTY.

WE chose to make the announcement when the neighbors were gathered together on the stone fence watching the sunset on the Ventura Mountains. And we waited until the purple dusk had faded and we could see the light of the foolish automobiles flitting like fireflies up and down the Calabasas Road.

Well, neighbors, we said, and our voice was husky and wavering though we tried all we could to make it clear and steady; well, we said, neighbors, we have secured another loan from God and we are going away to spend it.

There was quite a long silence then. The crescent moon was high in the sky and the crickets were singing the loneliest kind of a croon in the chaparral. It seemed to us that it was an age before anybody spoke.

But, at last, somebody did speak. And it was the man whose house is beside the road—the man we call Homer's friend.

Yes, said the man whose house is beside the road, we knew it. We have felt it coming on for some time. You haven't seemed yourself lately, said the man whose house is beside the road. And we knew what was up, he said. It was easy for anyone to see that you were fishing around and trying to get another loan from God.

So, get it out of your system; fire away and tell us all about it without any hems or haws, as the saying is, said the man whose house is beside the road.

Sitting on the Stone Fence
We Outline Our Trop to the Neighbors.

WELL, sir, it wasn't as easy as you might think for us to tell the neighbors that we had secured the loan from God and that we were off to spend it in strange places and upon alien highways. There was no telling how far we might go, we said. Beyond the Azores, maybe, and the Pillars of Hercules. Into the vast forests of the north, and back to the blue hills where we were born. It might be that we might go as far as the other side of the world and take a look at a couple of the few kings that are still left, we said. A cat can look at a king, as the saying is. And there is one king, certainly, that we must see and have a talk with.

We said a lot more than that to the neighbors as we all sat together that evening on the stone fence in the green Verdugo Hills, watching the lights of the automobiles on the Calabasas Road, and the crescent moon shining over us in the blue skies of the night.

It was the time of the third smoke, or maybe the fourth, before we got through telling the neighbors of the way in which we hoped to be able to spend the loan from God.

And, at times, as we spoke, picturing in bright colors the scenes that we were bent upon seeing, and the wonderful places we were to visit, we let our enthusiasm run high.

What we were really trying to do was to get a thrill out of it. We were groping back into the misty past for some of the long lost eagerness of youth.

There was a time, we told ourself, when the prospect of a long journey to strange lands, over mountains and across the seas, would have set us mad with joy. But, when the shadows lengthen in life and a man is not so young as he used to be, it is not the same. Ships and caravans have not the same lure for him that they had when he was a boy. He is more content to stay at home when the winters of the years have sprinkled their snows in his hair. A wood fire, a pipe and a friendly cat to purr against his legs, and a dog to bark a welcome to him, are the things that appeal to him then.

But with all that, we did get a thrill out of the prospect of faring forth with staff of sloe and a green cap upon our head. The wanderlust was not yet dead in our heart, and it put a glow there to know that this was true.

By gollies, we said to ourself, there is a little of the stuff of youth left in us yet.

The Neighbors Give Us
Some Good Advice.

DOUBTLESS on the theory that there is no woman so competent to give advice upon the rearing of babies as the woman who never had one, herself, the neighbors now proceeded to advise us as to what to do and in what manner to conduct ourself while away from home, and especially when we came to stand in the presence of kings.

For, there was not one man there, among all who sat with us that night on the green Verdugo Hills who had ever seen a king, or who had been far enough away from home in his life to be where a king could be found.

So, we filled our pipe again in a vast contentment to listen to the neighbors as we sat under the crescent moon in the peace and glory of the summer night.

It is one thing to fare from home with nobody caring how far you go or whether you shall ever return. But, it is another thing to know that both your departure and your return is a matter of concern to those who are near to you, and maybe to thousands of others whom you have never seen.

And so, it is no wonder that there was a glow in our heart, and a tenderness beyond all words to express, as we sat with the neighbors on the stone fence in the summer night.

And it is perhaps no wonder, either, that we thought of the kindly members of our vast congregation, here and there in roaring towns and in the wide flung hills and valleys, who read this poor, blundering page on blessed Sunday mornings.

Another Loan from God.

John Steven McGroarty has succeeded in negotiating another loan from God. With the true poet's instinct he is going to fare forth and spend his loan in lavish style by roaming, even as Homer did of old, into the far places and beyond the seas. This time, however, there is to be no hiatus, as on a previous occasion, for with the generosity of his kind he is going to permit us to help him spend the proceeds of this loan and each week, as near the Pillars of Hercules or the blue hills where he was born, he will tell us on this page of his high adventures. For he is intent upon visiting kings and princes as well as talking with the simple, honest folk of the Old World.

While we shall miss for the nonce the homely philosophy and wise and wonderous sayings and doings of the good folk of the Green Verdugo Hills, we shall be compensated by what our friend will have to tell us of the world's far places. So it is with feelings of high anticipation that we send our smiling philosopher and poet on his happy way wishing him a merry journey and a safe return to his beloved Green Verdugo Hills.—[Editor.

Ah, my dear, it is not easy, after all, to go away from home.

But, that's another story, as the saying is. What we wanted to tell you all is that the neighbors gave us lots of good advice as we sat wit hthem under the crescent moon watching the foolish automobiles fitting like fireflies up and down the Calabasas Road.

And they were all there that night—all the neighbors beloved of us and well known to you. The man who has the phonograph was there, and the man who plays the flute; the man who lives in the little gray house in the hollow, the Professor, the Parson, and even Socrates. And the Viking, and the man who reads the papers, the statistician, and the man who knows all about the Saints. They were all there that night.

And it would be hard to say whose advice was the best. But, what does it matter? It was all good.

What the Man
Who Plays the Flute Said.

YOU should, by all means, try to see the King of Spain, said the man who plays the flute.

The King of Spain, said the man who plays the flute, should be made to know that he owes a good deal to California. It is the biggest feather in his cap. You should be able to show him that the boast that Spain is the Mother of California is the best boast that Spain has, said the man who plays the flute.

But, spoke up the man who reads the papers, how the dickens is the Conductor to break in on the King of Spain. Believe me, he said, it is some stunt to get to see a king and to sit down with him and to have a talk with him. I have read all about it in the papers, he said.

WANDERLUST.

Beyond the East the sunrise, beyond the West the sea,
And East and West the wanderlust that will not let me be;
It works in me like madness, dear, to bid me say good-by.
For the seas call and the stars call, and oh, the call of the sky.

I know not where the white road runs, nor what the blue hills are,
But man can have the sun for friend, and for his guide a star;
And there's no end of voyaging when once the voice is heard,
For the river calls and the road calls, and oh, the call of a bird.

Yonder the long horizon lies, and there by night and day
The old ships draw to home again, the young ships sail away;
And come I may, but go I must, and if men ask you why,
You may put the blame on the stars and the sun and the white road and the sky.

GERALD GOULD,

Fudge, said the man who plays the flute, it is as easy as rolling off a log.

If you get to Spain, Conductor, said the man who plays the flute, you just go right up to the house where the king lives, and knock at the front door, and tell the hired girl when she opens the door to see who is there, that you are who you are, and that you are from the green Verdugo Hills, and that you want to see the king.

And you just sit down then and tell him all the king is up, you may be sure he will hurry and come to the door and ask you in. He will be mighty glad to see you, said the man who plays the flute.

Aud you jjust sit down then and tell him all the news, he said. Tell him what a big town Los Angeles has come to be since a king of Spain started it to going, one hundred and forty years ago. Tell him it has grown clear away from the Old Plaza where Felipe de Neve drove the first stakes and that it is full of skyscrapers and movie plants and restaurants and stores and soda fountains and everything.

His eyes will bulge out when you tell him all that, said the man who plays the flute. And the king will be so danged interested that he won't know where the time has gone. And the hired girl will come in and say it is time for supper, and he will ask you to stay and have a tamale with him, and maybe a glass of old Spanish wine which you can drink or not, as you please.

And then, said the man who plays the flute, after supper, and when you have pulled out your pipe and are having a smoke with the king—then is the time to tackle him for something to bring home with you as a keepsake for the twenty-second Mission or for old San Gabriel. Tackle him after supper when he is in a good humor, he said, and tackle him good.

Maybe you will see a tapestry on the wall, said the man who plays the flute. And, said he, you can hint a little that the old thing is just for catching dust when his wife is sweeping up the rooms, but that the folks here would be very proud to have it.

Or you might tackle him for a bell, or a few swords that the Californians had when they were over here, or his grandfather's chair or anything like that, said the man who plays the flute.

But, be sure you tackle him for something, he said—something for a keepsake and a memory of him.

We Make a Promise to the Neighbors.

THERE was a lot more said along these lines, as the saying is. And we felt our confidence and our courage soar. We felt, at last, that we could face any king, or even a butler, which is something, they say, that tests a man through and through.

They say that it requires the courage of a lion to face a European butler.

It was when the crescent moon had dipped low in the blue night sky that we all came to the conclusion that the course was fully mapped out and that nothing remained but to hoist sail and go.

But, before the meeting adjourned, we had to make a promise to the neighbors. And the promise is that we shall keep them fully informed as to our movements, so that they may always know just where we are and what happens.

We are to send it all to the honorable editor of this devoted magazine, and he will print it every Sunday for the information of the neighbors and our entire congregation in the roaring town and in all the hills and valleys of the Land o' Heart's Desire while we are away spending the loan from God.

By gollies, it is a good idea when you come to think of it. We won't have to write nearly so many picture post cards then.

The neighbors said that they will attend to everything while we are gone and that we needn't worry about a thing. They will see that our bees are all in their hives at night, and that our nine bean rows are watered regularly, and that our yellow cat shall not want for one single saucer of milk though we should not come back for a year and a day.

The Viking said he hoped surely to have his stone castle well under way by the time of our return. He has planned to run a cable up the hill and hitch the motor of his Ford to it so that he won't have to carry the rocks on his back like the Indians had to do when they were building the Mission of San Juan Capistrano.

The man who has the phonograph said that if we heard a new tune or two he would be glad to have us bring the the records home for him. Just as if we wouldn't do that without him asking.

And the man who lives in the little gray house in the hollow, with the lilac bush in front and the twoa big rocks behind it, said the neighbors would always think a vacant chair for us there, and that they would think of us when the pipes were going and the room was in a blue haze.

By gollies, with all they said that night under the crescent moon on the stone fence, we almost wished we were not going away at all.

And, as the last straw, as the saying is, old Socrates said, well, Conductor, if you go broke and are wondering over there whether you are strong enough to swim the Atlantic Ocean, just forget it and go to a bank and draw on me.

Dang it, wasn't that white of old Socrates!

And then the Parson, maybe in the way of a benediction, said he would pray God to keep us in His care while we are wandering in the alien places.

And that seemed the best of all—the thing the Parson said.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

WARREN, BORED AND IRRITABLE, IGNORES HELEN'S EFFORTS TO DIVERT HIM.

"HERE, waiter, switch on that fan! Hot as blazes in here," grumbled Warren. "And hustle along that order."

"Yes, sir," hastening to turn on the electric fan nearest their table.

"Dear, was it hot in your office today?" Helen laid aside the menu after an anxious appraisal of the piratic prices.

"Hot everywhere," curtly, again engrossed in his paper.

Wistfully Helen gazed about the gray and white, linen-swathed restaurant. Other couples were laughing and talking in animated dinner mood. Only she sat silent and neglected with Warren barricaded behind the evening paper.

What could she talk about that would interest him? So far her several attempts at conversation had elicited only monosyllabic grunts.

"Dear, how would you like to go out to the Drakes next Sunday? They've been wanting us to come all summer—we've just to let them know."

"Um-um," without looking up.

"If you don't want to spend the day—we would leave about one and have the afternoon and evening."

To this there was no response whatever. Patiently she waited, reading the headlines on the back of his paper until the waiter brought the jellied bouillon.

His attention now focused on the congealed amber broth, Warren consumed it in stolid silence.

"Dear, you seem tired. Did you have a hard day?"

"No harded than usual," with a crustiness that precluded further questioning along that line.

It was several moments before she ventured on another topic.

"Aren't those red geraniums attractive?" admiring the well-kept window boxes. "I've often thought of having some in the dining-room—that bay window would take three boxes. Would they have to be made to order? What do you suppose they'd cost?"

Warren's shrug indicated both his ignorance and indifference.

A barren, dragging interval, emphasized by the vivacious chatter from near-by tables, spurred Helen to still another effort.

"I met Mrs Holden in the elevator this morning. They're going up to Cedar Inn for two weeks. Wasn't that where the Sanfords went last summer?"

"Uh-uh," scooping out a large spoonful of the quivering jelly.

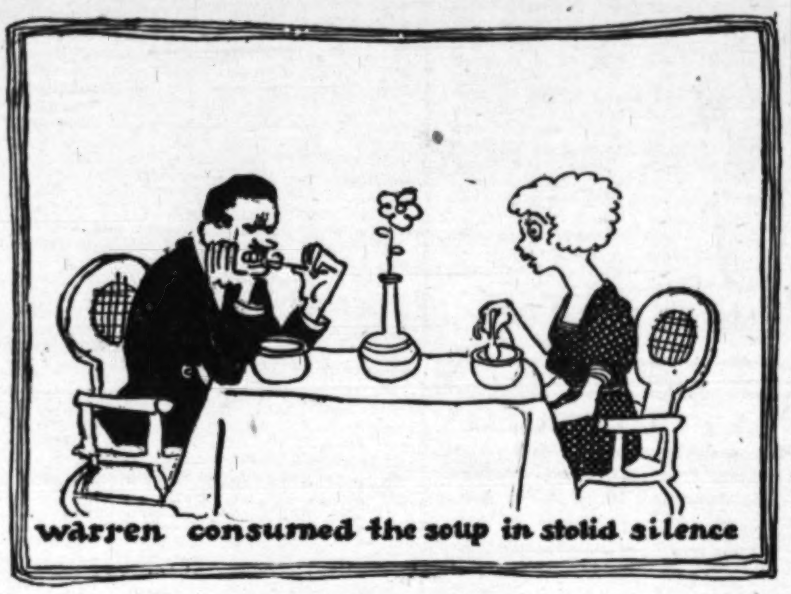
"I'm sure they won't like it. Mrs. Sanford that they were eaten up with mosquitoes. I wonder why they don't go to the beach again? Wouldn't you think it would be better for the children?"

"Well, I'm not losing any sleep over where they go, as the broth now finished, he reached for the paper.

Discouraged at the pathetic failure of her conversational maneuvers, Helen broodingly regarded the other diners. What were they all talking about? Why were they all so interested? Was it because they were not married? What that what made the difference?

She thought of that wonderful year before and during their engagement—when dining out together was an event, not a part of the daily routine. Then there had been so much to talk about. Every trivial thing had seemed of vital importance.

Now Warren looked bored to extinction at every subject she broached. It was an effort to get even a grunted response.



warren consumed the soup in stolid silence

Over the entree of broiled mushrooms, she tried to think of something in her uneventful day that might arouse a gleam of interest.

"Oh, the man came this morning to fix that lock on the bathroom door. He said the spring was broken—it'll be cheaper to put on a bolt. We never lock it from the outside—so won't a bolt do just as well?"

"S'pose so," absently.

It was just then that Helen caught a snatch of the trivial but lively dialogue from the adjoining table.

"I did call you up but your wire was busy. Well, that's what central said. About three. I tried again at half past but you were out."

It was the old story of "Before and After," reflected Helen bitterly, comparing this couple's absorption with Warren's utter boredom.

Over the roast lamb and asparagus she made another attempt.

"Dear, did you read that wireless story in this month's Colmore's? About the politician who had a secret station, and received messages from ———"

"Oh, cut it! Don't rehash any of those Colmore yarns. Tiresome enough when you read 'em first hand."

"Why, I thought the last few numbers had been rather good. They've started a new serial by Fullerton. Haven't you seen the announcements? They're advertising it everywhere."

"Same old sex slush," buttering his asparagus.

"Evidently that's what the people want," eager to pursue any subject if he would only talk. "They say he gets enormous prices—he's the highest paid of all the magazine writers."

But Warren's glum silence proclaimed his complete indifference to Fullerton's stories or the amount of his income.

Through the salad Helen made no further attempt to divert him. Instead she gave herself up to the blackest brooding.

Were all marriages like this? Was it only a matter of a few years until the boredom stage was reached? Was it the continuous companionship that so soon palled?

Was that why articles on how to hold one's husband filled the women's magazines? Keep young and attractive were the ever-repeated warnings.

But she was young and attractive! The mirrored wall reflected a slim girlish figure in a dainty blue organdie and broad wheat-trimmed hat. She was quite as attractive as the girl at the adjoining table—but they were not married! That was why the man leaned forward with such flattering interest.

Glancing past them, she watched an elderly couple who had just entered. In wooden silence they were waiting to be served. The woman, stout and gray-haired, looked quite as bored as the man. Helen wondered how many years before she, too, would reach that stage.

Perhaps it would be more comfortable then. Anything would be better than this feverish striving to arouse an interest that had ceased to exist.

"Hello, Curtis! You still in town?"

"Maxwell! When did you get in?" Warren sprang up to shake hands with a stout man in white flannels.

"Yesterday—just a hurried trip. Going back tonight."

"I don't believe you've met Mrs. Curtis," introducing him to Helen. Then cordially, "Sit right down here and have dinner with us."

"Just had dinner in the grill. We're going to the theater—but I've a few moments," taking the vacant chair.

"Well, you certainly struck it hot this trip. Mrs. Maxwell with you?"

"No, she's up at our camp on the St. Lawrence."

"Jove, I'd like to have about two weeks up there! Your camp's near Brockville, isn't it? Finest bass fishing in Canada," enthused Warren. "I caught a seven-pounder there one year."

"Yes, Brockville's just five miles below us. They're putting up a big hotel there and we're afraid it's going to bring the mob."

With smoldering resentment Helen watched Warren, now vigorously animated. His bored air had vanished the moment Mr. Maxwell appeared. Here was some one with whom he wanted to talk.

For a full half hour Mr. Maxwell lingered. And when finally with evident reluctance he left them, Warren was still in high good-humor.

"That was luck to run into Maxwell. Haven't seen him for over a year." Then briskly, "Feel like a show tonight? How about a roof garden? Here, waiter, let's have the check."

Outside, in the cloying, sultry night, he strolled along, still genial. Helen was allowed to bask in the afterglow of Mr. Maxwell's enlivening presence.

She knew she should gratefully accept his changed mood and say nothing, but her resentment urged her to a tactless rebellion.

"Warren, do you consider Mr. Maxwell particularly clever or interesting?"

"Maxwell?" surprised. "Why, no. He's a good sort—but he'll never set the world on fire."

"Then you don't especially enjoy his companionship?" recklessly she persisted. "You wouldn't say he was—unusually stimulating?"

"Stimulating? Maxwell? What're you driving at?"

"Just this," tensely. "Until he joined us you sat there glum and silent. I couldn't get a word out of you. When I tried to talk you only answered in grunts. But the minute he came you were all animation."

"What of it?" belligerently. "What're you trying to get at, anyway?"

"That I bore you—and other people don't!" now flushed and excited. "You say he isn't particularly clever—that makes it worse. It shows that anyone else can interest you. You're only bored when you're alone with me."

"See here, what are you trying to start? Working overtime on some of your damned analyzing, that it? You've got to pick everything to pieces and put it under a microscope."

"It didn't take a microscope to see that you were bored when we were alone. You hadn't a thing to say. If you'd looked around at the other couples! Everyone laughing and talking except us."

"Well, what of it? When I come home tired from the office, think I'm going to break my neck trying to entertain you?"

"You don't have to entertain me," flamingly. "But you might answer my questions—and make an occasional remark."

"Well, if I've anything to say—I'll say it. If I haven't—I'll keep still," pounding the pavement with his cane. "I don't propose to reel off any Polly-Anna chatter when I'm dead tired. And don't you try any of your dissecting stunts on me! Unless you're looking for trouble—cut out the post-mortems!"

A Suggestion to Ex-Presidents.

It is a pleasant calling to be a writer if one can make it go, as the dislocated statesmen seem to have discovered. All of them must have learned how much of government is done by newspapers, and to all of them it must have seemed a natural step from official desk to writer's desk. Too great a multiplication of distinguished syndicate writers is hardly to be desired by journalists because syndicate writers, by the process of duplication, fill a lot of space. Perhaps Congress will be asked to do something, and there is something that Congress can do. It can pension the ex-Presidents. They will not be so likely to write for the papers if they do not need the money their labors bring in. There is no objection to their being writers, but they ought to be able to stick to the more dignified lines of composition—to write books.

Better still if they would take to preaching, for there is a real dearth of preachers. The world never needed effective preaching more, and there never was a time when so many important people seemed to know it. One expounder after another, impressed with the difficulties and the tangles that the world is in, realizes that a different spirit in man is necessary to release it from existing complications, and proclaims that the great world need is religion.

President Harding declared only the other day that what the world needed was more Christianity. Ex-President Taft has come out quite strong for Christianity, excepting the miracles. H. G. Wells had it revealed to him, as may be remembered, that religion has got to come across. Herbert Croly, of the New Republic, wrote a piece in that imperfectly sanctified journal to the same effect. There is a crowd of important witnesses to the world's need of religion—to the great urgency of that need. Yet the zeal of young men for the ministry seems very moderate—only one candidate in this year's graduating class at Amherst College, which used to be a hotbed of piety! Of course, there are preachers. Of course the work goes on, but, considering how white the world is for the harvest, the supply of laborers seems scant.—[E. S. Martin in Harper's Magazine.

Austin J. Harnan of Custer, Okla., has invented what he calls a "new and improved tombstone." It is designed to represent a lifesize human figure standing erect. For instance, it might be a soldier. The material is galvanized iron, made hollow, so that the lower part of it may be filled with cement to make a heavier base. The body is hollow in order that, if desired, it may hold an urn containing the ashes of the deceased. As for the head, it is meant to be screwed on and may be made a likeness of the person for whom the tombstone is erected.—[Columbus Dispatch.

MORTON'S SALT

"When It Rains It Pours"

133 at 3

By Gerald Beaumont

THE air in the Manhattan Athletic Club was heavy with tobacco, and the hum of voices indicated a capacity house. Between the second and third preliminaries the referee walked to the center of the ring and held up one hand appealingly.

"Gen—le-men!" he cried.

Gradually the noise faded.

"The Harlem Kid," he shrilled, "you all know him; he's in bad shape. His friends want to send him to a dry climate. Those who want to help the Kid can throw their spare change into the ring or give it to the ushers who will pass among you."

He leaned over the ropes and borrowed a derby. Placing the hat in the center of the fadded canvas, he tossed into it a silver coin, and walking to the ropes, leaned there expectantly.

Dimes and quarters pattered into the ring, then heavier coins and finally little wads of bills weighted with silver.

Alderman Conners, seated at the ringside, turned to a friend.

"A good boy," he commented, "a mighty good good boy, do you mind? The bunch took him up to Albany when they were lobbying for the Frawley Bill. They tabbed him 'Exhibit A,' and just on his appearance he made more votes than any of them. A clean-living, clean-looking kid, and I figured him a comer."

"What's he got, the con?"

"I suppose so; that's what comes from trying to keep within the lightweight limit. It got Joe Bilt and a lot of others. Can you change a twenty?"

The alderman accepted two $10 bills, handed one up through the ropes, and then a moment later rumpled up its companion and tossed it in.

"I guess the Kid needs it more than I do," he explained to his friend.

Just before the main event the referee announced that the contributions totaled $612.70, and that the Harlem Kid would thank 'em in person.

Boosted up by Abdul the Turk, a sandy-haired, hazel-eyed youngster crawled through the ropes and stood erect, his eyes too brilliant, his cheek-bones too prominent, his voice too low to be heard past the fifth row.

The referee came to the rescue.

"The Kid thanks you one and all," he shouted, "and he says that some day he hopes to come back and entertain you again."

The Kid nodded corroboration, waved both hands at the darkened bleachers, and then, because he was only 20 years old and the ring was his world, he sat down on the lower rope and cried.

It was Abdul the Turk who lifted the Kid out of the ring—Abdul, the champion wrestler of the East Side. The huge Mohammedan carried the Harlem Kid to the seclusion of a dressing-room and there kidded him into composure.

Northwest from Deming, N. M., the railroad crosses the Mimbres Valley and heads for the Geronimo Mountains.

Where the steel rails end, 6000 feet above the sea's surface, is a region rich in silver, copper, turquoise mines and ancient Spanish lore. But more precious than all these is the dry, aseptic air that blows across balsamic desert growth.

It was to Silver City that they sent the Harlem Kid.

Dr. Anton Wismer, examining physician at the San Rosario Sanatorium, catalogued Richard Walter Potter's antecedents, history and characteristics on the four-page form. The examination lasted one hour, and at its conclusion Wismer asked but one more question:

"Homesick?"

"Oh, my God!" said the Harlem Kid. "Oh, my God!"

It was in the morning, and they were all bundled up in steamer chairs strung out along the sun porch, the patients alternated by sex as an incentive to sociability. The Harlem Kid accepted meekly his morning ration of fresh egg and then leaned back a little later with a thermometer projecting rakishly from his lips. The chair at his left giggled. Potter scowled in the direction of the giggle and found himself contemplating a girl of about his own age with gold-brown eyes that laughed at him mischievously from a perky oval face. In contrast to the ivory of her skin, the chestnut hair rippled back in an effective frame.

"Never mind, Harlem," she consoled.

Potter's scowl relaxed. The girl laughed. "You'll get over it; but you'll never look the same. Wait until they get you playing croquet!"

The Kid's eyes widened. "Where do you get the Harlem stuff?" he demanded.

She looked away a moment, then his way again.

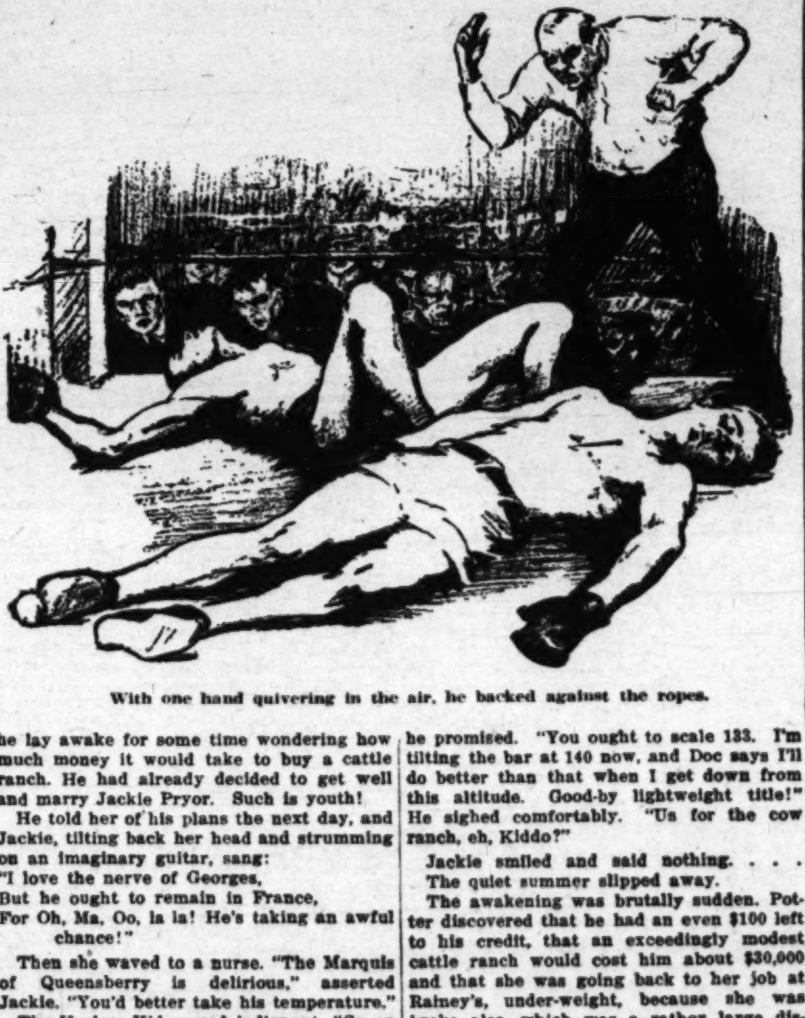
"Wismer told me all about you. Ever go into Rainey's on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, just off the Square?"

"Ask me did I ever pull on a glove!" protested Potter. "Why, say—what do you know about Rainey's?"

"I worked there," she answered.

Slim arms stole from the blankets and swayed rhythmically as she hummed a popular refrain. Something in the turn of her head and the witchery of her smile electrified the Harlem Kid. He sat bolt upright and swung his legs to the floor.

"Ive seen you there!" he wheezed. "I've heard you sing that! I live only two blocks away! Oh, Baby, shake!"



With one hand quivering in the air, he backed against the ropes.

When the Harlem Kid retired that night, he lay awake for some time wondering how much money it would take to buy a cattle ranch. He had already decided to get well and marry Jackie Pryor. Such is youth!

He told her of his plans the next day, and Jackie, tilting back her head and strumming on an imaginary guitar, sang:

"I love the nerve of Georges,
But he ought to remain in France,
For Oh, Ma, Oo, la la! He's taking an awful chance!"

Then she waved to a nurse. "The Marquis of Queensberry is delirious," asserted Jackie. "You'd better take his temperature."

The Harlem Kid waxed indignant. "Go on away! I never felt better in my life. I could step twenty! I could—step—" He made a valiant effort, failed and fell back disconsolate.

When the nurse had gone, the girl plucked at Potter's sleeve.

"Don't weaken, Harlem," she whispered. "We keep each other alive up here just by kidding; it's part of the treatment. You're the seventh man that's proposed, and—and——"

"Never mind apologizing," groaned the Kid. "I'm down for the count."

"Well, you better get right up," she admonished. "I was only going to say that seven is my lucky number, and as for a cattle ranch, that's my idea of heaven. So there!"

As the weeks unfolded and he gained in strength, Potter was enrolled in the cast of the San Rosario All-Star Theatrical Company, which presented nightly in the big recreation room the original version of that gladsome comedy, "Carry On."

From Cecil Bigbee, a British aviator who wore an extraordinary variety of absurd caps, an equally absurd mustache and cane, and a decoration on his flying colors which belied all the absurdity, the Harlem Kid learned the gentle art of entertaining others at his own expense. Just as Bigbee affected an exaggerated drawl and accent, and Max Epstein, millionaire tobacconist, secretly practised a dialect to live up to expectations, so the Harlem Kid imitated the mannerisms and vocabulary of Louie the Fish and Abdul the Turk and sundry others who fulfilled, in a measure, the popular conception of prize-fighters.

Under the circumstances it was to be expected that the Harlem Kid and Cliff Rainey's star show-girl should fall in love. They were both from the Big Town; both were young, and both had known the favor of the public.

It was Jackie who pointed out still another thing in common.

"You needn't think you were the only one who didn't dare eat a square meal, Harlem. A girl who can't make 120 ringside gets no job at Rainey's or any other place. Nobody likes their flappers fat!"

Potter frowned. "If I catch anybody calling you a flapper, I'll knock their block off," he promised. "You ought to scale 133. I'm tilting the bar at 140 now, and Doc says I'll do better than that when I get down from this altitude. Good-by lightweight title!" He sighed comfortably. "Us for the cow ranch, eh, Kiddo?"

Jackie smiled and said nothing. . . .

The quiet summer slipped away.

The awakening was brutally sudden. Potter discovered that he had an even $100 left to his credit, that an exceedingly modest cattle ranch would cost him about $30,000 and that she was going back to her job at Rainey's, under-weight, because she was broke also, which was a rather large discovery to make all in one day. He hunted up Wismer and demanded the truth about the girl. The physician was unprofessionally frank.

"The cafe life in New York will kill her. She needs another year at San Rosario, and if I owned the place or had the money, I'd stake her to it. She ought to stay in this climate forever."

"And me?" asked the Kid.

"Take care of yourself, and you're all right. But I wouldn't fight any more.

The Harlem Kid thanked him mechanically.

"Doc," he said, "I want you to transfer that hundred to the account of Mrs. Potter, and there'll be more coming right along."

"Mrs. Potter?"

"Yes, I'm going to marry Jackie in the morning and leave on the afternoon train. She stays here until she's cured — understand? I'll guarantee the bill."

The Kid was fully aware that all depended, finally, on the manner in which he made his appeal to Jackie.

Between the time he left Wismer and located the object of his search in the summer-house, Potter had time to invent a wealthy uncle in California, an equally fictitious monthly allowance and a mysterious job as a traveling salesman.

Jackie was 19, exceedingly lonely and very much in love. She stood out for an hour against the Kid's eloquence and then lost the decision on points. The lunch-bell rang and they did not answer the summons. Bigbee was delegated to conduct the search.

Potter had just pointed out that with a cattle ranch "everything would be jake," when Bigbee blundered in with a "'Ello, 'ello—I say, what's up?" He paused, astounded, and then turned to bolt, but the future Mrs. Potter seized his coat tails.

"It's all right, old dear," she cried. "We want you to be the best man; don't we, Dick. And you'll have to go on making love to me afterward, because Harlem's going away and I'm—I'm not!"

"Yes, you are," contradicted the Kid, "just as soon as I can get a stake."

"Oh, I say!" Bigbee protested. "You don't mean it! Really? Eh, what? Oh, lovely! Lovely!"

So they were married in the morning on the sun porch, with the Rev. Peter Standridge, a new arrival, officiating.

It was Max Epstein who, suspecting the true state of affairs, carried his suspicions and a $1000 check to Dr. Wismer.

"My dear young Christian friend," said the cigar dealer, "suppose it we cut the rates for the little Mrs. Box-Fighter?"

After all the goodbys had been said, Potter bumped away down the mountain road, accompanied by Cecil Bigbee. Just before train time, the Englishman turned to his friend rather wistfully.

"I say, you're a lucky beggar, you know—having an uncle and all that sort of thing, eh?"

"Uncle, hell!" exclaimed the Kid. "The only relative I've got is right back there on the hill. Listen, Biggy, you're a good sport, and I want you to look out for her. Jolly her along if she gets blue, and for the love of Mike, keep the sporting pages away from her."

The Englishman's blue eyes lighted. "Cheerio, lad," he called as the train moved out. "If I don't see you again, I'm damned glad to have met you, eh?"

Leaning out the car window, Potter fancied that Bigbee leaned a little heavier than usual on his cane, and that the skin over his cheekbones appeared almost transparent. Gripping his own palms, he signaled a parting clasp to the man on the platform. Bigbee smiled and touched his visor. The Harlem Kid always remembered that salute.

Arriving in Deming, it took Potter only twenty-four hours to learn that most of New Mexico was worrying along without the aid of either fight promoters or sporting editors. In desperation he telegraphed the matchmaker of a club at Vernon, Los Angeles, offering his services in exchange for transportation. And although Harry McCarl needed new talent badly and had heard of the Harlem Kid, the return message read:

"Nothing doing advance. Hundred and refund ticket if you win."

Potter covered the 728 miles to California in three days by serving as a valet to a cattle shipment. Hustling out to the Vernon pavilion, he discovered — which he hadn't known—that it was Friday night and the regular weekly card was in order. He managed to locate McCarl just in time. The matchmaker was making a frantic eleventh-hour search for a substitute to go on with Knockout Dailey in the semi-wind-up.

McCarl regarded the Kid dubiously. "You're too light; Dailey's got it on you by fifteen pounds."

"Never mind," Potter responded. "I've been living on doughnuts for three days. Stake me to a meal around the corner and I'll come back and show you something."

But when he climbed into the ring an hour later, in borrowed tights and shoes, he experienced a curious sense of distaste for his surroundings.

He might have lost the fight right there had not a big man at the ringside suddenly climbed into his corner with a yell and encircled him with an affectionate hug. It was Abdul the Turk, wild with delight and looking like a million dollars. The giant ripped off his coat and collar and rolled up his sleeves.

"I take you, Keed!" he shouted. "Look out, boys, he is all mine. What you say, Keed? Just like old times! We keel heem together, eh?"

The Harlem Kid brought in the bacon in the second round with the ol' 'one-two" to the jaw. He went home with Abdul after signing up for three more fights at catchweights and a guarantee that assured a certain girl at least two more months at San Rosario.

CARE OF THE BODY.

meats," Seaholm said. "But with prohibition here, you should see the change. The boys take sweets. If they don't get sweets, they go some place where they will be served their pastry and ice cream. It costs us about 60 per cent more money to feed them now than before prohibition."

Quite naturally. Nothing is more adapted to create alcohol than a mixture of refined white flour, sugar, fruit and fat.

In a magazine article, an M. D. recently asserted that the average person manufactures two quarts of alcohol, daily, from the food he eats.

This is exaggerated, but it is a fact that the average person manufactures much more alcohol than is consumed by a temperate drinker of alcoholic beverages.

Moreover, the stomach still also produces gas, the cause of many physical ills. Therefore, alcohol manufactured in this way is more lastingly injurious than such as is consumed in the shape of beverages already fermented.

Prohibitionists, who are ignorant of the laws of diet, may deny that they are perambulating stills, enjoying a continuous quiet jag, but ask them to give up sugar.

Following is by Edith Rockwood, in the Arizona Republican:

"Within my little innards I have a little still,
And when I eat a little food, as anybody will Who doesn't weigh so very much and has no strength to lose,
The dietetic geezers claim that I am making booze.

They say a little sugar and of starch a trifling bit,
And other wicked things I eat without a-knowing it;
Well, when they're mixed together, though the mixing is well meant,
The consequences far exceed the legalized per cent.

Oh, if those prohibition agents ever smell
my breath,
They'll put me in the cooler and they'll make me starve to death;
I always have obeyed the law, I swear I always will;
But, jinks! I don't know what to do about my little still!"

Climate.

SOME easterners think that because it is so mild here in winter, it must be very hot in summer. This is not so. Here are temperatures on July 13:

New York	82
Boston	86
Philadelphia	82
Cincinnati	92
Indianapolis	92
Omaha	94
Chicago	89
Los Angeles	81

Moreover, temperature is relative. A temperature of 100 degrees in the dry atmosphere of California is more comfortable than a temperature of 80 in a humid atmosphere, where perspiration is not free.

Dollars and Disarmament.

IT IS a caustic comment on the materialistic tendencies of the age, that while the suffering and misery of humanity failed to arouse among "captains of industry," in various countries, any enthusiastic support of efforts to obtain disarmament, and world peace, the prospect that Germany, forcibly relieved of the burdens of militarism, might be able to control world trade, should immediately have caused a great revulsion of feeling.

However, no matter in what way it comes: Let us have peace. The workers of the world are weary of war.

Signs of Indigestion.

FOLLOWING is from a book by Viola Kimmel:

"Imperfect digestion and malassimilation, or cell-starvation, are proclaimed whenever there is a red nose; puffed skin under the eyes; rough, muddy, or pimply skin; chapped lips; eyes glued together in the morning, after the night's sleep; a coated or raw tongue; tender gums; ulcers anywhere in the mouth; bad teeth; a bad breath; a gnawing at the stomach; abnormal craving for food or drink; poor eyesight; deafness; peevishness, general bad temper, and unreasonableness.

"The more often one eats, the more cooked food one eats, and the greater the variety of food one eats, whether it be cooked or uncooked, the more these signs will be in evidence, and the less charm and magnetism will their owner have, and the greater will be his chances for failure in whatever he undertakes to accomplish. And, as time goes by he will undertake less and less and become more and more inefficient."

Abdul and the Harlem Kid made a good pair, Abdul uncannily dextrous as a trainer and faithful as a St. Bernard, Potter cool-headed, intelligent and a born fighter.

For a while they prospered amazingly. The mild climate, the absence of any demand that he reduce weight, and the fact that California's four-round game was ideally suited to the Kid's style of battle, combined to develop both his strength and his value as a drawing card. Rather than descend to the lightweight class, he fought at 142 pounds or more and blithely claimed the welterweight championship of the Pacific Coast. Though letter writing was not one of his accomplishments, he managed after every battle to scrawl long messages on hotel stationery to San Rosario, and his efforts to account satisfactorily for the money-orders were so ambiguous that Jackie became first suspicious, then alarmed, and was only quieted by Cecil Bigbee's assurance waiting for the bell to ring. It helped to steady his nerves.

When opponents became scarce in the south, they moved to San Francisco and scored more successes in that city and across the bay in Oakland. The Kid now began to get offers from Chicago and even from New York, where fifteen-round fights were now permitted, but the offers were conditioned that he knew what her husband was doing and that "it was quite all right, but a fearfully jolly secret!"

Nevertheless, Jackie deemed it wise to preach a little bit in her letters and to make up for it at the end by telling him how much she loved him. The Harlem Kid committed some sentences in particular to memory and meditated upon them in his corner while on his making the lightweight limit, and he disdained replying.

Finally Pat Griffin, towing a couple of heavyweights, and in search of smaller timber, came out from New York just in time to see the Kid outbox Denny Malloy, the Denver crack.

"If you can do 133 pounds," said the Irishman, "I can land you a match with Joe Vesper."

In the last month Potter had become more and more aware of the fact that there was no big money to be made in the welter class, and it was big money that the Kid was after—now.

"I don't think I could make it, Pat," he said truthfully, "not unless I cut off a leg."

Griffin nodded. "I thought not, and it's too bad. Vesper can't make the weight, either, any more, but he's champion, and you know what that means."

"Sure; he won't weigh in himself, but he makes the other guy get down to thirty-three, and that gives him a ten-pound advantage. I could have made 133 a few months ago, but not now."

The Irishman raised inquiring eyebrows.

"I was in a hospital," explained the Kid.

"Oh," commented Griffin, and waved a hand in dismissal of the subject.

Potter went back to his hotel and found a three-page letter from his wife, a letter that was different from her usual cheery epistles. At the bottom was a postscript:

"Dear old Biggy passed out during the night, and oh, Dick, I'm terribly scared. Can't we take up some government land right away? I've saved some of the money you sent—enough maybe to make a start. I'm dreaming horrid things about you, too, Dick—what does it all mean?"

The Harlem Kid routed Abdul out of bed that night, and standing in the middle of the latter's room, flung off his own night-clothes.

"Look me over, Ab," he commanded, "and tell me if I could get down to 133."

The Turk was wide awake on the instant. The question was a challenge to all his ability as a trainer and handler of human flesh. He circled the room barefooted, eyes studying the frame of his friend, noting particularly the thighs and waist-line and hips, for it is from these portions of the body alone a fighter can spare the pound of flesh, never the legs nor the shoulders. Finally he sat down on the bed and swore disconsolately. There was no excess fat on Potter's body.

"What you weigh now, Keed?"

"Forty-two, I guess."

"Dam'! I take five pound off by sweat; I dry out three more, but how I take heem other pound?"

"That's for you to dope out. If Griffin can get the weight hour at 3 o'clock and the fight at 10, I'll sign."

He left Abdul still muttering: "Where I get heem the last pound?"

The next day the Harlem Kid held a long conference with Pat Griffin which ended in his telling the veteran manager the whole story. And it was on the advice of Griffin, who knew a lot about the temperament of fighters, that the Kid wrote to Jackie, and with a single exception, told her the truth. He said nothing about the weight, but told her that the title match would surely give them their needed stake, and that she could figure on the ranch right now.

"I ain't got any rich uncle, Sis," he concluded, "and I couldn't sell a glass of water in the desert. All I can do is fight, and I promise I won't do it any more if I can just make this one clean-up so we can grab that ranch. Now, don't you worry, Sis; and if you ain't mad, I wish you'd wire me."

Three days later he got this reply:

"Go get him, Kid; I love you more than ever."

The Harlem Kid never did find out that Pat Griffin, shrewdest manager in the business, had sent a 200-word night-message to Mrs. Potter, pledging her husband's safety and promising to start with the Kid for San Rosario the day after the match, no matter what the result.

No sooner had the articles been signed, calling for a fifteen-round bout, with the challenger weighing in at 3 in the afternoon, than Griffin turned the Harlem Kid over to Abdul the Turk.

"I've done my part," he said. "Now you do yours, and don't forget there's a $10,000 forfeit up on his making the weight."

Where weight-reduction is the all-important consideration, the tragedy of the training period is reserved for the final two weeks, and it is the last five days that constitute the pugilist's Gethsemane. There is a preliminary vacation, usually in the mountains, and this fortnight frolic is a delusion and a snare, designed solely to build up the body to the point where it can withstand the shock that is in store for it.

When the Harlem Kid came back from the Sierras and settled down to the grind of road-work at San Rafael, he knew what was expected of him, but the first time he donner the rubber undershirt and Abdul swathed waist and chest in the tight flannel bandages, his spirits sank—and Griffin resorted, ahead of time, to the old trick of adjusting the scales so that when they weighed in the last thing at night, Potter believed himself making better progress than he really was. Day by day the road-work in the hot sun lengthened, the weight and tightness of bandages and clothing was increased, the ration of water which his body craved was decreased, and his real weight dropped to 139, then to 138, and then a half-pound less. But on the third day before the contest after four hours on the road, and two more in the gymnasium with lunch omitted, he weighed exactly the same as the day before.

The body began to send its telegraphic protest to the brain, and the Kid lay awake to the rhythmic subconscious demand: "A hundred and thirty-three at 3—a hundred and thirty-three at 3."

Griffin consulted with Abdul the Turk.

"He can't stand any more sweating; dry him out. Nothing but a cup of coffee in the morning after this."

Potter held to the road work, and his salivary glands dried up completely.

The morning of the contest he took only strong coffee and Abdul, sniffling like a child, rubbed off the final pound.

At exactly 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Harlem Kid, naked as the day he was born, stepped on the scales at the San Francisco Presidio and held his breath. The bar, set at 133 pounds, trembled, lifted, settled back—and the Kid toppled off into the arms of Abdul the Turk. Pugilism's Shylock had his pound of flesh.

In the scant seven hours that was given them, Pat Griffin and the trainer threw all their skill and strategy into the task of rehabilitating Harlem. Within fifteen minutes after weighing in, they had him in a restaurant around the corner, where a heavy meal was already waiting him. He was permitted to eat and drink his fill, and then after a brief auto ride they put him to bed in a hotel not half a block distant from the huge pavilion, and there he remained, sipping beef tea at regular intervals.

This was Pat Griffin's cue to display the genius that had made his name synonymous with ring success. He locked the Kid's door and sat down by the bedside.

"Harlem," he began quietly, "you know me—I've never been behind the wrong man in my life. You won the fight when you stepped on those scales, and I'll tell you why. You're going against the cleverest boxer in the business, and he's got all his plans laid to tire you out over fifteen rounds, knowing that you're weak at the weight, and all he has to do is to keep away and outbox you. But we know, Harlem, that it's going to be a four-round fight—the fastest four rounds that any lightweights ever traveled."

Potter raised his head from the pillow. "Four?"

"Four," confirmed the Irishman, maybe less; you're going to knock him out. Now, you listen: Vesper is part Mexican and part Indian, and that means he's a front runner and he can't stand the gaff. This is what we're going to do."

His voice trailed off into a confidential mumble, and the Kid listened intently. An hour passed, and then Griffin pulled his trump card. From an inside pocket he produced two railroad tickets and held them up for Potter's inspection.

"We leave at 9 o'clock in the morning for San Rosario," he said, "and I'm going to help you pick out that ranch. Take another swig of tea and go to sleep."

One hour before ring time Griffin saw to it that the Kid was awakened and handed him an inspired telegram that read:

"Remember Dick, carry on.—Jackie."

The referee had concluded his instructions with an admonitory, "Shake hands as you come out," when the Harlem Kid spoke up:

"We'll shake hands now."

The champion grinned, extended his gloves in a sweeping movement and walked back to his corner. To the surprise of the great crowd the challenger remained in the middle of the ring, eyes fixed intently on his opponent's corner. His gloves were drawn into position, his feet braced under him for a spring, and his head thrust slightly forward. In the curve of his slim body there was the sinister suggestion of a catapult that needed but the lightest touch on the trigger to accomplish its mission. More extraordinary still was the eagerness manifested in every taut, quivering muscle and limb of the Pride of Harlem.

Quick protests broke from the opposite corner. The referee hastened forward. "What's the idea?" he demanded.

Potter's eyes remained riveted on his opponent; his soft shoes squirmed into the canvas; his crouching body tensed still more.

"Ring the bell," he snapped. "I don't have to go to my corner, and you know it."

The referee hesitated and was lost. He backed away and signaled to the timekeeper. The bang of the bell and Potter's spring were almost simultaneous.

The Harlem Kid remembered the stroke of the gong, remembered clearly the leap that carried him into his opponent's corner, and the sting of the first blow that he drove home against the champion's heart, but after that his body was a machine automatically responding to subconscious suggestion. He himself was back at San Rosario under turquoise skies, listening to the prattle of a girl.

The four-round game teaches a man speed, speed—and still more speed. The drying-out process takes the last bit of loginess from the system. The Harlem Kid was naturally an aggressive, two-handed fighter of the hurricane type. And now, under Griffin's instructions, he had become a fistic cyclone that from the tap of the gong carried the battle to the man in the other corner.

In the heavier, tawny frame of Jose Vesperandez, known to the world as Joe Vesper, the blood of the Pimans flowed. For two minutes he covered up and waited for the storm to subside, but as the tumult from floor and galleries increased, and the challenger's gloves ripped at his ribs and head with increasing speed, his control crumpled.

Ignoring the advice of his seconds, he abandoned footwork and science and elected to mix with the man who had dared to show him up.

The bell clanged repeatedly, signaling the end of the round, and still the Harlem Kid and the king of the lightweights stood toe to toe in a thunder of gloves until they were pried apart.

That too was part of Griffin's plan, for it brought Joe Vesper up for the second round with his nostrils wide and the light of anger in his small black eyes.

Again the Harlem Kid leaped to the attack, and the telegraph instruments beat a staccato chorus as the ringside experts strove vainly to follow the most amazing pace they had ever seen in a title match. Only one man, a veteran scribe for the biggest news service of the country, grasped the significance of the round.

"Potter is fighting against time," he dictated. "It looks like a knockout in the next, or a decision for the champ."

Pat Griffin knew the truth when the Harlem Kid sank into his corner after rocking his opponent again and again until the roar of the hunting pack rang full and clear against the rafters. He cast one glance down at Abdul, working furiously on the boy's quivering legs, and another at Joe Vesper, his head tilted back on the ropes, his eyes closed, and his chest heaving spasmodically. Then for the first time in his life the Irishman seized a sponge and prepared to toss the token of defeat into the ring. He knew that Potter would not last out the round—and there was the girl at San Rosario.

Abdul the Turk, looking up, guessed the meaning of the sponge. He grabbed it from Griffin's hand and squeezed it against the Kid's bleeding lips.

"You got heem, Keed," he coached. "She's las' round now. What your girl say if you don' win?"

And in that final question from his trainer the Harlem Kid found strength enough to fling himself into the third round with undiminished aggressiveness. His body registering its protests continually, was still obedient to his stronger will, when the end came. He had pulled himself free of a clinch and was starting a left for the head, when the champion beat him to it. The blow caught him above the ear; and off balance, he dropped to the floor. In a flash he was up, with all his remaining strength concentrated in a wild right swing.

The human mind acts quickly under the stress of danger, but the muscles do not always obey. Potter saw the glove of the champion stab out in a right cross and knew that his own blow was too late to beat it. His brain telegraphed an appeal to the left hand for protection, but the hand was paralyzed. At the instant his outflung fist crashed his last flash of consciousness burned into his brain the realization that he could not get to his feet in the ten seconds allotted against its objective, every nerve in his body relaxed under one blow that jarred him into insensibility. He pitched backward, and his last flash of consciousness burned into his brain the realization that he could not get to his feet in the ten seconds allotted him, but that he must try.

From Abdul the Turk broke a frenzied yell that split the lower-pitched crescendo.

"Mother of Allah!" he shrieked. "Who go down first?"

For the space of three stupefied seconds Pat Griffin remained glued to his place at the ring-post, his lips agape, his eyes looking across the fallen body of the Harlem Kid to the figure of Joe Vesper sprawled under the ropes of his own corner. One glance at the referee's startled face and his swinging arm, tolling the count of four, and the Irishman awoke to action. He fought his way around the edge of the platform to a spot in back of the referee and grabbed at the latter's ankles.

"Billy—Billy, suspend time! You can't count 'em both out—stop at nine—stop at nine!"

The frenzied message penetrated the pandemonium. The third man in the ring recognized in the advice the only possible solution to a problem new to the prize ring. His voice rang clear and true in the knockout litany:

"Seven—eight—nine and——"

With one hand quivering in the air, he backed against the ropes, wide eyes set on the two supine figures palpitating on the canvas floor. The tenth second was officially suspended!

Back to the spot nearest the Harlem Kid plowed Pat Griffin, but Abdul the Turk was ahead of him, a howling Hercules wielding a water-soaked sponge and pounding like a maniac on the padded platform. Bedlam reigned in the corner of the champion.

Two seconds ticked by, and the slim figure of the Harlem Kid stirred and rolled over. The bronze body of Joe Vesper quivered, and his arms threshed the floor. Somewhere deep in the brain cells of both was stirring the age-old conflict of the races.

Griffin was no anthropologist, but he knew the history of the ring.

"White skin against dark," he trumpeted. "Come on, Harlem!"

The poised arm of the referee descended over the squirming figure of Joe Vesper.

"And out!" he cried. But no one heard him.

Abdul the Turk was through the ropes in time to catch the toppling form of the Harlem Kid.

They put him to bed in the little hotel room—Griffin, Abdul, Nosey Mundorff and others of the jubilant retinue. It was then that an awe-struck messenger boy came.

Griffin snatched at the blank. "Now, champion," he chortled, "we'll shoot a wire to the missus. What'll it be?"

The Harlem Kid looked at the eager faces around him and sensed that they expected something snappy—something with a kick in it. He strove to rise to the occasion, but after a moment's pondering gave it up. He grinned sheepishly at the blue timetable on his bed and the tickets to Silver City.

"Aw, you frame it, Grif," he urged. "You know what she wants—tell her—just tell her everything's jake."

Maltreating the Spine.

NOW they are sticking needles into the spine. An instrument is already out, and probably there will be scores of victims who go to some physician and insist on using this dangerous invention. It is a terrible thing to think that a so-called "medicine man" should be sticking needles into the spinal column. A physician writes that he has seen several persons paralyzed from the waist down, from the use of such needles, and no end of trouble is liable to follow this practice, which is becoming quite popular, to collect an extra $25. He adds:

"Intra-spinal pressure can be changed in one hour by means of spinal manipulation, or powerful radiant light over the back. This machine is got up by those who wish to graft upon physicians, and some physicians will be foolish enough to fall for it. Their patients will be the victims, and the undertakers will be the final reapers of the reward."

A Medical Clown.

COLLIER'S recently published an article by our old friend, Woods Hutchinson, medical clown, and professional apologizer for human frailties, in which he urged people to eat anything they like, and as much as they like—including relishes, pickles, etc. —anything that "tastes good." Says he: "At least ten times as much illness and defectiveness and deficiency comes from eating too little as from eating too much."

Commenting on this article, a San Francisco correspondent writes:

"The inclosed two pages of 'rare orthodox' wisdom on diet, by our old friend with the stoop shoulders, 'Hutch,' I doubt not will bring a smile to you as it would to anyone—even an ordinary poor misguided layman, considered ignorant in almost every sense of the word—providing he merely stopped to think.

"The idiocies he foists on the public, through popular magazines, is merely an indication of the ignorance prevailing on the part of publishers and the public in general regarding simple fundamentals concerning health, particularly as to diet. Your department, spread broadcast, and widely read, would soon put Hutch out of the running, if your wisdom was heeded and practiced."

No intelligent student of the laws of health takes Hutchinson seriously.

Twenty-five Years Ago.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago—on July 9, 1896—the Los Angeles Express ran this item:

"The Orpheum Theater will display an entirely new set of pictures projected on a canvas screen by the Edison's Vitascope, a recent invention of Edison's, which reproduces scenes of real life of startling fidelity to nature, showing every movement as naturally as life itself. The pictures will include views of Niagara, showing the tremendous volume of water plunging over the falls. There are only two other vitascopes in the country, one in New York and the other in Boston. Chicago, Washington and the other large cities have not yet seen this latest wonderful invention."

What marvels we have seen introduced during the past generation—moving pictures, talking machines, telephones, automobiles, airships, wireless telegraphy, electric light, electric cars, and many others.

Who shall be so bold as to predict what new wonders the rising generation may live to behold?

Will they be happier than our grandparents?

Auto Accidents.

LOS ANGELES excels in many things. Even in auto accidents.

Los Angeles ranks as the most dangerous of the large cities of the United States, in an analysis of automobile fatalities for last year in eight cities, according to reports made public recently by Carl Smith, manager of the Mississippi Valley division of the National Safety Council.

The analysis is based on the rate of automobile accidents per 1,000,000 population for last year.

Los Angeles leads the list with a rate of 268.6. The list follows:

Los Angeles, 268.6; Cincinnati, 179.5; Detroit, 169.5; Chicago, 164.9; Pittsburg, 162.4; Milwaukee, 143.0; New York, 134.7; St. Louis, 131.2.

This is an eminence that we would wish to see lowered.

We have examinations for almost every line of business. Why should any incompetent be permitted to drive an automobile?

Cantilever Shoe for Men & Women
They Hug the Arch

Cantilever Shoes are the only shoes which truly hug the arch, giving to the small bones and muscles of the foot the support they need. In Cantilever Shoes the foot need not flatten down to meet the underarch sole; instead the sole is drawn up, as the laces are pulled, till the shoe meets the foot at every point, fiting closely and holding the arch restfully as a doctor's bandage.

The shank of the Cantilever Shoe is not rigid. It is flexible, yielding with the movement of the foot muscles, which are thus left freeto exercise and grow strong.

The first pair brings welcome relief from foot troubles, and the Cantilever habit will encourage an easy carriage and increase your health and efficiency.

Sunshine and Shadow in Elysian Valley.

BY ERNEST G. BISHOP.

BEAUTY does never from the hills depart; there is the beauty of the storm and tempest as well as the glory of the golden sun and the tranquil sky.

Never have I found such bewildering changes of climate as there are in Elysian Valley. One day dawns sunny and warm; there is not a cloud in sight. From the vast expanse of blue the sun pours its mellow warmth upon the earth. Towards noon a cloud no bigger than a man's hand appears upon the horizon; other clouds follow, and soon the gray hosts of chilling mists roll over the mountains and out into the valley, submerging all evidence of life within their fleecy folds. Now the wind blows shrilly, a deepening darkness settles over the earth with spraylike moisture sifting down from the somber clouds. At such times I read the open book of the heavens, chop an armful of wood, and sit by the blazing fire while the adverse elements contend overhead.

And also there are raging windstorms. Never have I seen such winds as blow across the level expanse of the valley. Over the low barriers from the direction of the setting sun leaps the west wind, skipping merrily across the treeless fields, rolling the dry tumble weeds for great distances and finally heaping them high against the north and south fences. Ordinarily the west wind is moderate in its sweep and force and it is always invigorating. It springs up early in the morning to temper the warmth of the mid-day sun. It is a welcome visitor, being always cool and refreshing.

Impossible to Keep Warm When Storms Rage.

TOWARDS the north the mountains slope downward and then rise again. Through the defile thus formed comes the monarch of the winter, the north wind, raging and howling mightily. Whenever the breezes shift to this quarter I know that a real storm is on the way. I have read of traveling teacherages. In this category my cabin almost qualifies, being a light, portable affair totally unfitted for the rigors of a mountain climate. It faces northward. When I discern a storm heading southward over the mountain tops, prepared to expend all its energy in a drive across the valley, I immediately prepare to meet it. The front window is closed, the door locked, and the trunk is wedged against it. The rains descend, and the driving gale blows the water about in a Niagara-like fineness of spray. It sifts in under the door, collecting in rivulets that trickle across the floor. Through the keyhole pours a stream as if shot out of a nozzle. And the cabin rocks, creaks, shakes, and threatens to move. Fortunately, the lean-to at the rear, being built of substantial timbers, anchors the main structure to the ground. During these northers the wind searches out every crack and crevice, so that even with a roaring fire of hard, dry oak it is impossible to keep warm. With all doors and windows securely closed, the gusts of air blow so vigorously that the lamp can scarcely be kept lighted. So, there is only one thing to do: turn out the flickering flame and go to bed. As early as 6 o'clock in the evening this has been necessary. Under the blankets I lay listening to the ceaseless patter and roar.

My predecessors upon sighting these storms abandoned the cabin and took up their abode in the schoolroom as a safer place to weather the wintry gales.

But not all the storms descend to the depth of the valley. In the early autumn I watched the showers falling upon the higher altitudes, while the sun was shining about me. Later in the year, while the rains descended in the valley, the low-lying mists buried the mountains from sight. Then when the rains ceased and the mists lifted there lay a crown of snow upon the far peaks, white and chill. With every storm the snow line crept farther down the mountains, one day melted back by the warm sun, and again extending downward with each succeeding storm.

However, not all the snow remained on the high peaks and slopes. Several times the valley floor has been covered to the depth of several inches. Often I have gone to bed at night with no evidence of snow in sight. When I awaken in the morning the powdery mantle lies upon the ground and encrusts the fence wires and posts. The landscape stretches away in all directions a sea of pure white. Often on the same day that the snow falls a bright sun comes wheeling over the eastern ramparts of rocks and trees, and before night all trace of the white crystals has disappeared except in the sheltered nooks and hollows.

The Mists of Morning.

It is interesting to observe the behavior of the range animals during a storm. When the gales are blowing and the snow is falling heavily the cattle seek the shelter of trees and brush; when the weather clears they wander about the range bawling disconsolately because the vegetation is covered up. On the other hand the sheep face in the direction of the heaviest storm and nibble away as if the elements were calm. Instead of worrying about the weather they move into patches of sagebrush and pick the soft, tender grass at the base of the brush where the snow does not accumulate.

During a warm spell late last winter large flocks of robins came to the valley. The ground being moist, they found worms in abundance. Their mellow notes at evening recalled apple blossom time in the East. To me their vesper songs are the most beautiful of all bird music, especially in the quiet hours when the night is still. From my desk in the school room I watched them hopping about in the sunshine industriously "listening" for worms and pulling them out of the ground with great dexterity. Filled with the warmth of the sunshine and with good cheer they chirped their liquid notes from roof and fencepost. Then came the storm, and most of them sought the shelter of the canyons. A few hardy souls remained, chirping bravely to keep up their courage. The joyous caroling of the meadowlark is the familiar sound we associate with fields abloom with springtime flowers, but this cheery songster is always stout of heart and full of courage. During robin weather the valley resounded with the poetry of the meadowlark's notes, liquid, melodious and trilling. During the storm that followed they perched in rows on the fences and sang as bravely and cheerily as if the ground were verdant with grass and flowers. They knew that there was a plentiful supply of weed seeds above the snow, and they had faith that the snow would soon melt away. And the blue birds, too, maintained their vigil upon the fence posts, undaunted and undismayed.

Sunrise Over Elysian Valley.

The Study of Wild Life a Never Ending Source of Joy.

WHAT a joy it is to saunter forth through the soft snow with my camera and study the wild life by its myriad tracks running in all directions. Rabbits, especially, like to dig their burrows at the base of cactus, buckthorn, wild gooseberry, or other thorny growth. Across the valley their runways lead in the direction of the barley stacks, one of their sources of food supply. As I wander along up jumps a long-eared "jack" from behind a clump of sagebrush and goes bounding away to a place of safety. Presently I come upon the tracks of a coyote, evidently one that was astir early in search of something for breakfast. Following his footprints, I come upon a bit of bloody fur in the trampled snow, mute evidence of the tragedy of the wild where life preys upon life. I observe the mounds of fresh, moist earth that the ground squirrel has cast up into the white snow. In a tree overhead a horned owl twists his head about so that his solemn, cat-like eyes can observe all my movements. He does not intend to be taken by surprise. A golden eagle surveys the landscape with a cold and calculating eye from the top of a dead pine. I endeavor to get close enough to take his picture, sitting there in majesty upon his lofty perch, but he refuses to pose and at my approach flies away.

One particular storm I well remember. A roaring wind was driving the falling snow about in swirls and gusts. Out into the raging elements I headed with a knitted cap pulled down over my face, bound for the ranch at which I get my mail. A shifting blanket of white hid all objects from view, trees and buildings alike. The faint depression made by a wagon track I followed, occasionally turning around with my back to the wind and searching for landmarks by which to chart my course. Finally a barley stack appeared ahead, and just beyond the ranch buildings loomed up out of the gathering darkness. I had reached my destination safely. The return trip with the storm at my back was uneventful.

Life in the Woods Develops a Sense of Direction.

I BELIEVE we all have a sixth sense, the sense of direction, more or less developed according to the use we make of it. Just before the midyear vacation I planned a Christmas tree for the children. To maintain secrecy I set off for a tree one moonlight night with my ax. Among the conifers across the flat I cut a tree and then turned homeward. Hardly had I started before a heavy fog rolled into the valley, completely obscuring all landmarks. So I hurried on, anxious to get home. Out in that trackless prairie there was absolutely nothing by which to establish my orientations. Turning as nearly as I could determine in the direction I wished to go I walked straight ahead, anxiously looking for the fence that bordered the school yard. In time I came upon another barbed wire fence running at right angles to my course. Following it in one way would take me back into the timber, while the other way led out into the flat. It was the latter course I desired. But which was the right course? Evoking my sense of direction, I finally turned to the right and followed the wire until I came to a road which I knew led past the school. After a detour of three miles I reached home without mishap, having once more met and overcome a forked road situation.

These heavy fogs are not numerous, but when one is caught out in the open country with all guide marks obscured it requires considerable effort to arrive at destination without undue floundering around or circling about looking for cues.

The mists upon the mountain slopes are glorious to behold. Some of these mist formations I endeavor to take pictures of, but with only partial success. The morning sun rises upon a curtain that hides the mountains completely. Soon a large opening appears in the gray wall, like a mammoth spotlight, and the trees and rocks stand clearly forth where the direct rays of the sun strike the mountain side. Again, the mists stretch over the peaks like a long gray scarf designed with pearls. The curtains rise, lift, and change their form continuously. Patches of the shadowy, tenuous substance appear here and there long after the great mass has dissolved, shot through and through with opalescent tints, the handiwork of the sun.

In May the rains are decidedly local. While the showers are falling in one place, not far away the skies are clear and the sun is shining. At almost any time the conditions are apt to reverse. In a stroll across the fields it is possible to walk from sunshine into the rain and out again.

Scenic Splendors of Upland Valleys Repay One for Trials.

THE weather does not conform to season. Strange as it may seem, there were more pleasant, sunny days in January than there were in the month of May. The old settlers declare that May is the stormiest month of the year.

The scenic splendors of mountain sunrises and sunsets are sublime beyond description —colorful, gorgeous and inspiring. I love especially the sunset hour and the myriad tints of the evening sky.

The western skies are the harbingers of good cheer and hope for the morrow. Often at evening time in the north and east the black storm clouds hover over the valley while the western sky is clear and calm. As the sun drops out of sight the heavens gleam a brilliant red that changes to bright yellow and finally pales and fades into the grayness of twilight.

Never have I seen a more glorious alpenglow than that which shines upon the snowy crest of Piute Mountain. The glow resembles molten gold. Upon this background of mellow light appears a faint aura of green, doubtless the reflection from the pines. This blending of the gold and green continues for some time, after which the colors change to deep blue, finally softening into the shades of night.

One of the most refreshing sights after a cloudy day is the appearance of the sunglow focused upon the high crests. From the valley floor there is no evidence of sun whatever. Contrasting with the heavy clouds that rim the mountains surrounding the flat is an oasis of sunlight gleaming over rocks and pines high upon the mountainside.

On one stormy evening the pall of approaching darkness began to settle over the land. Above Breckenridge Mountain the clouds parted and through the rift thus formed shone a radiance as clear as the noon-day and as colorful as light diffused through cathedral glass, converging upon a grove of pines growing far up the mountain, while the trees near them were almost buried under the mantle of darkness. Long I watched this play of sunshine and shadow, reveling in the sublime beauty of it all.

So far as I know, John Muir is the only writer who made constant observations of the clouds, describing them in his delightfully poetic manner. The mountains black with the wrath of approaching storms are just as beautiful and sublime as when a calm and serene sky looks down upon them. The days of storm, whether rain or snow, have a Tomatoes.

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "Some writers are condemning the tomato as a food. One author declares it is the worst enemy the liver has, that it will cause rheumatism, and another goes so far in denunciation as to say it causes cancer."

All foolish superstition. The tomato is a wholesome medicinal food, rich in the organic salts, and especially effective where the liver is congested.

It should, of course, never be eaten with starch food, but alone, on an empty stomach, or as part of a combination salad.

Whooping Cough.

THERE is probably no disease of childhood that is so amenable to cure by means of diet as whooping cough, yet whooping cough is responsible for more deaths among children than anyone realizes.

Charles E. Page, M. D., of Boston, Mass., says: "There is no disease in which therapeutic fasting acts so promptly and curatively as whooping cough, while continued feeding keeps up the inflammation of the stomach, and causes so much distress and so many deaths.

"Whooping cough is a stomach cough from the start, and if we give that organ time for rest and healing, the patient having small portions of fresh water occasionally, the trouble is soon over.

"Never, in thirty years of very busy practice, have I had a case in which the cough has kept up longer than from three to five days.

"Feeding a person who has whooping cough operates like banging the fist against a strong wall for barking the knuckles."

Mercenary Physicians.

A SAN FRANCISCO correspondent writes:

"Recently, a dentist was sitting in a doctor's office here, when the 'phone rang. It was a brother physician talking. The dentist heard the doctor tell his partner in crime, 'You get her in bed. I'll keep her there.' Also: 'I ought to get about $750 out of it, and your share will be about $500, and the hospital will get a handsome sum, and we'll get a share of that, etc.' When he had finished, the dentist asked him what the trouble was with the woman in question. The answer, with a wink, was 'Nothing.'"

Such mercenary physicians, who fatten on human suffering, are a disgrace to the profession.

Many honorable physicians whom I have the pleasure to number among my friends, deplore this condition as much as I do.

Why do the medical associations not make an effort to sweep around their own doors before they prosecute and persecute worthy members of other schools who are doing good?

Diphtheria.

DIPHTHERIA, like adenoids and enlarged tonsils, is mainly caused by overconsumption of starches and sweets. Dr. George Starr White writes:

"The keynote in treating diphtheria is to treat it when it first begins. This is best done by giving nothing but fruit juices.

"The bowels should be thoroughly cleared, by baking-soda enemas.

"Inhaling of steam, with oil of eucalyptus in it, is of great value.

"In some instances spraying the throat with a mixture of coal oil (kerosene) and olive oil, equal parts, is the local remedy.

"I am convinced that antitoxin is worse than useless for diphtheria. The manufacturers have a way of getting statistics published to look as if diphtheria were on the decrease by the use of antitoxins, but the fact remains that there are practically as many deaths today from diphtheria, directly or indirectly, as there were before antitoxin was ever used, and this in spite of the improved sanitary conditions now common.

"I have met very many old practitioners who have treated hundreds of cases of diphtheria, and never used antitoxin for it, and their percentage of deaths has been far less than those who used antitoxins.

"Giving a child antitoxin treatment to prevent diphtheria shows that we are getting back to superstition, as fast as commercialism will take us. Thousands of children are

"NEVER MISS MARY"

BY VALERIE WALKER.

Mary.

"YOURE not going to make the flight today, are you? The air is rather choppy."

Ted's friend seemed quite solicitous.

"Oh, I might as well; that Ranger field and this ship are about all that stand between me and starvation, so I'd better be getting over there."

Ex-Lieut. Theodore Rochester Wilde didn't look exactly as if he were starting out to conquer the world when he said that. He was like many of our brave boys; had had a pretty good start in life, in fact, had a promising law practice, but dropped everything to fly in France. When he left the service, he took a couple of scratches and a plane with him—though for the former he lost quite a bit of blood, and the latter—all the money he had saved during those three years. Somehow he did not feel that he could go back to his law practice and start over again from the beginning, and he had met one of his school friends in the Argonne who said that if they ever got back he would be glad to have Ted join him in the oil game at Ranger, Tex. Hence, our story.

Theodore Rochester Wilde did not look his name. He couldn't help that—the name. To his friends—and everyone was his friend—he was just "Ted."

Ted brushed back his straight black hair with a worried hand and looked at James Adkins solemnly, his wide, honest, gray eyes unusually serious.

"Thanks, Jimmie, for the fifty. Hope you will see it again—very, very soon. Good-by, old man."

"Good-by, Ted. I'm afraid you will be sorry you did not stay here and practice this profession, but I wish you all the luck in the world—you know that."

Ted slowly climbed into the pilot's seat and adjusted his headgear. Jimmie gave the propeller the necessary swing and watched the plane quizzically as it gracefully rose and dwindled out of sight.

As the plane soared into the air, Ted's spirits seemed to rise with it. The pleasant, excited what-nice-thing-is-in-store-for-me-next anticipation, which youth always feels upon expectant new surroundings and faces, came upon him; and his own sweet smile suddenly illumined his face again, as the little waves of air struck his nose and mouth.

. . . .

Miss Mary Smith was easily, comfortably and gracefully riding along a stretch of undeveloped leased land on a Mexican pony. She was garbed in khaki riding breeches, a khaki shirt open at the throat, and brown leather boots. She wore no hat, and to one approaching was revealed the full glory of her curly auburn hair. She had big brown eyes, a peaches-and-cream skin, a small, tip-tilted nose, and her mouth—well, altogether she most certainly did not look like "Miss Mary Smith." On being asked to guess her name, one would naturally say "Winifred Dorothea De Puyster" or some such. But Mary had a very business-like looking belt and holster around her waist, with the butt of an automatic peeping from its proper place. She was talking idly to the pony as she rode along.

"That's right, old boy, just take your time" (only she said "yoah tahm;") "we're not going any place in particular this afternoon—just scouting around—but you can't never always sometimes tell when——"

The roar of a powerful motor cut short her words and she looked up to see an airplane descending to earth. It swept over her head and made an easy landing about a hundred yards from her.

Mary resumed her conversation—if it could be called such—as she prodded the pony and rode toward the man from the sky.

"No, you can't tell at all who next will come snorting up—or down—to disturb the peace."

Ted had jumped from his seat, and was stretching his cramped limbs, when a lady with—yes, it was almost red—hair rode up and came to an abrupt halt before him and dismounted. Ted grinned. This was an unusual, though a very lovely welcome, he thought. But Mary did not smile.

"You are on private ground, sir," she said coolly and distinctly.

No, it was not quite so lovely, thought Ted—but she was very, very pretty. Everything cruel in life has its compensations. He became serious as he answered.

"I am sorry; it did not look as if anyone lived near here. Am I on your property?"

She drew herself up with dignity as she said: "No, sir, but I am Deputy Smith, and it is my duty to see that you either leave or make your business plain so that it will be known that you are o. k., sir. This is leased land—oil land, you know," she added, and smiled.

Ted had seen a lot of strange things in France, but a young lady deputy right here in America! He wanted to laugh but knew that would sign the death warrant of any friendship before it ever began. Instead, he smiled and said, "I've come pretty far; I'd hate to have to go right back because I have nowhere to lay my head. Do you happen to know where Samuel Wentworth is now drilling? It must be around here, for he said it was just this side of Ranger."

She noticed that he had earnest gray eyes, and how shiny black his hair was—and he was looking for Sam Wentworth! She bared her white, even teeth in an entrancing smile.

"Well, I should say I do! We're on his land right now. Right over the top of that hill," she pointed, "is his shack. He's drilling a new well there and is out in the field most all the time—think you'd find him pulling his ten-inch casing."

He looked in the direction she had indicated and said: "Thank you very much Miss—Deputy Smith. Had you intended going that way?"

"No," she shook her head, "I'd better be going toward town."

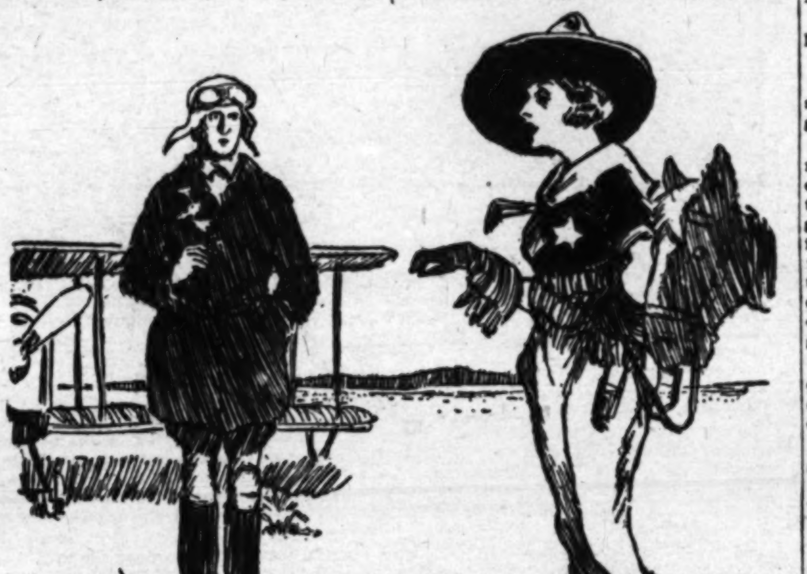
The man was loath to see her go out of his life like that. He said quickly: "My name is Wilde. I hope you come around here often—I think I'll be located with Wentworth for a while, and anything I can——"

"Oh, if you live up to your name I might be holding you up again one of these days," she interrupted gaily, turned her pony's head and was gone.

Ted watched her until she disappeared from view, then started for the hill. When he reached the top, he halted. Never having seen the oil fields before, except from high above where everything on earth appeared as little specks or big specks; the sight that met his eyes now almost took his breath away. In all directions there stretched away before him land thickly dotted with derricks. Silhouetted against the blue sky, each one significant of so much joy, or such vast disappointment; so much gained, or such tremendous loss, they looked like so many emissaries of fate.

Ted gazed, and said aloud, "Those thousands of oil-soaked rigs! How they have changed the lives of many men!"

He became aware of a slow ticking, as of a huge pendulum, and looked in the direction whence it came. It was from the nearest rig, which was pumping barrels of thick, black fluid which permits men of the earth to fly, and ride in horseless carriages; which fed the engines that carried our boys across to fight, and brought them back to us again.



Ted had seen a lot of strange things in France, but a young lady deputy right here in America!

There was a man standing near and Ted approached him.

"Happen to know where Samuel Wentworth is?" he asked.

"Yes, sir. He just drove to town a little while ago. Stops at the Commercial usually—expect you can find him there," he replied.

"Is this his well here?" asked Ted, indicating the one in motion.

"No, sir; he's sunk his over yonder," pointing to a rig about a hundred yards away. "He's been drilling some time now, but hasn't struck the main sand yet. I think he's having some trouble."

"Guess I'll go on into town," said Ted. "Straight ahead, is it?"

"Yes, sir, not very far; and you sure can't miss it."

"Thank you," said Ted, and started off.

As he walked along he found himself listening for the sound of horse's hoofs, and looking for the glint of the fading sun on red-gold hair. But as he approached the town he forgot his disappointment at not having his senses gratified.

Ranger was a typical boom town; sprang up overnight; had three high office buildings, fourteen hotels, five cabarets and no paved streets. A horse had drowned the week previous in the main street and the populace happily paid a quarter to be slid across the mud from one side to the other. One hears a lot about Texas mud—Ted hadn't been there five minutes before he decided he had most of it on the soles and heels of his shoes—and it was there to stay.

The crowds were so dense that he wondered vaguely if there was a circus at either end of the street. There were numerous horses tethered along the way among the many motor cars of all sizes and denominations. He saw ahead the sign "Commercial" and went toward it.

Suddenly he heard a shot—then another, and a Mexican came rushing from a place that was evidently a gambling den, leaped upon a horse and rode away. Right behind him came a long, lanky individual, garbed in a black suit and wearing a large black hat with a nickel badge on the front of it which bore a resemblance to a miner's lantern. The badge denoted his dignity as a member of the Ranger police force.

The wearer of the badge pulled a gun and started after the fast disappearing horse and rider. Just then a streak of chestnut, khaki and gold dashed by, a shot rang out and the Mex dropped from his saddle.

"Hooray! She never misses 'em!" said a little man next to Ted enthusiastically.

Ted smiled and went into the hotel.

"She's there, all right!" he thought to himself. "What it takes to be a deputy, she has got!"

He found Sam ensconced in his room, his rotund person sitting in one comfortable chair, a quart bottle half full of a white fluid to his right, a glass and several empty ginger ale bottles to his left, a pitcher of cracked ice over on the dresser, an aroma permeating the room which gave a strong clew as to the contents of the quart bottle, and a sad, dejected look on his erstwhile benignant countenance. But a smile lit his face as he grasped Ted's hand.

"Glad to see you, old topper. I'd just about decided you weren't going to accept your old buddy's poor, but anxious invitation. Sit down," he said, indicating the bed.

Ted obeyed, and answered, "Couldn't stay away any longer, Sam. You've certainly taken on avoirdupois, but you look seedy; anything wrong?"

"Everything's wrong, Ted. I've sunk my last dollar in this well—set me back $75,000 already—and now I've got a fishing job on my hands. She's sunk 3000 feet and a bit broke off. It might be months before it's located. That in itself is enough to make anyone blue, but there's a fellow who has leased the land next to mine and is drilling an offset. Now, Ted, I know there's oil there; and if he strikes it before I do, he'll have a gusher sure and mine will be dry. I'm at the end of my rope, kid, don't know what to do—I'd give half the profits to anyone who could help me out of this hole. Have a drink?" He motioned to the bottle. "It's safe stuff—corn whisky—can buy all you want almost over the bar here."

He poured out two drinks and shook his head sadly.

"Poor old Sam!" said Ted. "I can't tell you how sorry I am. I wish I could do something to help you."

"There's nothing you can do, unless you can think of something. We have everything on this job but brains—and luck. They don't usually come together, but they're both missing around here."

"Well, I'm afraid I can't furnish the brains, old man, but I might bring a little luck—gee, I sure hope I do!"

Then, giving Sam an encouraging pound on the back, he changed the subject to the inevitable.

"Buck up, and let's go eat. I've almost forgotten how. And then let's get a few of those wild women I saw out there, and see the town."

Sam grimaced.

"I'll eat, yes," he said, "but I've seen enough of this damn town and its women! Wild is right. They're all disguised. Purple eyelashes, scarlet lips, short red hair—man,

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

FRUIT is a most wholesome food, when properly eaten. It is not only a food, but a natural medicine, on account of the acids and mineral elements it contains.

Offer a child a peach and a piece of beefsteak, and see what it will grab for.

Fruit is food, medicine and drink, containing the purest water, distilled in nature's own laboratory.

Many say they "cannot eat fresh fruit." That is because the linings of their stomachs are inflamed, and the fruit acids irritate them. The thing for them to do is to get into a condition where they can eat fruit, as soon as possible.

Another reason why some people say they cannot eat fruit is that they mix it with other foods. This should never be done, because fruit, being a medicinal food, starts trouble when mixed with other forms of nourishment. The only thing that may properly be eaten with fruits is nuts, but the best way is to eat it alone. In summer you may, to your advantage, make one of your daily meals of fruit. You may occasionally eat a little cream with berries, but no sugar. Mix sweet fruits with them, although fruit that is not sweet enough to eat without sweetening is not fit to eat at all.

Yet another reason why fruit disagrees with some people is that they overeat of it. Fruit, being tempting, one is easily led to overeat. Some seem to think that because fruit is so wholesome, they cannot eat too much of it. This is absurd. As I have often said, it is less harmfiul to undereat of bad food than to overeat of good food. Nothing is "good for you" if you eat too much of it. Moderation is the main thing, in diet.

The fig is an exceptional fruit, containing no acid. However, those with impaired digestion should not eat sweet fruits with starch foods, or fermentation will ensue. Wait until your digestion improves.

The date is also an exceptional fruit, containing some cane sugar. Cane sugar, as found in the date, in cane, and in roots, is of course, a different thing from refined white cane sugar.

Bananas are starch when green, turning to sugar as they blacken.

Do not cook fruit. That is like painting the lily. Too cook fruit and mix it with sugar is to destroy most of the medicinal qualities. Metchnikoff advised boiling strawberries to kill the "bugs." He died before his time.

Ripe fruits direct from the tree contain the necessary elements for our body, in the highest form of organization, and in about the right proportion. They will therefore insure perfect nutrition. In the process of digestion fresh, ripe fruits, if eaten by themselves, require only a small expenditure of nerve force. They are superior to starchy foods, which draw more heavily upon our nerve force, overtaxing and gradually weakening the organs of digestion and elimination.

The alkaline salts of fruits and vegetables act as natural laxatives, by promoting the action of the secreting glands. They also assist in the preservation of normal physical conditions within the cells. The chlorides furnish the chloride of the hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice, pepsin being inactive, except in the presence of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice, pepsin being inactive, except in the presence of hydrochloric acid. In the small intestine the alkaline salts assist in the digestion of fats.

In a temperate climate, fruit and nuts, the food of our remote ancestors, make an ideal, eliminative, non-starch diet. To the fruits of the temperate zone may be added, in moderation, dates, figs, ripe bananas, etc. These are more nourishing, but contain less of the healthful acids.

I know several fruitarians, who are healthy and vigorous, and remarkably free from "colds"—which are fevers. In a bulletin entitled, "Studies of Fruitarian Colonies in California," Prof. M. E. Jaffa of the University of California has testified to the sufficiency of this diet to maintain health and strength.

California is the greatest horticultural State in the Union. Unfortunately, it is most difficult to buy fruit that is neither under-ripe or over-ripe. As to price, it is retailed at about the same price as it brings in Chicago or New York, except in the case of fruit out of season. Not that the grower gets too much—by no means.

Fruit to be wholesome should be just ripe, and fresh from the tree, blushing a rosy red, not pale and anemic, the red denoting the presence of iron. Fruit that has not entirely changed from starch to sugar is not fit to eat.

Those who have picked second crop Muscat grapes, when the early frosts are on the vines, or have gone over an apricot orchard, a couple of weeks after the pickers have done their work, know what ripe fruit is. It should be preparing to fall from the tree. Of course, dealers cannot buy it in this condition. Therefore, all who can do so should grow a little fruit. It may cost them more than they could buy it for, but what of that?

The acid of citrus fruits is strong. Therefore, they should be avoided by those with inflamed stomachs, until their stomachs are healed. Citrus fruits are good to stir up and finally dissipate the surplus bile of those whose livers are engorged. This beneficial process is regarded by the ignorant as a proof that citrus fruits are "not good for them."

The medicinal qualities of the pomelo, or grapefruit, are offset by the sugar usually eaten with it. Sugar does not neutralize the acid of fruit. It only disguises it. When the juice of the skin is included, pomelo juice is a wholesome substitute for harmful quinine. Pomelo is often eaten at breakfast with starch foods, a bad practice.

The strawberry, like citrus fruit, contains a strong acid. It also contains more of the mineral elements, or organic salts, than any other fruit commonly eaten, being exceeded only by the tomato, making it a powerful yet wholesome medicine. It contains a total of sixty-five parts of organic salts to 1000 parts of water-free matter, or 6½ per cent; being especially rich in sodium and iron. Unfortunately, strawberries can never be purchased fully ripe, as they spoil too quickly.

Of course, every kindergarten student of dietetics knows that acid or subacid fruit should never be eaten at the same time with starch foods, because an alkaline saliva is needed, to prepare the starch for digestion.

Skin Diseases.

Skin diseases indicate impurities in the blood. They cannot be cured by local treatment. Fruit drives these impurities out and increases, for a time, the eruption on the skin, which is a good thing. To suppress it is not only foolish, but dangerous.

A "fruit fast" of several weeks or a couple of months, is the best way to break away from alcoholism, or any drug habit.

Like other foods, cold-storage fruits rapidly decay, when brought into a warmer temperature. This is especially true of pears. On these and bananas you may sometimes notice a sickly hue, showing that they have been frozen. They should be avoided. Apples, being a more robust fruit, are safer. However, as a rule, it is better to use canned or cold-storage fruits only in an emergency. This is especially true of those whose stomachs are inflamed, and consequently not working well.

Those who are of nervous, disposition should eat less fruit and more raw green stuff. Those of phlegmatic disposition should live largely on fruit.

Sun Baths.

FOLLOWING is from a Chicago dispatch: "Especial warning is issued by physicians against sunburn this year, as it appears to be unusually perilous. There have been numerous deaths from this cause, and the number of patients confined to their beds from one to three weeks is said to be unprecedented."

This will doubtless induce many foolish people to avoid the healing rays of the sun.

Sun and air baths are most valuable aids in restoring health. Sunshine, like radium and X-rays, may easily be overdone.

You should take a sun bath every day, when you can, beginning with a few minutes, and gradually extending the time to twenty minutes. It is best to take it when the rays of the sun are not very powerful. The eyes should be protected. Also the back of the neck.

Army Hospitals.

THE Congressional investigation has disclosed a deplorable condition in army hospitals.

Why should not a fraction of the million spent in this way be allotted to a real nature cure sanatorium, where men may be made over, and restored to health, in brief time and at small expense?

Why, but the opposition of a health service, controlled by the American Medical Association, that would rather see men die ethically, than be cured by natural methods.

The Sun and the Earth.

THE great heat and drought throughout the earth is explained by some as due to an unusually large fall of meteors into the sun. Others deny it.

In any case, the sun directly affects our climate, and our health.

Epidemics are due to solar disturbances, affecting those whose blood is loaded with waste matter.

Children and Divorce.

HAZEL HOWE of Chicago, 12 years old, was given her choice between her mother, Mrs. Amy Walden of Chicago or her father, William Howe of Muscatine, Iowa, for a guardian, until she is 21, but she could not make up her mind, and the court gave her additional time to think it over.

The saddest thing about divorce is the fate of the innocent children of these mismated couples.

Few parents recognize their responsibility, in bringing children into the world. They act as if they were unreasoning animals.

At the Beach

AT SOME of our beaches one may spend a day, and scarcely see the ocean. Nor can you hear the roar of the surf, for the noise-making contraptions, nor smell the salty air, on account of the stronger odor of "hot dogs."

There are still some quiet, or semi-quiet, beach resorts. They should preserve their simplicity, for the sake of those who seek real rest. We can get enough noise and bad smells in the roaring city.

Old Maids.

TIME was when it was considered a disgrace to be an old maid. That time has passed. In "Quaint Companions" Leonard Merrick writes, referring to conditions in England before the war:

"It is, indeed, an unpleasant comment on our method of bringing up the maiden, that in the minds of even the most modest girls the eagerness to marry should precede the wish to marry any man in particular. To the blunter and less refined sensibilities of the male, there seems something a little indelicate in this impartial eagerness."

In view of what she sees among her married friends, the girl is indeed foolish who marries just to get a man. A wise girl will wait until she finds one whom she can not only love, but esteem, or will remain a maid.

Producer and Consumer.

A FARMERS' public market, opened in San Francisco on July 8, for the purpose of eliminating the middlemen, quoted onions, in 110-pound sacks, at 25 cents, as against the 45-cent market quotations, and potatoes at 95 cents a box, as against the $1.50 quotation outside. Housewives and other bargain seekers crowded the market throughout the day, there being some limousines noted among the many automobiles present. A group of farmers of the Santa Clara Valley conducting the market.

Other bargains were, pears, 85 cents for a sixty-five-pound box, as against $1.75 on the outside; sugar, $5 a hundred pounds; fruit jars, $1.25 a dozen.

While produce rots on the farm, consumers pay high prices.

THE TRAILS.

(Illustrations from photographs by the author.)

IN THE affections of Yosemite visitors, the trails of the region easily hold first place. The most frequent question you will hear about the evening campfires is:

"What trail are you going to take tomorrow?"

Or the same thing in the past tense:

"Which of the trails were you on today?"

If you are up early enough in the morning, you will see bunches of khaki-clad trampers starting off from the camps, each one with a small knapsack slung over his shoulder, or it may be only a paper bag in hand, in which is his noon lunch. If the time be early in the season, they carry no canteens, for they will come across running water almost everywhere. If you were to follow any one of these groups, in half an hour or less you would be climbing some one of the trails that lead up to the high places.

Trails usually bespeak mountains, and always in this region. So tramping Yosemite trails means climbing. Trails are plentiful about Yosemite, and you must haunt them assiduously, if you would see the glories of the place. You must expand your lungs and harden your muscles—for you must climb, climb, climb!

True, there are some paths and roads on the floor of the valley which are called trails. But, if we except the one around Mirror Lake, they are only what I have already called them, roads and paths. Many of them, however, merge into real trails at the borders of the valley, or in the mouths of the side canyons.

Many Yosemite visitors who return to the valley year after year have their favorite trail—or it may be two or three trails which share their favoritism. Every rock and tree along their favorite trails is familiar to them. They know all the fine lookout places, too, many of which would escape the notice of anyone going over the trail for the first time, and they may be found at these points day after day. Most of them like to talk about their favorite trails, and many a fine view have I saved myself from missing by paying heed to what they have to tell.

The trails of the Yosemite somewhat naturally fall into three groups, which for the sake of reference we may call "Upper Merced Trails;" "South Rim Trails;" "North Rim Trails." There is some merging of the trails of the first two of these groups, as will appear in what I shall have to say concerning the Nevada Fall Trail. The North Rim Trails are absolutely set off from all connection with the others by the valley itself and Tenaya Canyon. Each of these groups will be the subject of a separate article, and it seems most convenient to take them in the order in which I have just named them.

Upper Merced Trails Naturally Fall Into One Group.

SIERRA POINT TRAIL, Vernal and Nevada Falls Trail, Clouds Rest Trail, and Half Dome Trail form the Upper Merced group. They are more or less closely connected with the Merced River at the head of the valley, hence the group name.

The Sierra Point Trail is the "tryout" trail. If you can negotiate this without too great fatigue, you are in trim to try any of the trails leading to the rim. This trail was built by the Sierra Club to reach a point under Grizzly Peak which had been visited in previous years by various members of the club in their climbing over the untrodden regions, and from which there is an exceedingly enchanting view.

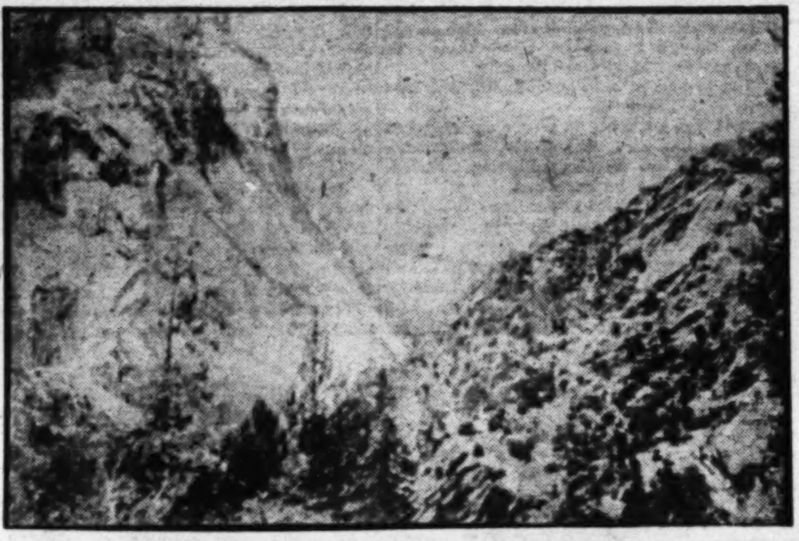
The climb to Sierra Point is as steep and severe as that on any of the trails leading to the rim, but it is only about half the length of the shortest of these. It is as well built as the best, and better than most of them.

The trail begins just beyond the bridge over the Merced at the power house, near the Happy Isles. It leaves the road on the upper side, turning sharply to the left. Just you should take things deliberately. By doing so, you will be better able to measure your mountain-climbing ability.

There are stretches along the lower part of the trail which discourage some beginners; not that they are so very bad, either; but the steep zigzags cut one's wind and make one's heart beat hard and fast. In a few places, too, the footing is loose, and beyond where it starts, on the upper side of the road, there is a fine spring. Fill your canteen at this spring, for you are about to take the one trail of the Yosemite on which there is no water.

Devote a whole day to the trip, for there are fine views from the various turns on the trail which you will want leisure to enjoy, while from the top you should see the prospects both in the forenoon and afternoon light. And this should really be your "tryout" climb, there is a further reason why there, if you crowd too rapidly, your legs will get wobbly. For the encouragement of the climber who is new at the business, I will state that the harder part of the trail is on the lower half.

During the early morning, the whole length of the trail is in shadow, while much of it the sun does not hit until well along towards noon. The slopes on which the zigzags occur are fairly well wooded, too, so even when the afternoon sun is beating against the face of the cliff around which the trail winds, you can find some shade in which to sit down and rest. But if possible, you should avoid making the upward trip late in the afternoon.



Looking backward into the valley from the Nevada Fall Trail.

In making the ascent you should not neglect to keep on the lookout for the fine views down the valley and into Tenaya Canyon. The views into the latter are especially entrancing, and on account of the nearness of the trail many details of the gorge can be made out that are not apparent from any other trails about the valley from which it is visible.

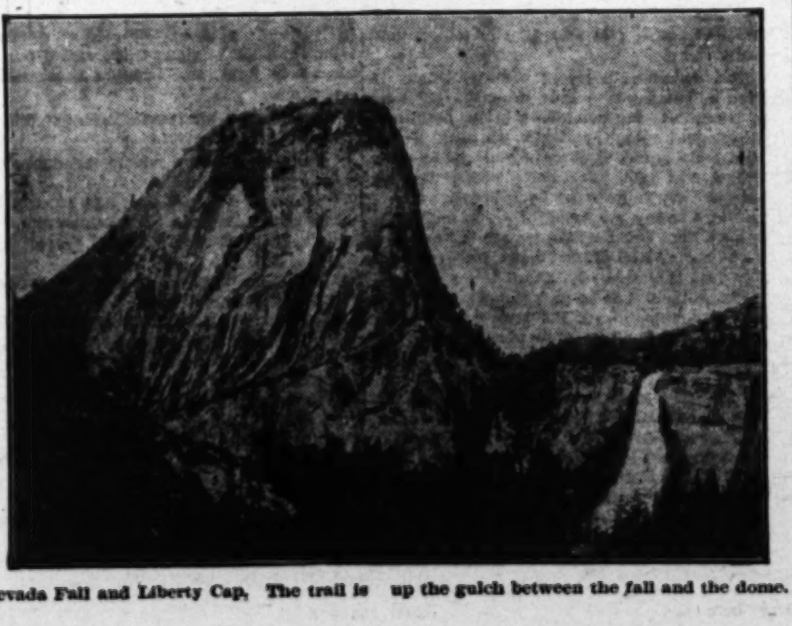
At the top of the Sierra Point Trail there is a natural rock platform which stands out bold and free, and around the edge of which an iron railing has been placed for the assurance and safety of the dizzy-headed. Of the superb prospects which there meet one's gaze I shall speak when I am telling about Yosemite's glory spots—for this is one of them—or at least is very nearly so.

A DAY should be given to the trip to Vernal and Nevada Falls. Many persons make this trip a part of the one to Glacier Point by the Long Trail—which follows the same trail as far as the top of Nevada Fall—while others satisfy themselves with what they see of it while on the way to Clouds Rest, although they are then on a twenty-five mile tramp, with an upward climb of nearly a mile and a half. It is true they pass over the same ground as far as the top of Nevada Fall, but the haste necessary to cover the longer trails leaves too little time for viewing the landscape along the lower reaches of the trail, and for enjoying the charms and beauties of the falls.

The trail starts at the bridge near the power house and follows up the north side of the river. A quarter of a mile or so below Vernal Fall it crosses to the south side and bears away from the river, in order to climb the ridge which furnishes the precipice down which the Merced plunges in Vernal Fall. The climb up the ridge is a hard one, and it should not be taken in haste. One is apt to hurry, for the trail is somewhat shut in and there is little chance to view the scenery until the ridge is topped. At the top of the ridge the trail runs over to a ledge overlooking Vernal Fall. And there, from high above, one can look almost straight down the face of the cataract. This view of Vernal Fall is a unique and fascinating one and is deeply etched in my memory of this—in many ways—the most alluring of Yosemite's waterfalls.

During the early part of the day the trail is in shadow. And there are patches of forest and scattered trees along the way, where one can find convenient, shady resting places. One who likes to climb trails in a leisurely fashion—the only sensible way—rejoicing when the resting places are frequent, and seeking out the beauty spots which those who go by in a hurry never see, will find great joy in the two-mile stretch between the bridge over the Merced at the power house and Vernal Fall.

I remember one time I was climbing this section of the trail, when I overtook John Muir and a friend of his. The venerable mountaineer was sitting on a rock beside the trail, giving his companion an account of the ascent of Half Dome which he had made many years before. It was a fitting place for such a recital. A hundred feet or so below the trail on one side rushed the foaming Merced, while on the other rose Grizzly Peak to a half-mile above.



Nevada Fall and Liberty Cap. The trail is up the gulch between the fall and the dome.

Muir and his companion had been a large part of the forenoon on a mile of trail which I had climbed in about half an hour. But I fancy the enjoyment each received was in like proportion!

One of the finest views of Vernal Fall is to be had from the bridge by which the trail crosses the Merced a short distance below. Perhaps no view in all the Yosemite is photographed so much. What a rushing, charging, foaming stream the river there is! Its bed is strewn with bowlders which the swift current seems vainly trying to hurl aside! The view possesses a fascination for all who love to loiter and enjoy things alone and by themselves. I have seldom crossed the bridge that someone was not leaning against the rail on the upper side, watching the glistening white fall and the turbulent river, apparently oblivious to time and all other surroundings!

From where the trail leaves the river to climb the ridge — as already mentioned—a foot trail leads up along the stream to the foot of the fall, and then on up through the spray and mist alongside the cataract to the ledge above. If you ever wish to climb this mist trail to the ledge above, take a raincoat with you, and wear high, heavy boots. It is a wet, slippery, nearly perpendicular trail, but the experience is worth the cost.

Nearly a mile intervenes between Vernal Fall and Nevada Fall, where the Merced runs through a little basin, maintaining a headlong course, except just before its plunge at Vernal Fall. There it rests for a few rods in a miniature lake called Emerald Pool.

The trail over the ridge comes down into this little basin some distance above Vernal Fall and crosses the river about half way between the falls. From along the trail on the ridge, and on the way down into the basin, there are fine views of Nevada Fall—description of which must wait until I come to a chapter devoted to the waterfalls alone. Just to its north is Liberty Cap, a tall, narrow granite dome whose shape is very well described by the name it bears. So close together are dôme and fall, that I never recall one in my memory that the other does not also appear.

We must go to the top of the fall before we may say that we have gone the full length of the Nevada Fall Trail. It goes skyward by way of a steep gulch at the base of Liberty Cap. Part of the way it passes over a loose rock slide, where you "slip back two steps for every one you take forward." The trail affords you a fine side view of Nevada Fall. About the only other incident on the way up is grand, good hard work.

When you reach the level above, and walk over to the top of the fall, you are at the end of the Nevada Fall Trail. The trail goes farther, but beyond this point it takes other names. It divides and goes in different directions, one branch becoming the Long Trail to Glacier Point, while the other is the Little Yosemite and Clouds Rest Trail.

Clouds Rest Trail Must be Traversed to be Appreciated.

FOLLOW up the north side of the Merced River from the top of Nevada Fall, climb over a ridge a hundred feet or so in height, and you are in Little Yosemite—a duplicate in miniature of the greater valley below. Follow the trail along the floor of Little Yosemite for perhaps a half or three-quarters of a mile, and you will come to where it forks.

The right fork goes on up the river for three or four miles and ends; for the valley becomes a narrow gorge through which there is no passage.

The left hand fork is the Clouds Rest Trail. Follow it, and you will soon begin a six-mile climb that will take you to the top of Clouds Rest, a peak which lacks only a few feet of rising to 10,000. When you stand on its summit, you are almost a mile and a quarter above the floor of Yosemite Valley, yet nearly every day during the summer season the peak is visited by many persons, often a score or more in number, and some of whom walk and make the round trip of nearly twenty-five miles in fourteen or fifteen hours! Some strenuous tramping, that! Yet they who do it declare the reward is well worth the labor.

Clouds Rest perhaps offers as easy an op-

Nosing Into the Motion Picture Business.

BY ARTHUR M'MASTER FENWICK

"CURSE your nose, madam, there's no end to it."

So said Sir Joshua Reynolds to his patroness, the great actress, Mrs. Siddons.

Had the famous painter lived today he would have said: "Madam, your nose is a little out of key with your natural beauty. Here's the address of a doctor who will remold it for you. Have him cut the end off and let him rasp down that hump, then come to me and I will paint a picture that posterity will admire."

And so it might have been.

A characteristic and correct nose counts heavily in Southern California. So does a Cupid-bow mouth. There are girls who are earning a fortune by a pair of soulful eyes that look through and beyond you in wistful contemplation. And noses, and eyes, and provocative lips, dimpling dimples and baby pink complexions are made to order through the surpassing skill of the cosmetic surgeon.

The movies have made Los Angeles one of the greatest centers of plastic surgery in the world.

There is not a studio lot in the city or its environs that has not many artists who have submitted to the surgeon's knife. Some have thus overcome nature's handicap and so filched success; others have postponed inevitable retirement by removing traces of the ravages of time, while a few, thanks to a surgeon-wizard, have increased natural endowments.

In one of the sumptuous surgeries popular with movie folk a framed list of suggestions for patrons hangs on the wall. Heading the list is the famous Parisian feature-lifting. Anyone of mature age may, by a simple experiment, see the effects of this operation.

Place the finger tips on the temples and lift the skin toward the hair. Note in the mirror the disappearance of wrinkles, the rounding of the contour. Ten years are taken off with one slight push.

This is the surgeon's permanent gift. He cuts the skin under the hair, tenses the skin, cuts away the superfluous flesh and sews the cut surfaces together so carefully that no trace of a scar is left. Flabby, baggy and double chins are treated similarly.

Marvelous things are done to the eyes to make them beguile the camera. The brows may be arched. The optics may be made larger or smaller at the wish of the patient. Unwelcome underlining can be removed, while unsightly lids yield readily to the knife.

Next time Dorothy Dimple, the winsome star, looks at you from the screen with her great, round and innocent eyes, or allows her face to break coquettishly into a smile that discloses those precious features that have caused her ancestral name to be eclipsed, remember that neither eyes nor dimples run in her family. She likely bought and paid for 'em.

"So you really give some of these stars their soulful eyes?" was asked of a well-known specialist.

"Surely, and, what is more, we give to some other people new souls!

"Take the case of a woman of 55 or so—one who has worked hard and to whom financial position has come only recently. Say she has lost her husband and has to make a new circle of friends at an age when friends are not made without effort.

"Imagine this woman of the thin-lipped type, with muddy complexion arising from insufficient exercise, and you have the type that promises to develop into a regular 'sour ball.' A pretty drab outlook.

"Suppose we give her tne Parisian face-lift and thus remove her wrinkles. Let us peel her face and give nature a chance to bestow on her a new skin. Let us draw up the lip a little so as to give it the Cupid's bow effect. What will happen?

"There is increased self-respect as she compares herself with other women of her age, a new desire to enter the life of her community with all the bodily and mental exercise that this requires; in fact she is a new woman. Objectively she receives the deference that goes to the woman of her apparent heydey, and this reacts beneficially subjectively.

"It isn't necessary to point out what we cosmetic surgeons give to the actress who has found that, little by little, the parts she can essay before the camera are becoming restricted. The merciless lens reveals to thousands of searching eyes the crow's feet, the creased neck, the heavy eye. Such a one is playing tragedy—the tragedy of the circumscribed sphere. It comes just when her power of interpretation is made surer by life's experiences and when her technic is perfected. Cosmetic surgery gives her a release of professional life.

"Here is a different story," and he drew from a cabinet the photograph of a Grecian-nosed young woman.

"This girl always had an innate longing for the life of the theater. As a little kiddie she acted plays with her chums. Her parents discouraged her and in her late 'teens refused to allow her to pursue her chosen career. She finally entered picture work at 24. She 'broke in' to the game in the usual way—in mob scenes and occasional extra parts. She received fair money and, what was better, satisfying praise.

"Directors told her that she posed well, that she had power of rapid transition, while her interpretation was excellent. But somehow she couldn't land a leading part. After many evasive answers one director told her frankly: 'A girl with a nose like yours would make a comedy of the most romantic scene a poet could invent.'"

"But," protested the interviewer, "she has a beautiful nose."

"Thanks," said the surgeon, "that's my nose. She now draws a splendid salary and while she may never be a big star, she is happy in performing very congenial work."

Names of stars who have undergone facial remodeling are not given. A few are willing to acknowledge their indebtedness to the American doctor; others who have never seen the Atlantic, boast of work performed in Paris, but most are reluctant to admit any artificial intervention with natural endowment.

In meeting an appointment with another surgeon the interviewer was conscious of a disappearing form behind the velvet curtains that led to an adjoining room. He found, after a time, that a famous male star, dissatisfied with his ears, was having them set back against his head. If he is not a modest star he at least showed a retiring disposition.

Mme. Yorska of New York, who began her career as a protegee of Mme. Bernhardt, is one of the few who publicly acknowledges her debt to the surgeon. So does Fanny Ward. A peculiarly unclassifiable nose was Yorska's, an apparently insurmountable handicap to any but heavy tragic parts. After a Los Angeles woman surgeon had remodeled it the transformation was so great that she was compelled willy nilly to tell of her experience.

So enthusiastic an advertiser was she that one of her colleagues took the next train west and had a change made in his face that resulted in the doubling of his earning power. Instead of being cast for heavy parts only, he can now take anything within the range of his ability.

Truly, the effect of the knife, skillfully handled, is miraculous. Thus:

The sweet movie Annabeller
Had a grouch against her smeller,
Deemed it was too humped and thick,
So pretended she was sick.
Had the doctor rasp her mug, change her
Roman to a pug,
Now she asks the director feller
To change her name from Annabeller.

One of the cosmetic surgeons gives details of one of his miracle workings.

"A patient came to me to correct a greatly curved nose—an exaggerated Roman, with wide nostrils. The organ, besides being too long, was three-sixteenths of an inch too thick. I cut out a piece right across the cartilege, rasped the hump down, pared the sides, removed part of the tip, tilted the forepart at right angles to the upper lip, thus closing the wide nostrils. The nose had to be filed three times before it was satisfactory to the patient or myself. It is now a beautiful feature."

Asked if there were many risks to be taken by one who submits to the remodeling process, the doctors acknowledge that it is very delicate work, demanding the nicest care. There is much mal-practice. All agreed in warning against the indiscriminate use of paraffin.

This substance is sometimes injected under the skin to give fulness and plumpness. It is likely to wander and thus make an abnormal prominence in an undesired place. In addition to this danger, as a foreign body it may set up an irritation and cause greater troubles than those it aims to correct.

Unskilled surgery may draw the eye skin out of place, while, of course, tampering with the lids may change the whole expression.

Young flappers frequently ask for something they shouldn't get. One doctor smiled as he described the number of aspirants for the cute pug nose. Said a woman surgeon: "They come demanding that which would spoil their looks. Imagine a saucy pug on a long face!"

"I think you may say we do not change a nose," said another. "It is more nearly correct to say that we improve the type the patient brings us. Thus we shorten a nose too long, cut down one too humped, straighten the crooked or twisted, and build up one that needs filling out. But we would hardly exchange a Roman for a pug."

Doctors do not agree on the advisability of contracting dimples. All can make them. This is one of the easy operations. The woman surgeon was most emphatic. "The chin cleft, if it is desired, can be given without danger of future trouble, but the cheek dimple will surely develop into a wrinkle in time."

Another declared that he can make cheek dimples that will stay for good. "In faces that have a natural flexion where the muscles of the cheek meet, a permanent dimple can be given—the dimple that deepens with the broad smile. It is made from the inside, and for one who has an exact knowledge of the anatomy of the face it is an easy matter."

Each patient presents a new problem. To be successful the cosmetic surgeon must be an artist. Besides a thorough knowledge of anatomy and the nicest skill with the knife, he must also understand skin tension.

"If a job looks well when it is first finished it will look badly when it assumes permanent shape," said a doctor. "Thus when we operate for harelip unless we leave a pucker of skin the result is as bad as it was before the knife was used. The skin tension absorbs the projecting part and a normal face results."

In sewing cuts on the face or neck very minute stitches are used to bring the two surfaces together and prevent all appearance of a pull at the place where the cut was made. When this is done no scar can be detected.

If he wishes, the patient can see the operator at work, as local anesthetics are used. Only face-lifting, the doctors say, causes real pain. The tension of the skin on the stitches is most irritating for twenty-four hours. Peeling for a new complexion is hardly pleasant; in fact, it is the same process as a severe sunburn.

"I see by your uncontrolled frank eye that my nose offends your esthetic sense. How long will it take for the wound to heal after you remake this somewhat twisted, bulbous olfactor into a beautiful Roman?"

"I'll operate in the morning. You can go to the theater that night, if you like. In ten days your new nose will be as though you had been born with it."

"Oh! Thanks so much," and the interviewer quickly removed the affronting organ from the presence of the tempter.

Why Ex-Presidents Should Be Pensioned.

While the President receives only $75,000 a year salary, his perquisites amount to a great deal more than that additional. His residence, his yacht, his motor car, his physician, his horses, his music, his flowers, his traveling fund, his minor perquisites represent an annual cost of perhaps $200,000.

Thus out of his $75,000 cash income he can and does save some money. Why, then, is Congress now considering a pension?

Because the President of the United States is in a class by himself, not only on this continent, but also in the world. His election to that office should automatically remove him from all the financial restrictions that concern all the rest of us.

The fact that most Presidents have been able to save the equivalent of a pension fund while in office does not alter the fact that none of them should be obliged to do so. Especially, none of them should ever be permitted to be in a position after leaving the Presidency to be able to make as an excuse to their fellow-countrymen that they are engaging in gainful occupations through necessity. It is degrading to the Presidency.

It may not be desirable, it may be un-American to condemn our ex-Presidents to a life of slothful inactivity. It may be necessary to give them some place of honor in the government, such as a life tenure in the Senate, or an emeritus seat in the Cabinet.

However, there can be no doubt that the granting of a pension to ex-Presidents would be an added bulwark to the integrity of the most sovereign office on earth. No man who has occupied the White House can ever afterward be on a competitive level with his fellow-citizens. Whatever he does must have an exaggerated importance, and if that importance is translated into dollars he will be paid only partially for his work; the larger part of his income will automatically result from the adventitious fact of his ex-Presidency.

Therefore, should not Uncle Sam step in and say, "When you retire I will pay you enough money to live on in a way comporting with your dignity, and I will ask in return that you relieve me of the embarrassment of having you compete with anyone in any gainful calling?"—[Richard Barry in Leslie's.

A Professor Startled.

A true story, well-known in scientific circles, records the first use of radio-telephone during the war in France. Prof. W. —— of Yale University, then in the Reserve Corps, was asked to witness a voice-controlled flight near Romarankin, France. Standing in a hangar on the ground he placed the receiving instrument to his ear. The voice of an unseen person from the clouds spoke a message. The professor turned pale as he dropped the receiver.

"My God," he exclaimed, "that's Prof. Peters! He died nine years ago!"

The professor was told that the man speaking was one of the pilots of the Sixty-ninth Squadron.

Soon the pilot dove from the clouds and walked into the hangar. He proved to be Prof. Peters's son!—[Horace Green in Leslie's.

A SERMONETTE FOR MOTHERS.

Take a little tip from ye pastor of the Thomas Cat, mothers, and maybe the angels will fight on your side: Watch your young daughters' friends. Scrutinize carefully her men friends, for many wolves there be in sheep's clothing. Keep a wary eye on her girl friends, because birds of a feather are supposed to flock together, and one silly, loud, indiscreet young person can compromise all who associate with her. But as you value your daughter's safety, turn a searchlight of investigation upon the character and antecedents of her middle-aged women acquaintances. — [Arkansaw Thomas Cat.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

Scene I—The Potter Living-Room.

(Pa, Ma, Bill, Mamie, and the Baby are giving the evening meal a chance to make good, indulging meanwhile in that delightful interchange of thought which enlivens our best regulated families.)

MA: It seems to me I heard you say
That oil well check was due today.

BILL: They certainly love to pet their dough.
When do they pay, I'd like to know?

MAMIE: Won't it be good when they send that check?
I sure need clothes—I'm a perfect wreck.

BILL: You sure need clothes? Well, ain't that cute!
How long's it been since I had a suit?

MAMIE: I should worry about your clothes;
I've troubles enough of my own, Lord knows.

MA: Wasn't it today I heard you say
That oil well feller was coming, eh?

PA (offhand:)
He said that perhaps he might come tonight.

MA (alarmed:)
Tonight? . . . out here? why, the flat's a fright.
Mamie . . . hurry and get the broom.
William, get up and help straighten the room.
Pa, take the Baby and put it to bed.

MAMIE: Aw, the room's all right.

MA: Did you hear what I said?

BILL: Aw, the room's all right.

MA: You do as you're bid.
(to Pa) Hurry up with the Baby.

PA: Aw, you take the kid.

(Doorbell rings.)

That's the oil well guy with the check, I guess.

(Goes to door.)

MA: If this here room ain't a perfect mess!

(Exits into bedroom with Baby . . . Mamie flies around picking up papers and stray bits of clothing . . . Bill refuses to be annoyed . . . he sits where he sat and lets it go at that.)

MR. EAGLE (enters with one of those cat-full-of-canary smiles:)
Well, well, well, if it isn't my old friend and college chum, Peter E. Potter! Well, well, well, and how are all the Potters this evening? (Indicating Bill.) Your son, I presume? What a fine lad! Looks like you, Potter, old man. (This doesn't make much of a hit with Bill.) And how is the little wife (Eagle is one of those birds who always speak of them as "little wife") and your charming daughter, Gladys, I believe? . . . Mamie, you say? . . . O, of course. Mamie to be sure.

(Enter Ma and Mamie.)

PA: Here they are now . . . Mr. Eagle . . . my wife.

MA: Glad to meet you.

EAGLE: This is a pleasure, I assure you.

PA: And my daughter, Mamie.

MAMIE: How do you do?

EAGLE: This is a pleasure, I assure you.

(They all sit down and wait for an inspiration . . . it comes.)

MA: Hasn't the weather been terribly hot?
I don't know whether I can stand it or not.

EAGLE (judicially:)
It don't have to get any hotter for me;
It's plenty hot now—don't you people agree?

PA: Well, I'll say it's hot.

BILL: You tell 'em, old top.

MA: If it only would rain.

EAGLE: But it ain't rained a drop.

Which effectually disposes of the weather . . . another pause . . . Ma looks at Pa, Pa looks at Eagle, Eagle looks at the ceiling . . . well, what's next? What's all the waiting for . . . Ah, he starts, he moves he seems to feel the thrill of life along his keel . . .)

EAGLE: D'ya know why I came here tonight? You'd never guess, so I'll tell you. The fellows in this oil syndicate—the big fellows, I mean, the fellows who are putting up all the money—they says to me, they says, "Say, do you know one of the men who is interested in this who is keen and enterprising and up to the minute, a real live wire?" and and I says, "Why?" and they says, "We're going to send him down there to the oil fields of Tennessee and see what this proposition is for himself—they won't none of them believe how big it is just on our say-so, and we don't blame 'em—it don't sound possible; but if you know a real up-to-minute fellow who knows what's what, that's the fellow—we'll send him down there, all expenses paid, and then he can tell his friends just how wonder- this proposition is." Well, of course, when they says they wanted a real live wire, one who was keen and alert and everything, I immediately says, "I know the man you want," and they says, "Who?" and I says, "There's only one man that fills that bill, and that's Peter E. Potter."

PA: Who, me?

EAGLE: Yes, you; and we're going to send you down there all expenses paid to see for yourself what a big proposition this oil field is down there.

PA: But I thought——

EAGLE (interrupting hurriedly:)
Yes, yes, I know—you thought it was just a small affair; but wait till you see the possibilities—I won't say any more—just you wait—all we want is just your honest opinion of it, nothing more, and we know we can rely on your shrewdness—you're a business man, Potter, and they can't put things over on you like they might on some people . . . no, sir . . . that's why I picked you to go down there and tell the world the facts—that's all, just the facts—can you start tomorrow? (goes right on before Pa can recover and interrupt) all right, then, tomorrow—I'll call for you in the morning and we'll catch the 10:25 train—it'll be a wonderful trip (rising and looking at his watch.) Lord, I had no idea what time it was . . . I must be going . . . thanks for a very enjoyable evening . . . Good-by, Mr. Potter . . . and Mrs. Potter . . . so long, William . . . fine family you have, Potter, old man . . . good-by . . . good-by . . . drop in for you about 9 o'clock good-by (exits.)

(We will draw the curtains on the scene that ensued . . . we will not record tne rapid fire of embarrassing questions from Ma, Mamie, and Bill anent the expected check from the oil well, nor will we allude further to the projected trip by Pa on the morrow—with all expenses paid—except to say that he has decided to take it . . . and why not, indeed?)

Scene II.—The Smoking Compartment.

(Mr. Eagle, with Pa Potter in tow, en route to the Tennessee oil field, have just finished dinner—at Eagle's expense—and are now seated in that favorite forum of democracy, the smoking compartment. They are prepared to hear winged words of wisdom, and they shall not be disappointed.)

1ST TRAVELER: Keep all the foreigners out of here, that's my advice.

2D TRAVELER: Me, too. They ain't got no business here.

3D TRAVELER: They gotter eat, don't they? An' they're willing to work, and that's more'n you can say for a lot of th' guys that are in here now.

1ST TRAVELER: You said somep'n that time.

3D TRAVELER: I'll say I did. An' besides, what's an immigrant, anyway? He's just a guy what's late getting in over here, that's all.

2D TRAVELER: O, I don't know.

3D TRAVELER: You don't eh? Where was your father born, huh?

2D TRAVELER: Why . . . why . . . who wants to know?

3D TRAVELER: I'll bet he wasn't born in this country, was he? (Silence.) I thought so. You're like a lot of 'em . . . they run over . . rush inside and lock the door so's nobody else can get in.

1ST TRAVELER: You said somep'n that time.

3D TRAVELER: We got to have labor, don't we?

1ST TRAVELER: I'll say we do.

2D TRAVELER: Well, we don't need no more of 'em in here, I'll say.

5TH TRAVELER: What do they do when they get over here, huh? What do they do—I ask you, huh? I'll tell you what they do—they work and hoard up all their money and they ship it over to the old country, that's what they do.

1ST TRAVELER: Ain't it the truth?

5TH TRAVELER: When we need it all over here to develop our own industries like the coal and the steel.

EAGLE: And the oil industry, gentlemen. Let me tell you the oil industry needs American capital to develop it—and where will you go to find the return on your investment that the oil industry will bring you? Look at Rockefeller. Look at the gigantic oil combines of England and Mexico and other foreign combines.

1ST TRAVELER: You said somep'n that time.

EAGLE: Why, this train is going right now to one of the richest fields of opportunity in this great country of ours—a land so full of oil that it bespangles the ground like God's own dew—it trickles down the quiet hillsides, it gathers in soft pools in the shady valleys, it oozes out of the very rocks, gentlemen—why, if you knew this place as I know it, when the conductor called the station—I won't tell you which one it is, gentlemen—but when he called it you would pile off this train bag and baggage, and the Lord himself couldn't stop you. Talk about opportunity; talk about money waiting for some one to come along and take it—why, it's almost ready to pick up off the ground and put in and bank.

TRAVELERS (Cho.:)
Where is this place? . . . what's the name of it? . . . where is it? . . . how do you know?

EAGLE: (pulling map out of his pocket:)
Gentlemen, observe this line . . . here is the anticline . . . now, now, right over here . . . (they all gather around) right over here, gentlemen, is the ground which we hold under our ironclad leases . . . right over here . . .

(Slow curtain.)

Scene III—The Oil Field.

(Mr. Eagle has Pa Potter at the edge of a vast meadow land. Somehow Pa expected to see the oil shooting out of the ground at a dozen places. However, the oil so far is showing wonderful self-control.)

PA: So this is the place.

EAGLE: It is, old scout.

PA: But where's the well you told me about?

EAGLE (proudly:)
O, it's right over there . . .
You can see it from here.
That is, you can almost see it from here.
But this is the place that we've got under lease—
Here's oil all around it . . .
why, under this piece I'll bet there's a gusher that'll make 'em all sick;
Just wait till we drill and we'll show 'em a trick.

PA (dazedly:)

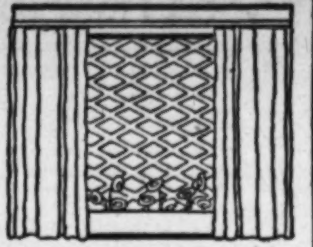
THE HOW IN HOUSES

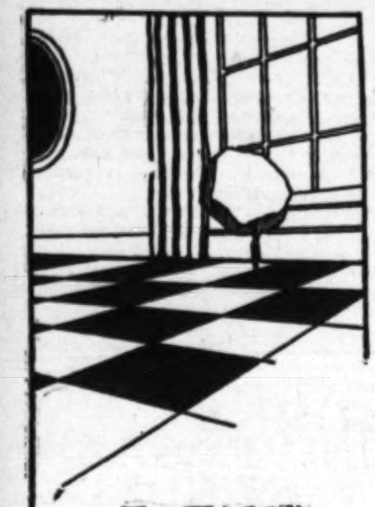
HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE



THE FLOOR OF A DECORATIVE UNIT.

A ROOM is much more comfortable to live in if the tone of the floor bears the same relation to the ceiling as the ground does to the sky. It must establish the feeling of a base or foundation possessing strength. Also it should be inconspicuous and quietly restful.

To be of the most decorative value the floor should be neither too dark nor too light. Often old apartments or country houses are done in very dark colors which show the dust too readily. These should be done over in tan or gray, colors which are suitable backgrounds for rugs and furniture.



Tiled Floor Effect

If new floors are to be laid or old ones done over they should not be treated singly but in suites or groups so that there may be a harmony in the whole effect.

The Use and Cost of Hardwood Flooring.

HARDWOOD flooring is used generally in living-rooms and dining-rooms and is in the long run less expensive than a cheaper wood, as it lasts longer and may be refinished more often.

The wood in general use is oak, although maple is preferred by some builders, while beech and birch also are used in limited amounts. Seven-eights material is better than half-inch, as it is unaffected by water, which causes warping of the thin woods. Oak can be bought in three-eights, one-half, five-eights and seven-eights inch. The three-eights seems to be used most commonly although in floor materials poor materials are after all the most expensive.

An average grade of oak, three-eights by two inches costs $99 a thousand feet, while the better grade is $125. In ordering the material, one-third to one-half of the floor space is added to the number of square feet of the floor, for one and one-half inch width. Forty per cent extra is calculated on for the two-inch width. One thousand feet lays about seventy-five or eighty square yards.

Floors May be Varnished, Stained or Waxed.

THE newer and better varnishes are those which dry with a dull gloss finish. Very shiny brilliant floors are becoming less popular than they were some time ago. Maple floors should be protected with a varnish. The average floor should have two coats of varnish applied once a year. The varnish is water and heat-proof and consequently the floor is easily taken care of.

Good wood stains may be made from turpentine and oil paint if a shade is desired which is not on the market. This is rarely necessary, as various tones of stains are now manufactured which are suitable to most rooms, such as gray, brown and brownish-green. If a coat of shellac is kept on over the stain, the color on the stained floor will stay.

Waxed floors have a more beautiful finish, but require constant care. Wax is used over one coat of varnish and only a small section polished at a time. Two coats of prepared wax are usually necessary, which is rubbed with a weighted brush. If floors are in constant use a coat of wax should be applied about every two months.

The Refinishing of Old Floors Is Often Necessary.

VERY old or badly discolored floors should be painted instead of varnished so that the imperfections do not show through. A tan or gray deck paint is good both for color and durability. If the whole floor is not to be painted, a space no larger than eight by eleven should be left in the center as the nine by twelve rug is the standard size used for medium-sized houses. A very good finish is produced by varnishing over the paint.

Before refinishing any floor, all grease and dirt should be removed. This may be done with soap and water or gasoline.

If an oak floor has been shellaced or varnished, this must be removed by scraping before another stain may be applied. Wax may be removed by an application of turpentine followed by raw linseed oil. Floors which have cracks between the boards should be first treated with a filler before they are painted.

Linoleum May be Used Throughout the House.

AMONG floor coverings which have come into general use for practically every room in the house perhaps the most popular is linoleum. Not only is it used in the kitchen and bathroom, but as a base for all kinds of rugs. It may be bought by the yard or in rugs, in plain tones, tile effects and attractive designs. Linoleum to be properly laid is pasted down firmly over a layer of felt and then sealed at the edges with cement.

The best grade of linoleum is the least expensive, as it will wear a life time and the color will never change, as it goes clear through. Battleship linoleum one-fourth inch in thickness is $3.50 a square yard laid and three-sixteenths inch is $3.25 laid. Plain tones in cheaper grades can be bought from $1.75 up, while some grades run as low as $1 a yard.

Black and white tile design is attractively used in a breakfast room with the furniture and hangings of some bright and attractive color.

Red tile linoleum is best in sun rooms and porches. Green and white tile pattern may also be used there or in bathrooms and kitchens.

Cork and composition flooring have many advantages.

Cork carpets as well as cork tile are on and is an ideal floor covering for rooms where there is much standing or walking and especially for the nursery floor. It is soft and resilient. Fifty cents a square foot is an ordinary price for composition covering.

Cork corpets as well as cork tile are on the market. Cork tile is made of shavings of clear cork; frequently the shavings of bottle corks. Cork tile, one-half inch in thickness, comes in three shades of brown. It has a velvety surface which might be an objection in some rooms, as it catches a certain amount of dirt.

In the matter of shrinkage cork tile has the advantage, as it is lost in a number of joints instead of in one or two places, as it is liable to be in linoleum. It also is a sound absorber. For the moderate-sized house it is practically prohibitive in price.

Cement on Floors. The Use of Tile and VITREOUS tile makes an ideal, sanitary covering for most bathroom and kitchen floors, although it is also quite expensive and lacks the resiliency of cork, a necessary quality for the kitchen floor. Tile floors are not laid directly on wood, but should have a concrete base. Black and white tile in either large or small patterns gives a striking effect in some rooms.

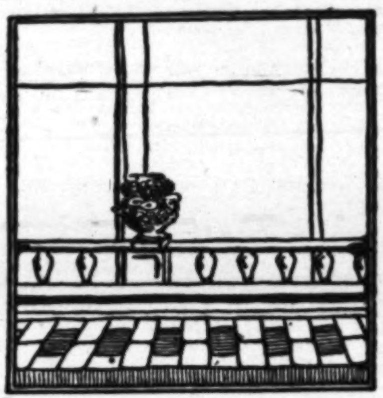
Cement floors are now laid in a variety of colorings, perhaps the most attractive shade being the popular soft pink so suitable to Spanish types of architecture. It may be left as a flat surface or lined off to give a tile effect. It is a sanitary covering, as the edges are usually rounded up to the baseboard, which prevents dust collections and facilitates cleaning. Again the disadvantage is in its hardness.

Careful Selection of the Rug Is All Important.

IF THE floor has been well chosen as to material and finish it is very important not to spoil it with an inappropriate rug. It doesn't matter so much if the rug is cheap or inexpensive as it does if it is the right color or of the right material. There is a wide range of choice in both domestic and imported rugs. A rug which is popular at the present time is the domestic rug in one, two or three plain tones. The plain toned rug gives the effect of greater size to a room especially if one rug is used instead of several small ones. Inexpensive rugs in plain tones look better than those which are figured, as both the color and design are apt to be inferior. They show foot prints, however, very easily.

Scotch wool rugs which are reversible are in new designs and colors. They are made in a variety of sizes from $5 to $6 a square yard.

Rush and fiber rugs are popular on the porch, in the bedroom, and in almost every room of the summer cottage. The imported ones come from Scotland, Holland and India. They range in price from $15 to $50 for a medium-sised rug. These are easily cleaned and spots may be removed with a stiff brush and soap and water.



Tiles for the Porch

Navajo rugs are usually too brilliant in color for any room except a den. The white, gray and black ones may be much more generally used. Both the material and color of these rugs is suitable for mountain cabins. They are not a suitable combination with the velvet or plush furniture of most living-rooms. For these rooms there are attractive and reasonably priced Axminister and velvet Wiltons. Some oriental rugs and domestic rugs in oriental patterns and colors are also used in living-rooms.

The line of least resistance sometimes isn't straight. Therefore, watch your step. —[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

DECORATIONS AND SHELL SHOCK.

Stage decorators understand the art of furniture placing to express the mood of the scene. Much of the atmosphere of the play is produced by the correct placing of the chairs and tables. Either serenity or chaos may be emphasized. The same effect may be produced in the home and if it has an effect on the persons watching a play, why isn't it reasonable to imagine that the persons living in this house are affected just as much? The effect of the appearance of the house on the working citizen returning from a day spent in the expenditure of physical or nervous energy cannot be overestimated.

STRUCTURAL LINES.

One of the principles of interior decoration is that decorative features should, where possible, emphasize the structural lines of the room. It is in accordance with this that small rugs are laid parallel with the sides of the room and curtains hung straight instead of being looped back to form triangular spaces. So, too, in arranging furniture, the placing of a chair or table or other piece across a corner instead of parallel with a wall is discouraged. Harmony, unity and balance are all furthered by the observance of this principle.

TONED BED SPREADS POPULAR.

The bed is such a comparatively large piece of furniture in the bedroom that anything that will make it less obtrusive produces a more artistic appearance in the room. For this reason colored spreads are used which either match or tone in with some color used in the room. Covers for quilts which may be unbuttoned, taken off and washed are also in color, preferably tones of soft silk. Green poplin has been used for an attractive spread.

CLOTHES HANGERS TO MATCH.

Every guest room should be supplied with a set of decorative clothes hangers. These may be bought in many designs and colors or the ordinary ones painted at home. An added pleasure is given to the occupant of the room if a hanger to match each gown is found ready for use. There are tiny cans of many colors of enamel which may be bought for this purpose.

"NEVER MISS MARY."

the women in this town are null and void—minus quantities, absolutely!"

He poured himself another drink on that, and Ted grinned.

"It isn't as bad as that, old man, you're just down on your luck and it looks that way to you. They surely don't all have red hair—and anyway, I like red hair. I met an angel with—but let's eat first," said Ted as he put on his hat and found Sam's for him.

. . . .

The next morning when Ted awoke, he sat up, immediately remembered where he was, why, and that there was a bright-haired girl in the same town. He whistled as he bathed and dressed.

Sam was awaiting him when he got downstairs and they climbed into his car to go out to the lease.

"We'll have breakfast at the shack. I've got a dandy Mexican cook. Have a good night's sleep?" he queried.

"You bet. Never dreamed a bit."

"Thought maybe you would after all you saw of this town," said Sam, laughing.

They had gone to a couple of promising-from-the-outside-disappointing-after-you-get-in cabarets; had watched a couple of steep games which they wisely refrained from sitting in—then wearily home to bed, in the language of the much-abused Samuel Pepys. They had seen a lot of red hair, but it was mostly the henna variety, so the feminine faction had not entered into the evening.

"Say, Ted, I hardly know where to put you on this job. You'll just have to hang around and be my legal adviser until I get you better located," Sam was saying.

"'Sall right with me, old boy. It sure seems good to be with you again."

The car drew up to the shack and they jumped from it and dashed into the aroma of frying ham.

After Ted's third cup of excellent coffee, he was introduced to everyone down to the roustabout. Finally he met Sam's "best man," as he called him, who said in answer to Sam's queries, "No luck yet, sir—and that beggar over there has gone 2000 deep already. There are some parts that we'll have to get today, Mr. Wentworth."

"Well, I'll go to town and get them right away. You can go attend to your plane, Ted, while I'm gone—and make yourself at home about these premises. Be back in an hour, anyway."

When he had gone, Ted went in search of his abandoned plane. As he descended the hill, he saw a riderless pony grazing near the machine, and his heartbeat quickened. He wondered anxiously where the rider was.

He found her seated in the plane, examining the levers interestedly. She was all in white today, with black boots; and the contrast of her rich coloring against the habit was bewitching. He stood watching her for a few seconds before she sensed his presence and looked up. Then she flushed guiltily.

"Oh, pardon me, I—I—was just interested in the mechanism of this." She laughed. "Trying to discover the electric gear shift."

Ted gazed straight into her big brown eyes, and then said suddenly, "I think the fairies must have dropped you here. Before they take you away again I think I shall fly away with you myself." Then, rather hesitatingly, "there's enough gas in her to take a little spin—if you'd care to go. Would you?"

She liked this impulsive boy, and she could not resist him.

"There's nothing I'd rather do," she replied.

As he helped her to adjust the extra mask and coat, he explained the mechanism of the motor to her and ended with: "Now you could pilot her yourself, Miss Smith."

"Do let me try, Mr. Wilde—will you?" she asked, and there was an amused, if not mischievous, twinkle in her eyes.

"Call me Ted, and I will—when we get up in the air, maybe," he replied, and tucked her in and strapped her to her seat.

Mary did not get to the wheel, however, as they had gone just about twenty miles when Ted suddenly throttled the gas and made a rather quick descension. When the roaring had ceased, she looked at him questioningly.

"Gas," he said; "just about to run out of gas. Ranger is the nearest town and it's about twenty miles!" he groaned.

"Oh, I don't mind walking," she said, and then added cheerfully, "and we might meet some one I know and get a lift." Whereupon she threw off her coat and started.

"Gad! What a disposition she has!" thought Ted. "Say, I love you!" he burst out. "You're the most wonderful human being in the world!" And then he added quickly, before she had time to reply, "they should have special cells for people who think the gun isn't loaded and those who think they have enough gasoline—and I ought to be in one right now." He took her hand. "I am so sorry this has occurred, Mary." And he looked quite rueful.

She laughed. "I love to walk, and don't get much chance. I guess this is the road here. I hope this won't keep you from your work."

"No, indeed; I'm just legal adviser to a well that would rather be fished in than gush."

"Sam is having trouble, isn't he?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied, and told her about it, ending with the sad remark: "The other fellow has almost struck it by now and there doesn't seem any chance for Sam."

Mary looked quite concerned, and he tried to decide which way she was more beautiful, laughing and disclosing perfect little white teeth, or serious, with her soft brown eyes bent upon his face. Anyway, the sun shone on that glorious hair, and he forgot to make the decision. She was speaking.

"I have a brother, that's a lawyer and he has a lot of cases in the district court—he's the one that got me my job as deputy; and he used to talk law to me a lot when we were both home. He was in the air service, too. Maybe you—well, anyway, what I was going to say, it seems to me that Sam could file an injunction—isn't that what you call it—ordering this Hodkins to cease operation until a certain time when Sam can have found his bit?"

Ted gazed at her in astonishment for a full moment, then he took her in his arms and kissed her, then released her immediately and exclaimed, "You little brick! Sam'll have to make you his legal adviser after this. That's the very thing. I can't see why I didn't think of it. We'll talk it over the minute we get back. But first you've got to promise to be my legal partner—forever—will you, Mary?"

"Why, you can't expect—so soon — why, I hardly know you——" Her voice trailed off into a smothered little sound.

. . . .

They rode back in the rear seat of an old buggy that they persuaded an old farmer to hitch up to his one horse, and the ride home in the hot sun, traveling about five miles an hour, was infinitely sweet. It seemed very much shorter than the swift dash through the air, and, it might be said, more full of thrills.

A council of war was held when they reached camp. Sam was highly enthused over the plan to file injunction proceedings. He had at first been inclined to berate Ted for running off when he had promised him a flight the previous evening. He immediately dispatched a mechanic on his motorcycle, ordering him to find the plane, and fill her up and stand guard until they came for it.

Mary was the first to leave the shack after they had talked over their plans. As she stepped out of the door, she saw one of Hodkin's men turn from a window, and make his way swiftly to his boss's shack. She watched him, spellbound, realizing that he had heard every word. He reappeared almost immediately with Hodkins. As they emerged from the shack, Mary dashed in to tell her friends, but not before she saw them spring into Hodkin's car and start down the road.

When she had related the incident to Sam and his legal adviser, Ted burst out, "Great Scott! They've gone to the District Court—it's about forty miles from here. That crook will get there first and beat us to it!"

Sam looked disconsolate. "Just my luck!" he exclaimed. "This thing's hoodooed. After someone with a little brains finally sees a glimmer of hope—why didn't we look at the blamed windows!"

Ted made a dive for the car. "Come on," he cried, "we've got to get there first, that's all! We've got a faster car and we'll just beat him."

Sam got in; Ted was already at the wheel. He said to Mary, "Are you coming with us, honey?"

"No," she said, "you don't want any more load than you have to have. Good luck. Hurry up!"

Ted leaned out of the car. "Gee! This means a lot to us, sweetheart." He took her hand and kissed it as he stepped on the starter.

They thundered off. Their car was a faster car than Hodkins's and they kept at a steady speed until they finally could see the dust from the other's car. But Hodkins seemed to realize he was being pursued and kept a safe distance ahead, though it seemed that Sam's car was gradually creeping up on him. Ted's teeth were set, and his skill at the wheel just saved them from being hit by an immense yellow car that flew past them like the wind.

"Glad Hodkins hasn't a car like that!" shouted Sam. "We're pulling up on him now, all right, Ted."

They were. In fact, they advanced upon it very rapidly now, for it had stopped.

"Hooray! Blow-out—out of gas — breakdown!" cried Sam exultantly.

But when they were about to pass it triumphantly, they perceived that it was deserted. Hodkins was on his way in the speed demon that had passed them!

"We're lost!" wailed Sam. "The whole thing's hoodooed, that's all!"

"Well, let's keep going, anyway," said Ted. "They might have a breakdown." But he said it hopelessly, for he, too, knew that they had lost.

. . . .

Mary had her own reason for refusing to accompany the two men. She waited until they had gone, and then mounted her pony, and galloped across the plains. She had a daring idea. And anything daring was always irresistible to Mary. She had not mentioned her idea to Ted, as it had only half formulated. She also had not mentioned the fact that she had learned to pilot an airplane when that brother of hers was in the air service; and that that was her special reason for asking Ted to let her fly his. She could not help wanting to dazzle him with her skill. But now! She took a short cut across the plains on her swift pony. Knowing the country as she did, it was not hard to locate the plane where they had left it in the morning.

She was pretty tired from her long, fast, cross-country ride, but her enthusiasm knew no fatigue. She leaped from her horse almost right into the pilot seat. The mechanic was there and had already filled the tank, and he helped her take off. She piloted the plane safely into the air, and straight toward the town where they held district court. She made a landing quite gracefully in an open field back of the station, and lost no time in hiring a station taxi to drive her "like mad" to her brother's office.

. . . .

When Ted and Sam drove up to the Courthouse, they despaired. The yellow monster was parked in front, like a demon of fate to shatter their hopes.

They were looking dolefully at each other when they suddenly heard a joyous cry. They turned, and Mary was standing on the Courthouse steps waving a legal looking document wildly in the air. A young man accompanied her.

"Meet my brother, Ted," she called.

Ted sprank to her side, aghast.

"Sweetheart—darling—you——" He caught a glimpse of Hodkins's angry visage as he passed them on the steps.

Mary's eyes were shining. "Yes, I came in your plane and saved—us."

"But how—you might have been hurt—oh, my darling—for me—for us——" He suddenly smothered his incoherency in the palm of her hand.

. . . .

Ten days later, one Mr. James Adkins received a wire over which he grinned broadly, and which he filed away among his personal papers.

If he were to permit us to peep, we would read:

"Am wiring your fifty. Thanks. Sam's well gushed yesterday. Leaving for Atlantic City today. Will stop on way to show you something. Sure you will approve.—Ted."

At that moment, a little lady with red-gold hair slipped her hand into that of her husband. And everyone on the observation platform smiled at everyone else.

verized, and when the crew needed game the barrel was loaded and, resting it across the shoulder of one of the men, the captain would aim for a wild hog. If the game was brought down, it was well; if the hog was only wounded, the sailors took to the trees.

Soon after the landing was made at Pitcairn's their boat had been wrecked in the surf. When it seemed useless to wait any longer for a ship, the captain and his men began, with hardly any tool but an old ax, to build another boat. They went to the mountains, cut down green trees, shaped them into planks and carried them on their backs to the beach. Having no nails, they were obliged to burn down one of the houses in order to get enough to fasten the planks. All the while the captain had $17,000 in specie, which he had saved from the ship and buried at Pitcairn Island.

When the boat after many weeks was done and had been rigged with a blanket for a sail, Capt. Knowles started back to rescue his crew on the lonely island, or to hail some passing vessel. His specie was placed in the bottom of the boat as ballast. Arriving off the coral island, a fierce gale was raging so that he could make no landing. He was compelled to sail northward for more than 1400 miles to reach the first inhabited island, one of the Samoan group. There he found an American man-of-war, which landed him at Honolulu and made provision for reaching the shipwrecked sailors.

A year after he had sailed from San Francisco, Capt. Knowles again arrived there. He had lost his ship, through no fault of his own, but he had brought about the safety of all his men, and he turned over to his owners every dollar of specie.

ROBERT HENRI, the well-known painter, said at a dinner at the Ritz:

"Nothing makes me more happy than to do some little act of kindness for a fellow-ceature.

"I remember once, while touring Andalusia, I met an English lady in the Alhambra in Granada. The lady had heard that Washington Irving had penciled his autograph on one of the walls of the old Moorish palace, and she was very anxious to see it.

"Now I knew that this autograph had been destroyed many years ago while the Alhambra was being restored, but I said nothing to the lady about that. Why cause her sorrow? On the contrary, I went about the palace with her, pretending to help her in her search, and finally, when her back was turned, I hurriedly wrote Washington Irving's name on a white wall.

"I'll never forget," Mr. Henri concluded, "the lady's happiness when she discovered the autograph. She snapshotted it from four angles. Yes, there is nothing more delightful than to do these little kindnesses to our fellow creatures."

SANDY, not feeling well, had consulted a doctor.

Doctor: Do you drink, Sandy?

Sandy: Yes, sir.

Doctor: Well, you must give that up. D'you smoke?

Sandy: Yes, sir.

Doctor: You must give that up, too.

As Sandy went quickly through the office door, the doctor exclaimed:

"You have not paid me for my advice, Sandy."

"I'm not taking it," replied Sandy.

ON THE Friday evening when the great strike had been planned to take place an old lady got into an omnibus. She handed the conductor her fare and said anxiously, "Are you coming out this evening?"

The conductor shook his head and answered with great politeness, "I'm afraid I can't, mum. I've got to get home to my old woman."

"Why?"

"Well," replied the dentist, "how will I know when he is unconscious?"

Evening Spoilt.

THEY were discussing at the Century Club the plays of Strindberg, Schnitzler, Drinkwater and Brieux.

"Why the deuce," said the novelist Robert W. Chambers, with a yawn—"why the deuce are highbrow plays so insufferably dull?

"At a Strindberg play in Greenwich Village the other night a woman in front of me poked her husband in the ribs and whispered fiercely:

" 'I do wish you would pay more attention to the play, George. This play is as good as a sermon.'

" 'It sure is,' George muttered drowsily, 'only the orchestra wakes me up between acts.' "

Proved Its Worth.

MR. BIGGS was planning to build a motor shed in his garden, so he bought an expensive saw. He left his office early the next afternoon with the intention of starting the job. He put on a pair of overalls and went out. An hour later or so he flung himself down into a chair in disgust.

"That new saw I bought isn't worth twopence," he stormed. "Why, the thing wouldn't cut butter."

His small son Harry looked up in surprise.

"Oh, yes it would, daddy," he said earnestly. "Why, Ted and me sawed a whole brick in two with it this morning."

So He Could Smile.

A SMALL boy was sent to church by his father with a nickel and a dollar bill in his pocket.

"You are to put what you please in the offering box, my boy. Listen to the sermon and make your offering in accordance with the impression made upon you."

The boy had returned. "Well, what did you put in the box," his father asked.

"The nickel. I was going to put in the other when I remembered what the clergyman said in his sermon."

"What was that?"

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

Better Retire.

"I'M discouraged and tired of life," declared the head of the family.

"Why so despondent?" asked his friend.

"Statistics."

"Statistics? What's that got to do with it?"

"Yes; they say that five hours of work a day is enough to supply each member of the community with a living, provided the work be equally shared by all.

"Well, I'm the only one in five in my family that labors. So, if the statistics are true, to support the crowd I've got to work twenty-five hours a day."

IRVIN S. COBB, the humorous lecturer, on a recent southern tour stopped for dinner at a tiny railway restaurant in a Mississippi village.

"Well, uncle, what's the bill-of-fare?" he asked the aged colored man who came from the kitchen to look after him.

"De bill o' fare," said the old man, "am ham, eggs, cohn bread and coffee."

"Then I'll have ham, eggs, corn bread and coffee, uncle," said Mr. Cobb.

The old waiter bowed and shuffled out. But a moment later he put his head through the doorway again.

"Boss," he said, "how ye gwine have dem eggs—blind or lookin' at ye?"

MRS. SPEEDUP was of the houseproud kind, and very methodical in selecting her hours and days in getting through the work of the house.

One day she engaged a domestic servant who had just arrived from Erin's isle.

Both mistress and maid got on well together in the work.

After a fortnight's tuition the good lady through that Bridget could manage by herself.

"So we will partake breakfast at 8 in the morning," Mrs. Speedup said, as she handed over the control of the house duties to Bridget.

Both Hopeless.

PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS, Yale's brilliant critic, was defending the modern American novel at a dinner.

"People say the American novel doesn't find fault enough with American conditions," he said. "They want it to resemble the Russian or the Scandinavian novel.

"But those European novelists are too hopeless altogether.

" 'What's pessimism?' one of them was asked the other day.

" 'The faith of cowards,' he instantly answered.

DOLLY was taking her baby sister out for a walk one afternoon, and, being attracted by a milliner's shop, she put her charge on the pavement and went to select—in imagination—a hat.

"Oh! no, sir," she said; "it belongs to my mother!"

And the crowd smiled.

Happy Death.

THE eternal prohibition question was being argued at the Knickerbocker Club, and Cortlandt Bleecker said:

"I once heard a preacher and an ex-doughboy wrangling just as we are wrangling now. The preacher shouted:

" 'You, an ex-doughboy of all men, to cry down prohibition! Why, you idiot, don't you know booze has killed more people than bullets ever did?'

" 'Maybe so,' said the ex-doughboy, and he laughed. 'Maybe so, parson, but all the same I'd rather be full of booze than full of bullets.' "

"WILL you take £10 for that cow?" said Farmer Scroggins.

"Can't do it," was Farmer Johnson's reply.

"But yesterday you told me you'd sell her for £10."

"I know I did, but I'll have to back out."

"What's the matter?"

"You see, the cow belongs to my daughter, and she says she will sob herself into hysterics if I sell the cow. It would break her heart."

"All right—it's no sale, then."

"I say."

"Well, what is it?"

"Make it £12 and we'll let her sob."

A Close-Up.

GEN. BLISS said at a dinner in Washington:

"Of course a good many tallish stories were spread abroad during the World War. The German atrocities, for example — children with both hands cut off and so on—and then the angels at Mons—well, these things were rather exaggerated.

"I remember a story about the Mons angels.

" 'You are positive you saw those angels, are you?' an old lady said to a private. 'Were you close to them?'

" 'Close?' said the private. 'Why, ma'am, a pal o' mine was so close he spotted an aunt of his among 'em.' "

THE THREE DEAD MEN.

tion that he would be found guilty, sooner or later, of a double murder. His record would be against him and there was none to speak a word for him. He had left Bridgetown on the previous night and walked home through the small hours; and all he could say was that he had seen John Diggle shoot Henry Slanning and taken the law into his own hands. To utter such nonsense would be to stand self-condemned.

"To me the result of these reflections on the temperament of Solly Lawson can be predicted with logical certainty. He feels, at the morning hour of lowest vitality, that it is far better to die than live for what must lie before him. By this time he has drifted back to the cliffs, for he has been walking subconsciously homeward. The sea lies beneath him and a few moments of suffering will end all. Better to perish thus than on the gallows with the execration of all humanity in his ears.

"Again impulse decides him. He sees not a ray of hope, but hungers to end his mental torture as swiftly as may be. Feeble now and worn out in body and mind, he dashes at his doom, designing to vanish off the earth forever and leave no link by which he can be connected with the dead men in the plantation. He will leap down into the sea and so disappear where none can find him. But a common instinct in suicide, to pile one death upon another, manifests itself in Solly Lawson at this supreme moment. Men often destroy themselves so; and there is undoubtedly some subtle psychological instinct that tends to make these double deaths less fearful to the self-destroyer. A man will drink poison and then blow his brains out; or, as in the case of this ill-starred youth, he will cut his throat and leap over a precipice with his remaining strength.

"Thus did Solly act, and had he fallen, as he designed, into the depths below, no explanation of these incidents would ever have won to mortal mind; but he fell on a projection of the cliff; his body was thus recovered and his secret, as I believe, revealed, to play its intrinsic part in the larger mystery with which we are concerned.

"That, then, is what happened in my opinion; and if it be argued that not a shadow of actual and tangible proof exists for such a theory, I admit it. It is granted that I present nothing but a theory of events and the situation makes it impossible to do more; but I repeat that the view I submit is based on character, than which no surer foundation of action can be discovered; and since these three men all do exactly what may be predicted of them given the circumstances, it is hard, and for me impossible, to see how any other rational explanation of their death can be advanced.

. . . . . .

It remains only to add that while many accepted Duveen's conclusions others did not, and among the latter, as he prophesied, was Amos Slanning. The West Indian held this explanation of his brother's death to be merest moonshine; though, as I explicitly learned from various Barbadian sources, the majority of Henry Slanning's friends and acquaintances in the West Indies believed the matter must have so happened. At first they also protested; but when the novelty of the idea grew worn, they came to believe it. The probability, in fact, increased rather than diminished.

As for Michael Duveen, he felt no shadow of doubt concerning his conclusions, and while declining the large honorarium offered to him, since it came from a client unconvinced, always held the case to be among his own purest analytical achievements.

"It is an example," he used to say, "of how motive may sometimes be unearthed through the track of character, when every other possible channel is blocked by death that cannot be explored. For my part, I often have doubted the most luminous circumstantial evidence, if opposed by equally luminous facts of character; and though in many cases crime suddenly appears in soil of character where one would have supposed no such seed could spring, for temptation will break through the bars like a strong man armed; yet, as a general rule, if we know what an individual has been, and what forces always have guided and controlled his acts, we may safely judge as suspect any charges which openly contradict the massive proofs of his past conduct, but accept as worthy of close examination, such actions as support them."

penetrate into the heart of the mountains and sense the presence of wild and unsubdued country. At least, it affords the most that one is able to get out of a single day trip.

Somewhat less than half way from Nevada Fall to Clouds Rest, a trail branches on the right. This is the Sunrise Trail to Soda Springs in the Big Tuolumne Meadows. It is marked on the special topographic map of Yosemite issued by the U. S. Geological Survey in 1910, as the Soda Springs Trail. This name was given because it leads to the great soda spring in the Big Tuolumne Meadows. However, those who frequent this region always call it the Sunrise Trail. If you follow the Sunrise Trail for two or three hours, you would find another trail branching from it on the right. This is the Merced Trail, leading to the upper part of the Merced River and Merced Lake.

Half Dome Trail First Conquered by John Muir.

THE Half Dome Trail branches off from the Clouds Rest Trail just where the steep climbing begins on that trail.

For many years the Half Dome was considered unscalable. But in 1875 Capt. George Anderson worked his way to the top by drilling a series of holes, into which he drove bolts, fastening a rope to the bolts as he proceeded upward. On November 10th of that year, by the help of Anderson's rope, John Muir made the ascent, and he has left us a vivid description of his trip, which was a stormy one, winter having already set in. The heavy snows of that winter swept away Anderson's cable, and no one again ascended the Dome until the present steel cable stairway was erected in 1919 by the Sierra Club, through the generosity of M. Hall McAllister of San Francisco, a member of the club. The following description of this cable stairway is taken from the Sierra Club Bulletin of January, 1920:

"It consists of two sections. The first is on the small dome, or saddle, and consists of a zigzag trail and stone steps covering about 600 feet. The second section leads up the big incline on the large dome. This slope is of polished granite, about 800 feet in length. On this incline, which varies from 45 to 60 degrees, is placed a double handrail of steel cables set into a double line of steel posts thirty inches apart, like those of a steamer's gangplank. These steel posts are set into sockets drilled in the granite every ten feet, and at intervals of 100 feet heavy chains bolted in the rock will help to strengthen the cable or take up any strain on them. When the season is over the caps on the top of each post will be unscrewed, the cables, which are anchored permanently at the top and bottom of the rock, will be lifted from the posts, and the posts taken from their sockets and stowed away off the rock until spring. It is not thought that the cables lying flat on the rock, and also being held by the safety chains, will be at all disturbed by the spring avalanches."

Concerning the climbing of the stairway, the following advice is given:

"It is best to wear rubber-soled tennis shoes, as the granite is so smooth and slippery that spiked soles are dangerous. For those who feel at all timid safety belts are provided, which fasten you to the cables so that it will be impossible to slip and meet with an accident."

Notwithstanding the care with which the cables were anchored, and the precautions taken to prevent their injury during the winter and spring, they have been badly damaged by the ice avalanches, and the stairway has required much repairing before it could be put into use each season.

Nothing But Frills.

Bishop Homer Stunts said at a dinner in Omaha:

"If we were all as ambitious to progress ethically as our war profiteers are to progress socially, it would be a very good thing.

"A war profiteer decided recently to drop the Baptist faith and turn Episcopalian, as all the bang-up people in town went to the Episcopalian church.

"So he visited the bookstore and asked for the hymnals, Bibles and so forth that he would need in his new way to worship.

"He seemed well enough pleased with the volumes that the salesman laid before him till he came to the book of Common Prayer. Over this he frowned and shook his head.

"'This'll hardly do,' he said, and he tapped the title with his forefinger. 'Let's have something a little more select, bo.'"

One Thing Lacking.

He was a suburban amateur gardener, whose mission in life was to bore all his friends by asking them down for the weekends and showing them round his three-feet-by-two estate. Just now he was boring Jackson, from the office.

He showed him his four rose trees; he showed him his pocket shrubbery, his half-inch fountain jet with its little basin and pair of goldfish; he showed him his summer house, which would almost admit two persons at one and the same time.

"Never know what you can do until you try!" cackled the host, rubbing his hands gleefully.

"Quite so—quite so," returned Jackson absently. "But I think you might improve it."

"How?" questioned the owner.

"Well," replied Jackson, "why don't you take a strip off the flower bed — say four inches wide—turf it over and convert it into golf links?"

THE POTTERS.

(Quite an idea. Every one who belongs to the syndicate will contribute a few hundred each—say five hundred—and then they'll drill and strike oil and the millions will be split up among the members. It doesn't take long to convince Pa that another $500 judiciously spent on drilling a well will make him rich, especially since he can almost see a real successful oil well from where he stands—that is the well, by the way, which was referred to in the telegram Pa got a few weeks ago.)

PA (dazedly:)
Are we gonna drill?
EAGLE (enthusiastically:)
Are we gonna drill? Believe me, we will; What's the use of giving the money away? Let's drill our own wells and then keep it, I say.
PA: But suppose they don't strike oil when they drill?
EAGLE: Don't make' me laugh . . . why, of course they will. Not strike oil? . . . Har har . . . har har!
PA (to himself:)
I guess I can borrow the dough on my car. (aloud) All right there, I'll go you . . . let's drill our own well.
EAGLE (admiringly:)
Shake hands, Mr. Potter; you sure ring the bell. I told 'em you're keen, that they couldn't fool you.
PA: I guess I'm not dumb . . . I know something or two.

An Ideal.

Six-year-old Margaret often played with Nellie, a neighbor's little girl. One rainy day the two were just starting across the clean kitchen floor at Margaret's home when the latter's mother, seeing their muddy shoes, headed them off and sent them out to play on the porch. After a moment Nellie remarked:

"My mother don't care how much I run over the kitchen floor."

There was quite a long interval of silence. Then Margaret said:

"I wish I had a nice, dirty mother like you've got, Nellie."

How He Worked It.

Who was it took ye to the cinema on Monday night, Jennie?" said Donald as they strolled in the park.

"You, Donald," was the answer.

"And who took ye to the dance on Tuesday?"

"It was you, Donald."

"And who went with ye to the music hall on Wednesday?"

"You, Donald."

"Well, Jennie, girl, do ye no smell a rat?" he finished triumphantly.

Misconstrued.

Secretary Mellon, a brilliant talker, has a hearty hatred of bores. He said the other evening at a dinner:

"Bores are always loquacious. A silent bore is like a dead monkey—not to be found. In a bore's presence it is impossible to get a word in edgewise.

"A bore once said to me:

"'Our friend Smith is an impolite duffer. While I was talking to him yesterday he yawned eleven times.'"

"'But,' said I, 'perhaps he wasn't yawning. 'Perhaps he was trying to say something.'"

Par Excellence.

A young married woman who had moved into the country considered the keeping of hens a pleasant and profitable undertaking. As she grew more absorbed in the pursuit her enthusiasm increased.

During one of her animated descriptions of her success a friend inquired: "Are your birds good laying hens?"

"Oh, yes," she replied, in a delighted tone, "they haven't laid a bad egg yet."

THE THREE

BY EDEN P

"He treated her well?"

"Berry kind an' good to her. She tell yo' de same if yo' ask her."

Further inquiries respecting the character and history of John Diggle and Solly Lawson confirmed these reports of wife and mother. Independent witnesses agreed with them and with Amos Slanning, who had already told me the same story. It was, indeed, a curious coincidence that the three dead men had all been without any sinister or dangerously unsocial qualities. Of the young half-caste, though it was clear he had been lawless and more or less disreputable, it seemed unlikely that he could have wakened sufficient enmity to lose his life for his sins.

To explain why Henry Slanning had gone out in the night challenged me as the pregnant point; and given the reason for that most unusual step, everything else might have followed from it; but no reason offered; at every turn in this exasperating inquiry I was headed off by a blank wall, as it seemed, for the purpose and motive, though they must have existed for every secret incident in this web, were absolutely beyond my power to discover.

Henry Slanning had clearly gone where he knew John Diggle was to be found on his rounds; but whether he had actually sought Diggle, or another, could never be known, unless a living man furnished the information. None, however, came forward; there was an extraordinary lack of all evidence; for in such cases, nine times out of ten, chance offers a foothold for a first step, and this or that man or woman, from outside the case, will appear with some incident or observation that may open the way to inquiry or suggest a train of research. But no such thing happened for me. Not a soul bore any testimony of any sort whatever, and not a soul actually came within the radius of the case. Here, apparently, one stood confronted with three barefaced and deliberate murders, committed in a night on a small island, yet not a shadow of any motive explained them and not a living being could fairly be pointed at as suspect in any degree.

I made very copious notes and, of course, pursued inquiry through many minor channels, which all ended in failure and contributed no light. I stood in the disagreeable position of being unable to make a case, and after a month's very hard and conscientious work was forced to own it to myself. A loss of self-esteem resulted. I began all over again, only to complete another circle of failure. Nor could it be called comparative unsuccess. The futility of my investigation was complete. I arrived at no theory of any sort or kind, and though once I glimpsed the truth darkly, as afterwards appeared, I wandered from the right road the moment it began to appear impossible.

My last week at Barbados, the last of six spent upon the subject, was devoted largely to Amos Slanning. He had been extraordinarily kind to me personally, and insisted upon my spending a few days at the Pelican Estate as his guest before I left the West Indies. He was frankly disappointed at my failure, but not more than I myself confessed to being. It is true that, though trained to this work by instinct and native bent, with already some fair share of success in various obscure cases, I failed signally here.

I could only admit it and hope my chief might prove more fortunate. We talked much of Henry Slanning; indeed, I kept the conversation to him as far as one decently might, and not only with his twin brother; for now I saw the truth of what men had told me—that Amos entertained an opinion of his brother's character that differed from the truth. He did not undervalue his rectitude, or the regard and respect universally extended to the dead man; but he had never fathomed a character very different from his own, and probably never felt, even if he had seen, the intellectual and inquisitive side of Henry Slanning's character.

For example, when I returned to the possibility of suicide, a thought that haunted me in connection with the case, though the facts were there to prove murder, Amos Slanning assured me that nothing was more unlikely, and even when the revolver was proved to have been bought in England by his brother, he stoutly protested that it could not have been purchased with any thought of such a purpose. Others, however, saw no improbability in the idea of Henry Slanning's suicide under certain circumstances; but, since obvious murder and not suicide confronted us, they saw no object in raising the question.

I begged for a photograph of the dead man to take home with the rest of my elaborate dossier. The picture he lent me resembled Amos closely in feature, but the expression Indeed, it was a face where unrest had made a home, and one had judged the man who looked so was defeated of his ambitions. Yet no cynicism clouded his features and his mouth was as kindly as his brother's and no firmer. The photograph had been taken before Slanning's love affair.

What proved more interesting to me came into my hands by accident two days before I left the island on my homeward way. Amos, searching among his brother's things, had found a diary, which contained nothing that threw illumination upon the past and apparently abstained of set purpose from any mention of Henry's romance; but, in addition to this, he discovered a pile of manuscript—the musings of an intellectual man on a variety of subjects, all of direct human interest.

Study of Henry Slanning's personal library had already convinced me of his activity in the domain of thought, while Lady Warrender had confirmed the fact. His books were for the most part philosophical, and I found a translation of Gomperez that had evidently occupied much of his time, and translations of other German writers, including the English version in twenty volumes of Nietzsche. He had Gilbert Murray's Greek tragedians also, with Plato and Aristotle deeply read. His interest evidently ran on the great pagans. As to his own writings, they reminded one of the "Anatomy of Melancholy." They abounded in curious quotations and tended to the morbid; but they were full of illumination as to the character of the man revealed in his interests.

He had compiled on love, passion, ambition, patience, duty, suicide, justice, free thought, and free will as opposed to destiny. He was clearly a rationalist at this stage of his life, and acknowledged no supernatural inhibition to conduct; but his sense of duty was exquisitely keen; he debated questions of justice with a mind as impartial as distinguished, and one felt in the presence of a man who was almost weighed down by his obligations to his fellow creatures. He wrote of mastery and domination, of craft and the unhappy need for falsehood in the affairs of life, of heredity and environment as rival or twin forces in development of character.

I begged these voluminous documents, since, in my opinion, they must prove of great value to Duveen when he came to investigate Henry Slanning's fate; and his brother was content that I should take them with me.

"I shall publish the whole thing presently," he assured me. "It will be a valuable memorial of Henry and help to show the world that he was a remarkable man and a far greater thinker than people supposed."

And so I left the West Indies (picking up the steamship Don on its return voyage from Jamaica,) and departed grateful for much kindness and consideration, the richer for a good friend or two—men who are still my friends—and disappointed and chagrined to the very roots of my being in this blank failure to advance by a single fruitful speculation the problems I had gone so many miles and worked so exceedingly hard to resolve.

My utter failure had one good result, for it awoke the interest of Michael Duveen and he did not conceal his astonishment at a fiasco so complete.

"A dozen theories, of course, I had," I explained, "but each in turn came up against a blank negation. I could find no sort of explanation that fitted all the facts—worse, I could find no explanation that fitted any of them. So far as I could discover, as a result of sleepless search, these three men had not between them a real enemy in the world, nor was it possible to meet anybody living, or hear of anybody living, who can gain anything by the death of any of them. You'll say, of course, that Amos Slanning gains; but in reality he does not, for he and Henry had practically everything in common and were very deeply attached to each other.

"If one thing is certain, where all is so uncertain, I should say it was the absolute innocence of Amos Slanning. The weirdest thing is, that against the evidence of my own sense and the fact of murder duly proved—murder, of course, by a person or persons unknown—I still find my mind coming back to the conviction that it simply cannot be. There was nobody on earth to murder Slanning; but there was quite sufficient reason in his own mind for him to commit suicide. But he didn't."

Duveen patted me on the shoulder

"We shall see whether you are to be forgiven," he said. "You have at least roused my curiosity and I shall better judge when I set to work on your notes, if you have failed as hopelessly as you imagine. Meantime there is plenty to do. Come and dine with me a week hence, if nothing happens sentence, or your acquittal, as the case may be. The change has done you good—save for your remorseful expression. I never saw you looking so well."

Thus he dismissed me and I felt glad to think of other things until the evening came on which I was to dine with him. He put me off for a farther week, however, but saw me at his office and asked a few questions concerning the West Indian problem. These I answered, and he made no comment on my replies.

Then I dined with him and, after the meal, he read me the following report:

"I have solved the problem," he said, "and I am absolutely convinced in my own mind that it is correctly solved. Whether those most vitally interested, however, will accept the solution, is another question."

"Solved it?" I gasped.

"To my own satisfaction," he repeated; "and I shall be disappointed if not to yours also. You are not to blame. You did everything that I should, or could, have done myself. You lacked the necessary synthetic inspiration to put the pieces of the puzzle together after collecting them—that is all."

"That is everything."

"You were right, but let appearances tempt you away from the truth. Your intuition had only to be followed, but, basely, you deserted it."

"How could I follow it against an absolute fact?"

"My dear friend, no fact is absolute.".

"But murder can't be suicide."

"Murder may be suicide and suicide may be murder. Don't make rash assertions; but light your cigar and listen. I'm rather pleased with this; though I repeat it is quite likely that nobody but our noble selves will appreciate it at its true value. From your description of Amos Slanning I am quite sure that he will not. Therefore, let us expect no reward."

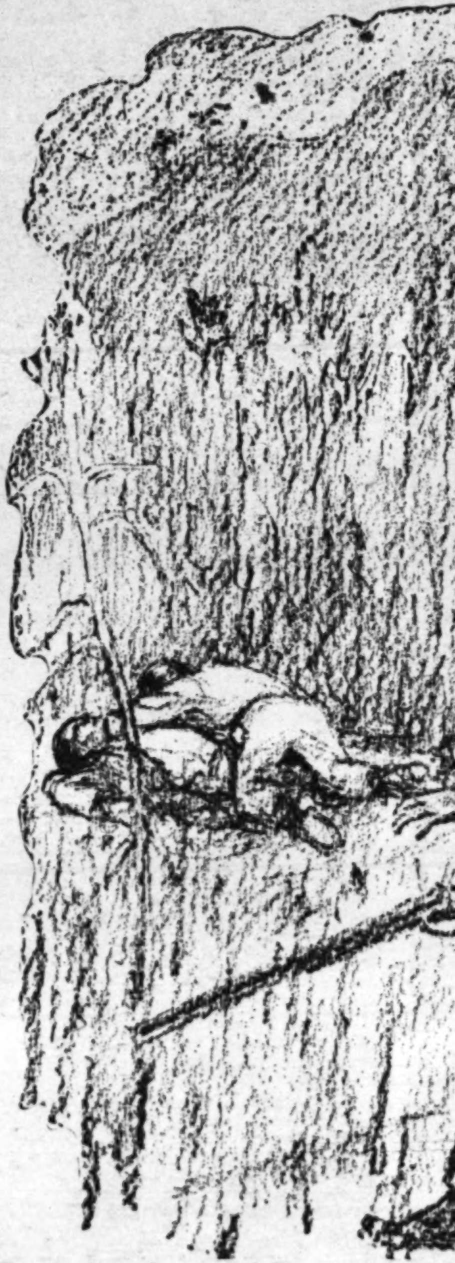
"Only through a close and exhaustive study of character is it possible to reach any explanation of this problem; and in the case of Henry Slanning, on whose death the destruction of the lesser men, John Diggle and Solly Lawson, will be found to depend, ample material for an estimate of his complex temperament exists. Not only from the facts recorded concerning him, but also from his dissertations and meditations he may be measured; and it is from my estimate of him, built on elaborate data, that I propound the following theory and reconstruct the incidents which deprived him and the other two victims of their lives.

"Emphatically Solly Lawson's end forms a part of the larger problem, for I find in him a very vital component of the whole. Accident involved him in the heart of the catastrophe, and, without him, we should have had one dead man instead of three and a tragedy of an interesting psychological nature, but no mystery whatever. For the mystery now to be explained, is not the premeditated work of man, but the blind operation of chance.

"Let us then glance first at character, and take the dead in rotation. As I shall show, we are concerned alone with them. No undiscovered villains lurk in hiding; no living man, unless it be myself, yet understands the secret. These three alone are responsible for their own undoing; or it would be more correct to say that an egregious action of Henry Slanning precipitated the death of the two humbler personages.

"Henry Slanning we find to be a man of cultured and refined tastes, averse from even the incidental violence of sport. Mrs. Jane Diggle said of him that 'he could not kill a scorpion.' He was shrewd, sagacious, and a good man of business. The power of wealth he inherited and did not abuse. He worked hard and with an exemplary humanity and consideration for all he employed. He was generous, thoughtful, and kind hearted; nor did he lack for ambition beyond his own prosperity and the well being of his many employees, for we find him accepting civil offices in Barbados and devoting no small measure of his time to unpaid labor for the general weal.

"This is the other man and the personality familiar to his brother, his friends, and acquaintances; but there is another Henry Slanning, an 'intellectual' of inquiring spirit, a ceaseless searcher after curious knowledge, a voluminous reader, and a keen thinker along certain lines. He is interested in many things, but certain subjects possess for him a peculiar fascination, and one was different—subtler and more melancholy.



"Then he drops the gun and flies to sound the al to prevent you; then you shall hear your above all others would seem persistently to intrigue his mind.

"It is a morbid subject hardly to be associated with a prosperous, hale and popular young man of 35; but there can be no doubt of the fact, since not only was it reported to my colleague from more than one quarter in the course of his independent inquiry, but we also find it an ever present theme of Henry Slanning's careful memoranda. He commits himself to a definite opinion upon it; he ransacks profane literature for his support and finds justification for his conclusions in Christian history.

"To this we will return. For the moment it is necessary to show how what possessed, in the first place, no more than an abstract and academic interest for Henry Slanning, rose to become a personal problem and a personal temptation. He had tasted what life could offer and had, apparently, reached to the summit of his own ambitions, when there came into his life a new and tremendous experience. He fell in love for the first time. His brother, who was never absent from him, assures us that he had not before declared or revealed any affection for a woman, and though we have no absolute proof of this, since in the case of his known attachment, Amos Slanning was entirely ignorant of it until after his death — though, therefore, we cannot say with conviction that Henry never loved before, it is reasonable to assume that no master-passion overwhelmed him until he found himself in love with Miss May Warrender.

"It is certain that he was deeply attached to her, though his reserved and sensitive nature concealed the fact from all but the young lady herself. He paid his devotions with such delicacy, such humility, and such refinement as might be expected from such a man; and we may assume he was sanguine, for his life had moved easily and successfully. He had much to offer and the object of his affections, as we know, was inexperienced and declares that for a long time she did not appreciate the significance of his friendship. Few girls, who did not yet know the meaning of love, would have refused him; and she had in all innocence welcomed his advances, so that we may assume he felt little doubt of acceptance.

"I labor this in order to dwell on the extent of Mr. Slanning's disappointment when he heard that his hope was vain; and I believe that so violent and complete was the shock of the news, that a man who never appears to have loved life for itself, was thrown into a very furnace of disillusionment and for the time being, at least, found existence a tyranny no longer to be endured. With his rare mental endowments it is reasonable to suppose that, given time, he would have survived his terrible experience and recovered from his disappointment in the manner of a normal man; but he permitted himself no time. He turned to the subject of his philosophic meditations and research, and under this hard blow of fate—a fate that had always used him kindly until the present—he found in that theme no longer a preoccupation for thought, but an invitation to action.

"That theme, the ever recurring obsession of his mental activity, was suicide. And the fact appears in his own handwriting a thousand times. Again and again he opens on some other subject, yet, like a phantom in the noonday of intelligent considerations upon love, hope, faith, honor, duty and other subjects worthy of a high-minded and altruistic spirit, there creeps into the argument self-destruction. He cannot evade it: there is for him a fascination in the topic that brings him back again and again. It vitiates his thinking; it is a blood-red thread woven through the fabric of his thoughts. He exhausts literature in his search for every high example and significant reference to self-destruction.

"He held with the great pagans that to live in want, dishonor, or suffering was folly. He echoed Cato, Pomponius, Atticus, Epicurus. We find him quoting Seneca: 'Malum est in necessitate vivere; necessitas nulla est:' that it is miserable to live in need, but there is no need so to do. He agrees with Marcus Aurelius, that if the cabin smokes, a wise man takes leave of it. He says with Quintilian: 'Nemo nisi sua culpa diu dolet'—no man endures suffering save through his own fault. But he is not content to justify the practice of suicide from the pagans alone; it is not enough that the Medes and Persians, the Greeks and Romans are with him and that all nations of antiquity furnish admirable and laudable examples of what in Christian eyes is generally regarded as a sin. He seeks instances through the sacred Jewish writings and finds in the Apocrypha an authentic instance, when Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, slays himself (in II Maccabees) and is applauded by the historian for so doing. We find him also concerned with lights of the Christian church—Pelagia and Sophronia, canonized for their saintly self-destruction; and of men, especially Jacques du Castel, that bishop of Soissons who charged an army single-handed and gloriously committed felo-de-se for his faith.

"Then, having concluded with Cicero, that it is agreeable to nature in a wise man to take leave of life at its height of prosperity, he writes a learned essay on a saying from Josephus, that he who dies sooner or lives longer than he ought, is equally a coward. So he goes 'about it and about,' and cannot leave the question for any time, but it draws him forcibly again.

"With respect to Henry Slanning, then, I affirm that after his disappointment in love, life lost its flavor and, led thereto by habit of mind and a natural melancholy inclination, he determined to destroy himself, having long convinced his reason that such an act is justified and agreeable to philosophy. We will leave the unfortunate gentleman in that resolution for a few moments and turn our attention to the other victims of the tragedy on Pelican Estate.

"In the case of John Diggle, the night watchman, no difficulty of character presents itself. He was a direct, single-minded man against whom nothing evil can be advanced—a good husband and parent and a loyal and honest servant. He carried on the tradition handed to him by his grandfather and father before him, and worked with one sole purpose: the welfare of his employers. Their relation to him was closer than that of master and man. They valued him for himself and in many ways revealed their personal regard and esteem.

"This man's duty was to guard the sugar-cane plantations by night, and we find in connection with that work an old but general understanding and unwritten law, that thieves stole at their personal peril. It was not uncommon in former days for these pilfering gentlemen to lose their lives, just as a poacher, or other nocturnal robber in England, also has paid the extreme penalty. But human feeling naturally sets against such a strenuous course of action as principles of humanity gain ground. A hundred years ago the man-trap and spring-gun were sanctioned; yet such barbaric engines are now by law swept into oblivion. So with this old preslave proscription; and we may take it for granted that John Diggle would not have fired upon a thief under greater provocation than he was ever likely to receive from one.

"In this connection, nevertheless, we find a cloud arises on the life of John Diggle some few days before his end. Too much importance cannot be attached to this incident, since upon it hangs the whole theory about to be elaborated. We must, therefore, dwell on the statement made by Mrs. Diggle to my representative in Barbados and fully reported to him. If necessary, Mrs. Diggle can be further questioned, though in my judgment she has already said all that need be said.

"What does she say?

"That, on a certain occasion, her husband came in sad to breakfast. He denies his trouble at first; but upon his wife insisting that he is not himself, he curses the cane thieves and says that he has got to worry about them, because Henry Slanning is worrying. Mr. Henry has told Diggle that he is falling short of his duty and forgetting how to treat the thieves. Then—mark this—Diggle says that henceforth there shall be no doubt about obeying and that he will do what he is told, 'to the end in future, whatever happens.'

"Immediately before the tragedy, therefore, John Diggle has been reproved for laxity in his work, and he accordingly resolves that, come what may come of it, he will strictly obey his orders to the letter. We shall find what those orders were in a moment; and there can, I think, be little doubt that the commands issued to Diggle by Henry Slanning were of a nature that Diggle did not expect. They surprised him, and we can see how. In the first place, it was highly improbable that Slanning would bother his head about the petty pilferings of cane, or care a button concerning such a trifle; and in the second, still more improbable that he should seek to put a stop to them by reversion to obsolete, drastic measures that he, of all men, would have been the first to censure. For so I read John Diggle's trouble coupled with his resolve. He is going to obey, regardless of consequences; he is going to do exactly as he is told, 'whatever happens.' He therefore apprehended that something might happen; but he was under orders and did not attempt to shirk them, though the orders had astonished and dismayed him.

"Leaving him also, on the threshold of the disaster, I turn to Solly Lawson and find again a character that presents no difficulties and can be very fairly appreciated from the information at our disposal. This young half-caste is seen as a youth of strong animal passions, uncontrolled and not malevolent. He was of little worth, sensual, lazy, and quick-tempered; but he had wit and a ready tongue and—what alone matters—his attitude to his master was one of steadfast and deserved devotion. Nor does the fact that Solly would not scruple to steal cane detract from his affection for the gentlemen who have forgiven so many sins and still employed the poor fellow at the time of his death. Solly would steal Henry Slanning's cane today and die for him tomorrow. The doglike trust and affection displayed by many negroes and half-castes is a part of young Lawson's nature. He has expressed to his mother a thousand times his regard for both his masters, and I believe that in this assurance the young man was perfectly honest.

"What does Mrs. Lawson say? 'He dash at fings so.' Solly is ill-governed, impetuous, and impulsive. For good or evil, he 'dashes at things.' And there is a still more remarkable statement recorded to the dead man's mother Such is her son's affection for his employers that he would have died for them. Much follows from this admission; but we have to admit also that Solly had no grudge against John Diggle. Even in the event of Diggle getting him locked up, Solly would not have allowed enmity against the night watchman to inspire him on regaining liberty. In his mind, to repeat his mother's forcible words, 'when a fing done, it done.'

"Here, then, is the third party in this trinity of the dead and his character stands clearly before us. Had he been different; had Diggle been different; had Henry Slanning been different, my reconstruction of those events that destroyed all three, would not be feasible; but it is built upon the only foundation that remains for any superstructure — the foundation of character; and, to my surprise, I find it ample for our purpose. I had suspected that any theory based on character alone, must have needed modification and some special pleading when it came to details; I had anticipated the need to rely upon probability and exercise no little ingenuity in rounding the narrative and gathering the tangled thread into a complete skein; I had even feared that character itself might presently confound me and make it impossible honestly to develop a consistent story; but, to my satisfaction, I find this is not the case. Effect, in shape of facts, follows cause, as furnished by character, directly and lucidly; motive is at last revealed, like the sun breaking from behind a cloud, and the series of events follow upon each other logically, inexorably. These things had to be and they could not have fallen out differently.

"Henry Slanning is responsible for the entire concatenation. He designed a certain action and took elaborate means to insure its operation; but, the event he planned duly accomplished, accident willed that it should serve as a prelude to other events beyond his calculations—events fatal to the second and third actors in the drama.

"Thus we arrive at the threshold of our mystery.

"When the house sleeps, Henry Slanning rises and makes his way to the plantations, choosing that region where John Diggle will be perambulating, gun on shoulder. Slanning goes of set purpose to his death. He is willing to die, but not by his own hand. It is part of his character that, while he seeks death, he cannot inflict it upon himself. He has, however, intended to do so. He has taken first steps towards that end, and the revolver, found by his dead body, was bought by him at Messrs. Forrest, New Bond street. He wrote to England for it a week after his great disappointment, and he duly received it with a box of 100 cartridges. But he could not use it. For a moment he had dreamed of so doing when he labored under the bitterness of his rejection. It was, however, an aberration of character that drove him to send for the weapon, and long before it reached his hand, he had sufficiently returned to himself to make its use impossible. "Why, however, did he take it to the plantation empty? To make sure of John Diggle. He went out in his pyjamas, a light alpaca jacket, and a big straw hat, similar to those the negroes wear. Thus attired, in such a place, at such a time, he must naturally be mistaken for a common marauder; and having already directed Diggle to do his duty in such an event and fire at sight upon any thief, he expected him to do so. But the revolver was an inspiration, calculated to nerve Diggle and banish the least remaining trace of hesitation. Diggle would challenge, and if he received no reply and no surrender would fire. How much more certainly, then, might he be expected to fire and with how much sterner efficiency of aim, if the thief threatened him?

"Two of these three men died in a clearing of cane, where cutting was in progress; and the plans of the place show a pathway extending through it to the cliffs beyond. To the clearing goes Henry Slanning and begins to cut down cane with one of the little familiar hatchets used for the purpose. He knows that in the silence of night, the noise must soon reach Diggle's ear; and it does so. The watchman thereupon hastens to the spot, and it happens that Solly Lawson, homeward bound by the short cut through the cane, arrived a few moments afterwards.

"We may describe what follows with the eyes of Solly Lawson.

"He sees Diggle challenge and marks a man jump up before him. With head down the robber approaches, and for answer to Diggle's demand to surrender, produces a revolver and points it at the watchman. The steel flashes in the moonlight and Diggle's response is to get in his shot first if he can. He fires and the unknown falls. Solly sees Diggle drop his gun and run forward; but he sees more. Henry Slanning has fallen backward, away from the stroke that slew him; his hat is off and, in the moon light, he lies revealed. All that the dead man had so cunningly provided for and planned, Solly sees happen just as Slanning had designed; but the advent of young Lawson is fatal to himself and Diggle.

"He has seen his master murdered before his eyes, and the horrible sight provokes him to instant revenge. A moment's reflection would have saved Diggle and himself, but he cannot reflect. He sees Diggle run towards the dead man, and, fired to frenzy by the destruction of one he dearly loved, he acts on impulse, stays not a second, but seizes Diggle's gun, probably screams out some fierce words of hate, and fires at short range into the watchman's kneeling body. Then he drops the gun and fliesh to sound the alarm and proclaim what has been done, while Diggle lies dead upon his master and their blood flows together.

"But Solly's feet grow slower and his passion abates. His fiery brain begins to work and presently he understands the thing that he has done. It is an evil dream from which he will emerge, or can it be true that his master and John Diggle lie dead in the plantation and that he is a murderer? He begins to appreciate his own position. What living soul will believe that John Diggle murdered Henry Slanning? Such an event would demand proofs beyond possibility. How shall Solly's worthless word convince any man?

"Another and abler man, or a criminal, had doubtless kept his mouth shut and gone his way, preserving his action a secret and defying his fellow creatures ever to associate him with it; but this man was stupid, impulsive, and no criminal. I conceive that his intelligence was not equal to the strain put upon it and that, by what train of terror we can only guess, he reached at last a convic-

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

Mexican Blue Palm.
This specimen of Erythea armata is fifty years old.

ABOUT the only treatment for wireworms is the use of ashes and lime, or the mineral fertilizers, well worked into the ground. Of course, a sure cure is bisuphide of carbon placed in holes in the ground. But for a good-sized garden this is out of the question on account of expense. Another remedy often recommended, and certainly harmless and inexpensive, is the use of tobacco dust. This is much used by some growers, and one authority says it is altogether too little appreciated. It adds some fertility to the soil, so would not be all loss, even though it should prove of no insectical value. One authority says it is worth practically all it costs as a fertilizer. This is put into the soil with a common wheel hoe, drilling well down so it will destroy the soil-infesting worms. At best, the wireworm is a most perplexing trial to gardeners, and the remedy that will always prove effective will be hailed with delight by many.

Herbaceous Perennials.

Many of our eastern visitors miss the old-fashioned herbaceous perennials so common in gardens on the Atlantic Coast and in the Middle West States. Those companions of childhood's years—fox gloves, larkspurs, Canterbury bells, penstemons, columbines, sweet Williams, candytuft, yarrows, goldenrod and a host of similar plants, make glad the eyes of those who but a few years ago had left these plants in their old home after perhaps a half century of close association with them. The story of hardy perennials for California is a much-needed chapter in all our local garden lore. Plant them more freely.

Trachycarpus caespitosus.
One of the interesting trees in La Fayette Park, Los Angeles.

Sap Movement.

Prof. Farmer, in "Plant Life," says: "The circulation of materials in a plant is not really like the circulation of the blood in animals, although an analogy—largely a false one—is often drawn between them, for there is no continuous circulating system in the tree at all comparable with the arteries and veins of the animal body. Nevertheless there is a process of exchange, though arranged on different lines and serving quite different ends."

For Root Protection.

Corrosive sublimate or bichloride of mercury, one ounce in ten gallons of water, is an effective remedy for slugs, wire worms, ants and other pests which prey upon the roots of plants. Don't forget the amount of the mineral to be used in the solution. A Pasadena gardener was unwise enough to use so much of it that the foliage of the plants was burned. Paris green will also burn the leaves of plants if more than one part to twenty of flour or other dilutant is used.

Shipping Gladiolus.

Use flowers that have been in water at least six hours; have as few flowers open as possible at time of packing; have a special box made of very light wood with partitions on the inside to hold each layer of flowers in its original place; line the box with tissue paper. Never pack flowers in a double layer. Turn flowers upward and pack just as closely as space will permit, for they should not move while in transit. Cleat down the lower parts of the stems so that the spikes cannot move. Have boxes made to fit a certain variety, for each variety packs differently.

The photograph was taken at the Keith place in West Hollywood.

Cutting Gladiolus.

Cut the flowers in late afternoon, selecting stalks that show not more than two open flowers. Never cut a stalk to the ground, but allow a set of leaves to remain, for that growth is essential to produce the new bulb. Never plunge the spikes in water immediately after cutting—allow them to lie in the sun for from fifteen to thirty minutes. This is known as "softening," and flowers thus treated and plunged in water afterward and placed in a cool spot over night, will last from two to three days longer and ship better than those that are not softened.

Alkali as a Food.

Alkali in limited quantities is a source of needed plant food for some crops. The per cent of potash is always high in alkaline soils, causing root crops to make fine growth in them, though sugar beets are ten times as tolerant as potatoes. Where the latter do well, the alkali content is beneficial to all ornamental bulb crops.

Planting Too Deep.

The requirements of seed in germination are moisture, air—or rather, oxygen—and a certain temperature, while darkness seems to be favorable. By planting deep we get lower temperature, more darkness and perhaps more moisture, but we exclude oxygen. We may even get too low a temperature or too much moisture by so doing The seeds of many perennials are very delicate on account of over-civilization, crossing and so forth, and planting too deep has probably caused more failures in growing them than any of the numerous mistakes so easily made.

Kitchen Herbs.

Our grandmothers grew many "garden herbs" that in colonial days were considered necessary in every well-appointed culinary department. Although many are perennials, some of the best are annuals and biennials. The following list gives twenty-two of the most useful garden herbs: Annuals—basil, colander, anise, summer savory, fennel, horseradish; biennials—caraway, parsley; perennials, angelica, balm, marjoram, tarragon, tansy, thyme, burnet, lavender, rosemary, rue, sage, mint, chives, chervil.

Plants Avoid Lime.

When liming the garden, keep all forms of lime away from azalias, rhododendrons, kalmias, camellias and hollies. As a rule, plants that thrive best in leaf mold or in swamp muck will not make vigorous growth where lime is present in any quantity.

Useless Bark.

Why do some trees clean themselves of useless bark, as in the case of eucalypti, shell-bark hickory, grape vines, etc., while the cork-oak, redwood big tree and many others hold their dead bark for years? For the inner bark, or cambium layer, is the only part of any bark that is alive. Of course, thick barks are a protection against both heat and cold, but why do the eucalypi of the tropics and the shell-bark hickory of very cold territory, both shed their protective covering?

Ash Values.

Ashes have a two-fold value in the soil, acting beneficially both physically and chemically. Used principally as a potash fertilizer, they also contain phosphoric acid, another necessary plant food. In addition, about one-fifth is lime and this acts beneficially on the physical condition, as well as liberating inert or locked-up plant food. So do not fail to use all the wood ashes you may procure. Coal ashes are valueless.

The Bindweed.

A correspondent has a large garden filled with wild morning glory and wishes to kill them without digging out roots. Allow the soil to dry out, but keep a mulch on top, several inches deep, and constantly stirred. If light can be kept from topless roots for a whole season, the roots will die, but merely cutting off tops as they appear, will require several years. Keep tops cut off as far below the surface as is possible.

Snapdragons by Name.

Antirrhinums or snapdragons have been so bred up of late years that local dealers will sell you more than a dozen named varieties. The colors are white, pale pink, bluish pink, rose, coral, scarlet, orange-salmon, salmon-rose, crimson and a very deep crimson. Sow the seeds now and transplant to a permanent place when large enough. If the noncombatable rust does not strike the plants, you will have a floral display second to none. If the fungus disease, sometimes prevalent, strikes your plants, they will prove a source of extreme exasperation. The modern snapdragon is a grand flower and one not sufficiently grown.

Dasylirion in bloom.

Plants Choose Food.

If plants did not possess some selective power, many more would die of vegetable indigestion, dyspepsia or the like. But they are able to some extent to select and reject, as well as to render a part of their food soluble. For example, some seaweeds contain more potash than soda, though the water in which they grow contains an excess of soda salts.

EARLY CANTALOUPE ACREAGE.

The commercial acreage of cantaloupes planted in the early producing States in 1921 and the acreage harvested in 1920 and 1919 is shown in the following table:

States	1921 Acres	1920 Acres	1919 Acres
Alabama	300	290	289
Arizona	2,265	2,749	4,600
California	28,100	31,817	25,440
Florida	645	1,143	1,026
Georgia	1,265	1,221	1,919
Nevada	100	100	66
New Mexico	2,590	2,515	1,330

It is known as a matter of experience and observation that town and city people who have to figure costs of food closely have not been accustomed to use eggs freely except in the season of flush production and low prices. Many such families can keep a few hens in the back yard and even with low production get many more eggs than they have been accustomed to use.

California Hen Fruit in the London Market.

AN EXPERIMENTAL SHIPMENT. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

IF WE are to believe the government statistics, more than $6,000,000 worth of hen fruit is lost every summer for want of proper handling and good salesmanship. If these eggs had been properly cold-storaged or scientifically sterilized by the new Clairemont process, many a breeder would have been materially benefited, even though this volume of product might have, in some instances, somewhat depressed prices. We understand that Victor Clairmont, the inventor of the sterilized process, is now in the northern portion of the State, and it is fair to assume that we shall know more about his invention, though its operation by the co-operative poultry breeders' organizations may not be put into immediate practice. Like all other known preservative processes it has no direct influence on quality; if the eggs are not A No. 1 when reaching the process, it only preserves their then quality for almost an indefinite period. By this process hen fruit is subjected to an emersion in an oil solution of not less than 240 deg. F. This great heat kills the germ and seals the membrane of the egg to the shell. The pores are thereby also sealed, thus insuring its keeping qualities.

It is said an order has been placed in San Francisco from London calling for 10,000 cases of Petaluma white-shelled eggs. If this is authentic, we hope the new process will be tried out on this shipment. It will be the first shipment of any such magnitude that has been tried in exporting hen fruit from California to the English metropolis; but if such a thing is feasible with citrus fruits, grapes and other orchard products, we can see no reason for its failure, provided the quality is there when the goods are opened up and placed on sale. Indeed, quality must be dominant, as all the costs proclude the possibility of anything but fancy prices. If no better than the importations that reach the English markets from the continent of Europe, the chances are the experiment will prove abortive. Now 10,000 cases of 360 eggs to the case figures as "some hen fruit," viz., 3,600,000 individual specimens. That certainly looks formidable, yet when we take into consideration the population of London, the daily consumption of food is something enormous. According to Edward Brown, a recognized poultry authority in England, the annual prewar consumption of eggs in Greater London was 800,000,000, or about 2,250,000 daily. Owing to prevailing economic conditions, the consumption is now somewhat less, though still great. As a mere guess, we apprehend that if all consumers in England should demand Petaluma white-shelled eggs on their arrival, the 10,000 cases would not last two days. These figures afford some idea of the possibilities in exploiting the English market for California eggs. That market demands much; but likewise there are many peoples and many countries aiming to supply it, not the least of which are the colonial units of the British empire. It would seem, however, that if the California egg can hold its own in the New York market, it certainly can give a similar performance in the London salesrooms. The greater distance is no detriment; the solution will be based on (1) quality of product, (2) costs of handling, preservation and transportation, and (3) the ultimate prices that the British consumer will be willing to pay.

"Put her with the culls." R. B. Easson, poultry extension specialist of the University of California, pointing out a typical non-layer in flock of E. H. Hammond of Gardena, whose place was the scene of one of Mr. Easson's recent culling demonstrations in Los Angeles county.

Some Culling Pointers.

Valuable pointers in culling were given the poultrymen of Los Angeles county in the recent series of culling demonstrations conducted by R. B. Easson, poultry extension man of the University of California College of Agriculture. At one of these meetings, held on the place of E. M. Hammond at Gardena, were taken the interesting photographs reproduced on this page. The meetings as a whole were quite well attended and Mr. Easson's work was much appreciated. The following gleanings from the university expert's pamphlet, "Poultry Culling," prepared for distribution among the poultry raisers and distributed free to all who will write for them to the College of Agriculture at Berkeley, sum up the ideas that Mr. Easson is trying to emphasize:

Trapnesting and scientific breeding are more reliable and much more far-reaching in results than judging the productive ability of fowls by means of body characteristics such as conformation, pigment color tests, etc. These latter tests, however, which are visible or can be determined by handling, are fairly accurate during certain seasons of the year, and therefore aid the commercial poultryman and farm flock owner in culling low producers and indicating the better producers that are to be kept as layers or breeders for the following season. . . . The general management, and the use of electric lights especially, will influence the time of culling. As a general rule, flocks should be gradually culled beginning with the decrease of egg production (May and June) and heavily culled during July and August. For the selection of breeders to be used the following season, an additional culling can be made even later.

Practical culling will give best results by using a combination of tests to eliminate the poor producers rather than using one test alone. The molting of a fowl before September 1 is one indication of a poor layer. These poor producers in the flock molt early and slowly and do not produce as many eggs as generally supposed during the fall and winter months. The majority of their eggs are produced during the spring months. The better producers lay late and hence molt late and fast. Cull the early molters in June, July and August.

With the yellow-shanked varieties the amount of coloring material in shanks, beaks, earlobes and skin (especially the vent) is a fairly accurate guide to the laying ability of different fowls of the same flock. The amount of yellow coloring material contained in the ration fed may affect the rate of change from yellow to paleness. The yellow color is withdrawn from the body as production increases and gradually returns with the molt, when few eggs are laid. The use of the pigment color test is of most value during June, July and August. The early molters of a flock with yellow coloring in shanks, beak, earlobes and skin after June 1 are culls.

The distance between the end of keel bone and ends of pelvic bones is a measurement of abdominal capacity. The laying hen must have a good-sized abdomen in which to digest feed and manufacture eggs. In the good layer the abdomen should be full, soft and flexible. During the summer months fowls measuring less than three fingers between these points are usually culls, as shown by other indications.

Pelvic bones should be thin, straight and flexible. They tend to thicken on the ends as the hen gets older. The cull generally has pelvic bones which are thick, near together and not flexible as in the good layers.

The size of the comb, in relation to the size for that breed, is correlated with the hen's laying ability. The comb and wattles of a good layer are red, full and waxy. In the poor layers these are shriveled and scaly.

Separating the layers from the "boarders." (Left) Some of the many good hens that passed muster with flying colors on Mr. Hammond's place; (right) "culls" that Mr. Easson's practiced eye found lacking in the essentials indicating good laying qualities. (Center) Mr. Easson himself holding a good layer (right) and a poor bird. The early molter, Mr. Easson said, decreases the average egg yield of the flock and increases the cost of production. Hens molting in June, July and August, he declared, should be culled heavily and replaced with pullets from good breeding stock.

Proper Use of Epsom Salts.

Experienced breeders appreciate the medicinal qualities of Epsom salts. As a laxative and regulator they are much in favor, and tend to keep fowl in confinement "clean from within." To administer these salts economically and with little labor, we commend the following practice, recommended by the poultry division of the State University Farm at Davis:

Dissolve in water as follows:

(1) For chicks to 5 weeks of age, dissolve 1 lb. salts in 6 quarts of water for each 600 birds.

(2) For chicks from 5 to 10 weeks of age, dissolve 1 lb. salts in 6 quarts of water for each 400 birds.

(3) For chicks 10 to 15 weeks of age, dissolve 1 lb. salts in 6 quarts of water for each 300 birds.

(4) For fowls 15 weeks to 6 months of age, dissolve 1 lb. salts in 6 quarts of water for each 200 birds.

(5) For fowls over 6 months of age, dissolve 1 lb. of salts in 6 quarts of water for each 125 birds.

Give this solution as a drink, about 2 p.m., and allow fowls no other water till all of the salts solution is consumed. Repeat in four to seven days if it seems advisable.

It is perfectly safe to give salts as a flock treatment because it will not in any way injure healthy fowls and will greatly benefit those needing a physic.

Wise breeders are already giving a little extra attention to prospective blue-ribbon winners.

A little sand on the dropping boards makes them easier for the poultry raiser to clean.

The Hammonds staged an unexpected but much appreciated demonstration of their own—in farm hospitality—by inviting the culling demonstration visitors to lunch with them under the pepper trees.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

The Almond Tariff.

BY PROPOSING a tariff schedule for almonds lower than the point where the California almond can compete with the cheap Southern Europe shelled almonds, the lower house of Congress really moved to confirm the European almond growers and the New York importers in their control of the American shelled almond business. The State's almond growers, who have $65,000,000 invested in their business, wanted a tariff of 5 cents on almonds in the shell, and 15 cents on shelled almonds. The amended Fordney tariff bill, as passed by the House, provided for a tariff of 4 and 12 cents, respectively, which, although a concession to the "three-to-one" plea of the growers and an improvement over the 4 and 8-cent tariff originally proposed, does not meet the situation. Almond growers declare that, with thousands of acres of new almonds coming into bearing in the next few years, many groves must be abandoned and that millions of dollars invested will be lost if the American growers are not given an adequate tariff on shelled almonds, enabling them to compete with the cheap, peasant-raised nuts of Europe. The fight has been carried to the Senate, where the plight of the growers will be once more reviewed and the 5 and 15-cent provision insisted upon.

The Price Question.

STILL the cost of what the farmer buys stays up all out of proportion to the prices of what he sells. Secretary of Commerce Hoover has made an investigation of commodity prices, and finds the price of farm crops 15 per cent above the prewar price, and the price of live stock 23 per cent above the prewar level. The average retail price of foodstuffs, he finds, is 66 per cent above the prewar level, that of building materials, 112 per cent; railroad rates, 66 per cent, and house furnishings, 175 per cent above their prewar level. Is this to be a permanent ration of prices? If it is to be, then the United States of America will soon cease to be an agricultural nation, and will be importing its foodstuffs.

Foreign Markets.

SMALL bits of comfort in the way of higher tariff and reduced freight rates have left the farmer in as bad a state as he was several months ago. Legislators and farm organizations have been floundering around seeking a remedy for the deplorable depression of agriculture in this country, tinkering with the tariff, insisting on more credit for the farmer, and "cutting out the middleman," while the American farmer's market abroad has been far too much neglected. The prosperity of the American farmer depends in a large measure upon the amount of products he can sell abroad. This has been demonstrated many, many times. One great work of the farmers and those organizations which are honestly trying to help them is the finding of an outlet abroad for more farm products.

Waiting Might Help.

CALIFORNIA last year raised more barley than any other State except North Dakota, and yet California farmers have not joined the North Dakota farmers in demanding that the making of barley beer with a 2.75 "kick" be legalized to save the barley-growing industry. The grape growers and lemon producers of California, once in the slough of despond, and now riding on the crest of the wave, offer this hint to their North Dakota brothers: "Lay off that stuff—and wait, just wait!"

ATTENTION TO SOIL MOISTURE CONDITIONS PAYS DIVIDENDS.

BY BERT C. BOUGHER.

A SERIES of soil moisture demonstrations, arranged for by the Los Angeles County Agricultural Extension Service for the special benefit of truck and field crop growers and conducted by Prof. J. W. Nelson of the University of California college of agriculture, was held during the week ending July 16. In the past the citrus and deciduous fruit men had demanded the services of Prof. Nelson exclusively, and the meetings, held in the San Gabriel, San Fernando and Antelope valleys, were much appreciated by the growers.

"The soil augur is my best friend," Prof. Nelson said repeatedly at the different meetings and then went on to show that it was utterly impossible to get the best kind of result without it on any ranch today. He said that he had irrigated for twenty years by guesswork and at the end of that time didn't know any more about the soil than when he started. It was then, he declared, that he took up the technical study of soils and their moisture content.

In bringing home the more clearly to the grower the real condition that exists beneath the soil, Prof. Nelson had his audience assume that they had enlarged a cubic inch of soil to the size of a cubic mile. They would then walk down through huge canyons with big boulders on every side, these big rocks being the fine, minute silt particles that we find in the soil. Suspended from these boulders would be big drops of water. In some cases this water would be so clear and fresh that we could drink it. The clear water would not have the acids in it to dissolve out any of the soil contained in the big rocks, or what we commonly call a soil particle. But from some of the boulders there would be hanging forks full of manure and from others, wheelbarrow loads of green matter. The water around these rocks wouldn't be fit to drink, being full of decayed organic matter and containing mild acids. These acids would be working on the big rocks tearing away their cementing qualities and releasing the potash, calcium, phosphates and iron which go into this brown-colored soil solution. Wherever this dirty brownish-colored solution was found there would be myriads of big limbs tangling themselves around the boulders and sucking up the rich fluid. Such was the simple but effective method of bringing home to the grower the difference between a good soil and a poor one, as illustrated by the big rocks free from manure and being enveloped in clear water as against the boulders covered with forkfuls of different kinds of manure and surrounded by a rich dark brown fluid. An illustration such as this shows the necessity for keeping our soils well supplied with organic matter supplemented by a maintenance of uniform moisture content.

TWO PRESSING QUESTIONS.

In dealing with soils in the field there are two questions that confront every grower: When shall I irrigate, and how much water shall I apply? In order correctly to diagnose these conditions it is first necessary to have a soil augur to bring the soil up for examination and then to know what the optimum moisture content of the soil is and what the wilting point is. When the soil is at its optimum it is in the best condition for the multiplying and working of the soil bacteria. The proper amount of air exists in the soil and the soil acids are at the proper concentration for the dissolving out of the most plant food. Optimum is when the soil will ball up, but does not exude free water. The wilting point naturally is the point where plant roots fail to draw water from the soil particles and the cell structure of the root hairs suffer a shock.

Antelope Valley Growers at Soil Moisture Test.
Prof. J. W. Nelson, soil expert of University of California college of agriculture, explaining use of soil augur to interested group of alfalfa producers.

Many of our crop failures, both on trees and field crops, can be traced to the water content of the soil fluctuating from one extreme to another. This causes a concentration of the juices in the plant cell and a forcing of the calcium into the walls of the cell, which stiffens them. When the water is applied again in large quantities as is the general rule, these cell walls do not loosen up fast enough to absorb the water that the leaves are trying to give off to the air in order that the condition of the soil may be brought back to normal, so that it can start assimilating plant food again. The natural consequence is that the growing condition of the plant is disrupted again. The annual crops and trees generally go through about three such cases of soil indigestion every year and it is really remarkable that crops are produced under such conditions. Where the maximum yields are obtained such conditions do not exist.

The old and generally accepted theory of plant roots feeding to a depth of eight and ten feet just because they happen to have big anchor and tap roots going down to or beyond that depth has been conclusively disproven, according to Prof. Nelson. He states that most fruit trees and all root crops hardly feed any lower than the roots of a barley crop. It has been absolutely proven, he brings out, that most of the nourishment for the plant is obtained from the first three and a half feet of soil.

Alfalfa roots have been found in Utah to a depth of sixty-five feet and yet when the moisture would become deficient to a depth of three feet with plenty of water in the soil from six feet on down, the plant was actually dying from the lack of water. The small fibrous hair-like rootlets which abound in the first three feet of soil are the ones which dissolve most of the plant food out of the soil particles and which also give the plant the necessary water to drink. In the past it has been believed that water moved a great deal by capillarity, but the real facts of the case are that it moves very little. When a rootlet sucks up the water within an area of six to ten inches around it, this water is not replaced by water from below or to the side of it. If you are in doubt, put a plant in a gallon glass jar and watch the movement of the soil water.

DON'T DROWN THE PLANTS.

When the leaves turn yellow the grower jumps at the conclusion that the plant is dying from the lack of water. This conclusion is generally arrived at by kicking the soil to a depth of about an inch with the toe of the boot. Water is then applied in large quantities in a vain effort to bring the plant back into normal growth. What is really going on in the leaves is this: The ground became so saturated with water that the leaves discarded all their chlorophyll, which is the green coloring matter in the leaf cells that changes the water and carbon dioxide into starches and sugars, and turned themselves temporarily into a pumping plant. They have expanded the cells and opened them up so that they can bring relief to the roots as soon as possible. Now to aggravate this condition the grower madly rushes in and socks more water onto the land.

If he had taken a soil augur and drilled in different parts of the field where the leaves were turning yellow, he would have found the real condition and instead of increasing the hardship on the plant would have kept the water off and let the plant get back to normal, which it would have done as soon as the surplus water in the soil had been pumped out and the bacteria had had a chance to overcome a near case of drowning.

DEEP CULTIVATION.

The necessity for deep cultivation in the early stages of growth in the truck crops and also the bean fields was clearly brought out in the San Fernando Valley by Prof. Nelson. When the bean plant first starts to grow it has a tendency to send its roots out near the surface. If these shallower roots are not cut off, the plant receives all its nourishment from the first six inches of soil, with the result that it all goes to vine and no fruit is borne. This is due to the fact that the first ten inches of soil contain an excess of nitrogen over the other plant food elements in the soil. The nitrogen stimulates the vine growth and neglects the forming of any bean pods. A deeper cultivation at first and shallowing up towards the middle of the growing season will then send out enough shallow roots to supply the demands of the plant for nitrogen used in the vine growth. Shutting off the water during the latter part of the growing season is recommended for beans. This will permit the plant to divert all its energy toward making the bean, which is by nature a concentrated plant food. In getting its nourishment from the soil, this should come in a concentrated solution.

A number of the strawberry fields in the country have been turning brown on the tops of the rows and dying back. The leaves thin out and no berries are produced in that area. This is due to the rising of the salts in the ridges to the top by evaporation, caused by the heavy irrigation practised during the season when the vines bear the heaviest. This can be overcome by simply flooding the field by means of checks so that the top of every row is completely covered. The water is then immediately drained off, taking with it the excess salts that have concentrated in the top of the berry ridge.

PEAR ILLS DIAGNOSED.

After going over the "little-leaf plots" in the pear section of the Antelope Valley, Prof. Nelson was of the opinion that this trouble can be very readily overcome by keeping a uniform moisture content in the soil throughout the growing season, sup-

Catching Coop Useful in Culling Operations.

This coop, recommended by the University of California college of agriculture, can be made in various sizes, a convenient size for most purposes being 5 feet long, 2 feet wide and 1½ feet in height. The front end of the coop is pushed tightly against the house exit, a coopful of fowls runs in and the sliding door is closed. The fowls are then taken out through one of the top doors and examined individually.

NEW FARM COURSES MEET STUDENTS' NEEDS.

Students who are intending to enter the University of California Farm School at Davis now have two courses open to them, provided they are high school graduates and have the recommendation of their principals, according to Thomas F. Hunt, dean of the college of agriculture.

Heretofore, about one-half of the students entering the university farm school were eligible to enter the university for degree courses, the freshman and sophomore years of which given exclusively at Berkeley. Not infrequently, after they had attended the university farm for one or two years, the farm school students have wished that they had entered the four-year university course. According to present arrangements, such students may enter the farm school at Davis as heretofore, if they so desire, or they may this year take their freshman work at Berkeley. In their sophomore year they may transfer to Davis, where freshman and sophomore work in degree courses will be offered. Such students will thus save a year towards graduation.

For years there has been a gradual movement toward greater specialization in the farm school courses. The freshman year to be offered this coming August in the farm school at Davis carries specialization further than hertofore, and it is believed that these newly arranged courses will better than ever meet the needs of students who have a desire to prepare along some one or two definite lines.

"DOGS" COMING BACK; "CANT" SEASON ENDS.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—From Northern Arizona points are coming reports that the prairie dog is "coming back" in immense numbers, merely from the increase of the percentage of the inhabitants of the dog towns left undestroyed in the gassing campaign of a couple of years ago. Cattlemen of the Chino Valley and other sections declare the dog pest is nearly as grave as ever before and that another season will see an overrunning of their pastures. A plague of grasshoppers is reported in the Sierra Anchas and in northern Tonto Basin, though it has been lightened by the coming of rain. In a single poisoning campaign on a Casa Grande ranch 400 rabbits and gophers were gathered up.

The Salt River Valley cantaloupe season officially has ended and the government market bureau in this city has been closed. There still remain to be shipped about 150 carloads of melons, mainly of the Honeydew variety. The season has been propitious in that no rain fell during the main picking period. Labor has been abundant, at fair cost, and crate material was obtained readily. Train service has been good and cars have been provided as desired. The yield was about the same as last year, though considerable loss was known through the plant aphis, this insect injuriously affecting the quality of the product in some localities. While the price per crate has been lower than last year, the lower costs have made the net return fully as great. About $600,000 is expected to be the net return to the valley farmers.

The value of the Roosevelt reservoir has had adequate proof during the past three years of drought. At all times water has been available for irrigation of the lands of the Salt River Valley, even under the conditions of cultivation of 180,000 acres of Pima cotton, a crop that has to be given water just when needed. Yet Chief Engineer C. C. Cragin has made announcement that his plans show that irrigation of the valley's maximum acreage might continue for sixteen months to come, even were there no rainfall during that time. The reservoir still holds over 500,000 acre feet, more than a third of its maximum capacity. There is to be addition of sixteen pumping stations in the drainage areas and from pumping next season is expected an additional water supply of about 176,000 acre feet. The absolute minimum river supply ever known would add 318,000 acre feet. If considered necessary, there will be addition of more pumps, all electrically operated by power generated by the irrigation project. Figures from the Weather Bureau show that the past fiscal year has been the dryest known in the history of the valley.

EAT THE BOARDERS.

In any flock some hens will be found to be much better producers than others. Often there are a few hens that are such poor layers that it doesn't pay to keep them. Where the flock is small the owner can determine by observation which hens are merely boarders; and these are the ones to eat.

Be sure the chickens have a plentiful supply of fresh water.

Provide good ventilation in the chicken house.

Farmers Count Chips.

growers have to sell their product at a loss. It is true he will harvest and market his crop after it is grown in order to salvage as much as possible of the wreck, but he cannot continue to do this year after year.

"But these are times of reconstruction, and manufacturers as well as farmers are taking their loss. There must be brighter times ahead, and the only thing for the potato grower to do is keep his head above water and continue swimming. He should also use the best information available on certified seed, spraying, or properly grading and marketing his crop."

The inspectors of the State Department of Agriculture in Southern California are now busily engaged, chiefly on the inspection of new potatoes, at the request of shippers, and where these potatoes meet the requirements of "U. S. No. 1" grade, they are certified as such, and sold at a premium over ordinary stock. For the first time Southern California potatoes are being carefully graded, and the following quotation from a letter of an eastern dealer to a California shipper indicates the value of careful grading even in the face of a very weak market:

"Please make every effort to have your growers use U. S. grades in the future. We had a car of U. S. No. 1 in the same day as one of our competitors. When both cars got in our car was worth a quarter more. We We want to let you know that the close grade is fully appreciated by a particular trade and that it will pay you to keep it up next year when conditions will possibly be different."

The service features of the Department of Agriculture, as illustrated by this new shipping point inspection, are bound to increase in importance, and aid materially persons primarily interested who pay directly for the actual cost of such work. As usual, California is leading the way in this new line of endeavor, and within the past month three other States in the West have attempted to initiate a similar program of action, and have sent representatives to California to study the method of operation in this State.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

YUCAIPA.—George Morrell of Los Angeles has been named the secretary of the Yucaipa Apple Growers' Association and will give all his time to the marketing and distribution of the big crop of apples now on the trees. Mr. Morrell is a man of much experience in this work and the growers of the valley believe that he will prove to be capable of distributing the crop. Mr. Morrell has had business experience with the California Cultivator, the Edison Company and the Ventura Refining Company. He has arrived to take up his work in connection with the crop, which is soon to be marketed and which will be the heaviest in the history of the valley. The crop is in fine condition, there are few reports of sunburn from the orchards and the successive sprays have resulted in an exceptionally clean condition. There is just one more spray to be given; at least, most of the orchards will require one more. The work of thinning out the fruit has been heavy this year. It is the first year the orchardists have been called on to bear this extra expense, but the increased size of the crop will no doubt well repay them for the cost.

HIGH-PRICED GRAPES.

INDIO.— There is plenty of life around the grape packing-houses now, as the grape shipping season is in full swing. The prices are very satisfactory and the fruit is excellent. The returns on cars run about as follows: Chicago, $3830; New York, $3905; Pittsburg, $3890. One car sold for an average of $5 per crate in Chicago. It is estimated that thirty cars will be shipped from Coachella, thirty cars from Thermal, and a few cars from Indio, representing a total of $180,000 worth of fruit.

VERDE RIVER FLOOD.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The Verde River rose eight feet on July 14, seven inches of water going over the spillway at Cave Creek. All of the water possible is being diverted into the canals, and no material damage has been done.

JUNE DROP LIGHT.

CRAFTON.—Orange growers of the Redlands, Crafton and Bryn Mawr sections have been checking up on the June drop for this year and find that the drop was lighter than it has been for several years. The outlook for a big crop of oranges is good, for the "set" on the trees the middle of July is always an indication of the size of the crop, unless a cold snap in the fall does some damage. There have been crops in the district so large that a great number of tree props were necessary to support the weight of the fruit and indications are that some groves will require them this year. There was only a fraction of fruit to fall in June, and while the hot weather of July has caused a heavier drop of small fruit, it is not more than there should be for the good of the trees. There are some growers who believe that the production will be the greatest of any year since 1911.

NEW GRAINS MAKE GOOD.

DEL SUR.—As a result of the test plots with various varieties of wheat and barley conducted by the Agricultural Extension Service in the Antelope Valley, and a project in connection with the Del Sur Farm Bureau Center, it is evident that Bunyip wheat and Mariout barley promise well for the grain growers of the Antelope Valley. The plots show a yield of from 11 to 12 sacks with Bunyip wheat as compared to an average yield of 6 or 7 sacks with common wheat where the best cultural practices have been followed. Mariout barley, under test, has yielded at least double the usual yield obtained from the common sorts. It is believed that as a result of this project, these varieties may supersede all others in the Antelope Valley grain districts.

BRING BETTER PRICE.

TULARE. — Five carloads of hogs, auctioned in Tulare under the auspices of the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association, brought 40 cents more than was received at the last sale held in Visalia two weeks ago. The highest price realized in the sale was $10.60.

TAKING POULTRY CENSUS.

SAN BERNARDINO.—The poultry culling demonstrations recently carried out in this county by R. B. Easson, poultry specialist of the University of California, were largely attended and produced not only enthusiasm, but results. Cards signed by the poultrymen and women present show that owners of at least 30,000 birds plan to follow the specialist's ideas in culling next year, which is a very large increase over the number culled last year. Flocks culled by Mr. Easson showed about an average of 20 per cent culls. The demonstrations were held at the Kirk poultry ranch, Upland; the homes of Mrs. George Castle and Mrs. William Castle, Grand Terrace; J. H. Olsen's, San Bernardino; the Metcalf ranch and the ranch of Mrs. J. M. Phy, Highland; the H. E. Rause place, Yucaipa Valley, and the place of R. M. Taylor, Redlands.

J. E. Hauser, head of the poultry department of the farm bureau, together with his committee, is working to get a complete roster of the poultry producers in this county. The work is well under way and it is expected that within a short time there will be a complete organization and that a mailing list will be available by which information can be sent to each one and co-operation of the highest order secured.

CREAMERY PAYROLL GAINS.

TULARE. — Tulare's creamery payroll showed the effect of the 6½-cent gain in the average butter price paid to patrons during the last thirty days. Approximately $72,000 was paid out by the Dairymen's Co-operative Creamery Association, while only $69,088.47 was paid out June 15. This $2000 increase is attributed to advance of average price from 32 cents per pound last month to 38½ cents this month. The total amount paid by the four creameries was $156,526.59. The total for last month was $155,873.72. "Butter is the best commodity the farmer has to sell today," declared J. W. Poulson of the Dairymen's Co-operative Creamery Association.

A Sign They Heed.

A rancher, discouraged over ineffectual attempts to keep trespassers out of his fields, put out a sign reading, "Danger, Poison Oak. Keep Out." He says the thing worked beautifully.

CLUB WINNERS ANNOUNCED.

PORTERVILLE.—Edward Eldrige is winner of first prize in the Burton-Westfield Pig Club Poland-China 100-day feeding contest, according to final reports from R. B. Ralston, State pig club leader of the agricultural extension service. Wesley Noble came second and Richard Matthews third, while Eddie Peckenpaugh and his sister Florence, received worthy mention. Norman Castle received a special prize for neatness of pen. Young Eldridge got the silver loving cup from the county farm bureau, as well as his canceled note from the First National Bank, which has been particularly active in furthering the pig club movement in this section. Eldridge, Noble and Matthews will go to the agricultural club boys' conference at Davis the latter part of the summer. Judging was made on the basis of economy of production, condition and essays prepared by the competitors.

GOOD FAIR ASSURED.

DOWNEY.—Dates for the annual Downey community fair have been definitely set for August 25 and 26. It is expected that this year's fair will be bigger and better than ever.

PEAR DAY PLANS.

PALMDALE.—The Little Rock-Palmdale Farm Bureau Center announces that the date for the annual Pear Day celebration for the Antelope Valley pear belt has been set for August 6. A splendid program is being arranged for, including entertainment and educational features. In striking contrast to most parts of the State, the pear crop in the Antelope Valley district is practically normal. Pear Day visitors will see much to interest them in the orchards of this section and will hear an interesting program.

FIRST BALE OF COTTON.

THERMAL.—The first bale of cotton ginned in the Southwest this season, it is claimed, was turned out at the local gin Thursday afternoon, July 14, and was grown on the ranch of C. W. Stone. It ginned out 522 pounds of lint from 1527 pounds of seed cotton.

DAIRYMEN SIGN UP.

WASCO.—Owners of 150 cows in this district have become members of the cow testing association of the farm bureau, following the campaign for organization started here last week. This will make 700 cows represented in the entire county.

RAISING BACKYARD BROILERS FOR WINTER HOLIDAY TRADE.

BY V. O. HANSEN.

BACK-YARD broilers for the holiday market are a paying proposition. A broiler is a young chicken weighing from three-quarters of a pound to two pounds. Broilers are divided into two or three classes, according to weight, the heavier ones bringing more per pound. The lightest weight is three-quarters of a pound to one pound. Next is usually one pound to one and one-quarter or one-half pounds and the "heavy" broilers weigh from one and one-quarter pounds to two pounds or one and one-half pounds to two pounds. Anything over two pounds is classed as a "fryer' and is paid for under the quotation for "fryers." The heavy broilers are usually ready for market at from eight to ten weeks of age, according to breed and care, and the lighter broilers, of course, are ready for market sooner.

For the past two years the poultry dealers have not been able to obtain enough broilers for the holiday trade and for this reason, during the last season, the market for heavy broilers (one and one-quarter pounds to two pounds) remained at 40 cents per pound (as high as 55 cents part of the time) from November to April 15. There is always a market for broilers.

SMALL SPACE WILL DO.

A large number of broilers can be raised on a small piece of ground, and it is comparatively easy and cheap to start. If you buy baby chicks they can usually be bought cheaper in the fall than in the spring. Or if you have a pen of chickens with a male, and an incubator, it is a fine way to make a profit on the care and feed that is being given to the male, which is usually a free boarder from June to February. Not only is broiler raising an interesting hobby, but it also pays well for the care, especially in the fall and early spring.

If you purchase baby chicks they can be bought for from 15 cents to 20 cents in the fall, for hatcheries prefer to have sales through the entire year and consequently cut their prices at this time to encourage sales.

A plot of ground forty feet square is large enough for 250 to 300 chicks up to broiler size. By cutting the plot of forty feet square into four plots, each twenty feet square, different-sized chicks may be cared for and provision made for the market every few weeks. Each pen of twenty feet square will give plenty of room to start 100 chicks and as they grow older and a few die the space is large enough for the remainder until they are ready for market.

In the fall when the new crops of grain come on the market is usually the cheapest time of the year for buyers on the grain market. This is a great advantage and, coupled with the highest broiler market of the year, means a substantial profit.

CHEAP HOUSING POSSIBLE.

It is not necessary to build expensive yards and houses for broilers. If you have four of the twenty-foot square plots, one yard can be equipped with a "fresh-air" brooder of four feet square and with a roof about twelve inches over the floor. The walls and ceiling are covered with burlap or an old blanket. The piece on the ceiling is fastened to hang down half way to the chicks and small pieces of cloth are sewed to it in such a manner that the ends almost touch the floor and form a "hover." A brace and three-quarter-inch bit are used to bore a few holes in the sides of the brooder near the top to serve for ventilation. A small yard (four by ten feet by eighteen inches high) is built on the front of the brooder and a roof built over it. The chicks are not let out of this yard during rainy weather. The other three houses are built four by six feet and two feet high on the high side and with a sloping roof to one foot on the low side. Each of these also has holes bored in the sides near the top for ventilation. The brooder and other coops can be made of packing boxes, with a piece of roofing paper over the top. Or all but the brooder can be made of a wood frame, floor and door for cleaning, outsides and roof covered with tar paper. In constructing such a coop be sure and do not have over a square foot of paper between pieces of the framework. The coops should be cleaned and sprayed at least once a week.

AS TO THE BREEDS.

Almost any breed of poultry can be used for broilers. However, the breeds that give the most profit are the breeds to use. Leghorns or Anconas are light fowls, and although a few poultrymen believe they can turn out Leghorn broilers of one and one-half pounds as soon as others can raise heavier breeds to that weight, it is safer to use the heavier breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, Orpingtons, Cornish Game, etc.; in fact, any heavy breed, so long as it has no feathers on shanks or feet. Plymouth Rocks and Reds are both very popular here and each is a perfect broiler breed. In rearing broilers it is not necessary to use any particular breed or variety, for the object is meat only, and frequently crosses of very original colors are to be seen in the poultry dealers' coops. A good cross which has been used with success is the Dark Cornish-Rhode Island Red. The theory is that a cross between the Cornish with its compact body and the Red with a bigger frame will give a quick-growing broiler—heavy but well proportioned—and it proves out very satisfactorily.

FEEDING THE CHICKS.

In feeding for broilers start out as with any chicks, the main thought being to keep the chicks growing and not to overfeed when they are young, as this is very liable to stunt their growth. Leghorns and Anconas usually grow feathers first, at the expense of the body, and when the body is fairly well protected by wing, tail and breast feathers they put on the meat, and authough they do not have large frames, they grow faster than chicks from the larger breeds, and a good system of feeding will put them on the market in good condition. The chicks from the heavier breeds put their growth in meat first and in feathers later, and in ten to twelve weeks, with the same care, will weigh more than Leghorns or Anconas.

The chicks can be given either water or buttermilk as a drink, from the first feeding until sent to market, but buttermilk gives better results. Some poultrymen use bot hafter the first week. By using buttermilk (it aids digestion) a quicker, better start is made, and there is very little bowel trouble, as a rule. There is also generally an evenly distributed growth through the flock. A commercial chick feed and mash is given. A variety of green food, chang- is given. A variety o fgreen food, changing every other day, helps to develop the appetite. Lettuce, swiss chard, barley, alfalfa, clover, lawn clippings, beet tops, turnip tops and, if possible, celery tops can be used in rotation if cut up very fine. A grain feeding should be given three times a day for the first three weeks and twice a day afterwards. A dry mash should be placed before them for thirty minutes and, when they grow older, for an hour each morning and afternoon. When the chicks are four or five weeks old it is safe to give a good feed of wet mash about an hour before the evening grain meal. Plenty of meat scraps and corn meal should be included in the daily ration now. For the last ten days or two weeks before sending to market, gradually cut down on the exercise of the broilers by giving less running, and feed plenty of meat scraps, corn meal, bran, green food and buttermilk. Depend more on the variety of feed and less on exercise for holding up the appetite. If at any time the broilers are not hungry, skip a meal.

In a venture in boilers the loss in number between hatching and market runs from 10 to 25 per cent

There is a certain period of the year when the vitality of breeding fowls which are used the year around will drop to such an extent that the percentage of hatchable eggs drops low and the chicks hatched will have little vitality and be hard to raise. This period is from about November 10 to January 1. The fowls are recovering from the moult and their vitality is used to develop new feathers. It is hardly safe to try to raise chicks hatched during this period, but from September 1 to November 1 the vitality of the chicks is good, and by raising broilers from chicks hatched during this time the caretaker should realize a handy sum for Christmas spending money.

The eastern fruit prospects are declining, due to hot weather and lack of rainfall. There was a heavy June drop of apples in Michigan and New York.

GROWERS ARE WARNED AGAINST NEMATODES.

SAN FERNANDO.—Following a thorough investigation, County Horticultural Inspectors J. F. Pettus and W. H. Bowles announce that they have found beets and beans in the San Fernando Valley infected with nematodes to an alarming extent and issue a warning to ranchers and gardeners to take steps to rid the valley of the pest. Rotation of crops is the only certain manner of ridding the valley of the blight, they say. The microscopic insect attaches itself to the roots, forming nuckles or globules that cause the beets and beans to wither and to fail to mature. In the case of beets, even if there is a yield, they will be light in sugar contents, but both beans and beets usually fail to mature.

The life of a female nematode is four to six weeks, in which time it will lay 500 eggs; each of the females hatched will do likewise and in a season each female will cause a propagation of 32,000,000 eggs, showing their prolific nature and the deadly peril to crops, the inspectors say. There are three varieties infesting sugar beets, gardens and citrus. Barley, wheat, oats and the cowpeas are not affected, so they may be rotated with beets and beans to kill off the pest.

In hothouses fumigation or sterilization may be used, but rotation of crops is the only cure in the open. The infection is scattered through cultivation and through the irrigation water overflows. Beans are threatened unless prompt action is taken to rid the valley of the insects, of which there are ten to twelve generations a year. The inspectors have placed specimens of infected beets in the various chambers of commerce so ranchers may see the damage done by the insects and they ask all to unite in killing off the pest as rapidly as possible, as great loss is ahead unless the insect is driven out.

NEW HUBAM CLOVER AN AID TO ROTATION AND SOIL BUILDING.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

AFTER a year's trial in many parts of California, necessarily on a comparatively small scale, interest in the new hubam clover continues to grow as reports concerning its behavior come in.

More than a year and a half ago, and immediately following the announcement of the new clover from the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, Farm Adviser Harrison of Yuba county succeeded in obtaining a couple of dozen seeds, which he planted, and these have since that time furnished material for a goodly number of experimental plantings in the northern part of the State.

About a year ago, the writer succeeded in obtaining a small amount of seed from the Iowa station, and a few months later obtained a pound of seed from the same source. This was distributed to some twenty persons in various parts of Los Angeles county and Southern California. Following the publicity given the clover "find" by eastern agricultural journals, individuals in many scattered localities secured small quantities of seed; so that at the present time it is safe to say that the new clover has been tried in most parts of the State.

The reports as to its behavior have been almost unanimously favorable, the general testimony being that it is unusually vigorous in growth, and resistant to adverse conditions.

Following Prof. Hughes's announcement of the discovery of an annual sweet clover similar in practically every respect to the biennial, but of one season's growth only, the origin was subsequently traced to Northern Alabama, where the new clover was found growing wild. Combining the name of its discoverer with the State of its origin, the name "Hubam" was coined and given it.

The new clover is an annual, of extremely vigorous growth. Many reports indicate that within three months after seeding it reaches a height of from four to six feet, which is splendid testimony as to its vigor and thrift. In practically all respects, save for this wonderful vigor of growth, it resembles the biennial sweet clover, from which it undoubtedly is a mutant.

Combining tremendous growth with general hardiness, it seems destined to occupy an important place in the agriculture of the country east of the Rockies, principally as a legume rotation crop for building, and for live-stock feeding. As crop rotation becomes a stable practice in the agriculture of the West, it will undoubtedly also assume importance here as a soil builder.

It seems unlikely that hubam clover will prove to be superior to our native Melilotus indica as a winter cover crop plant, since it appears to be particularly adapted to the warm growing season. What trials have been made of it as a winter cover crop have not indicated any marked superiority; in fact, if anything, it is excelled by the Melilotus indica as a cover crop.

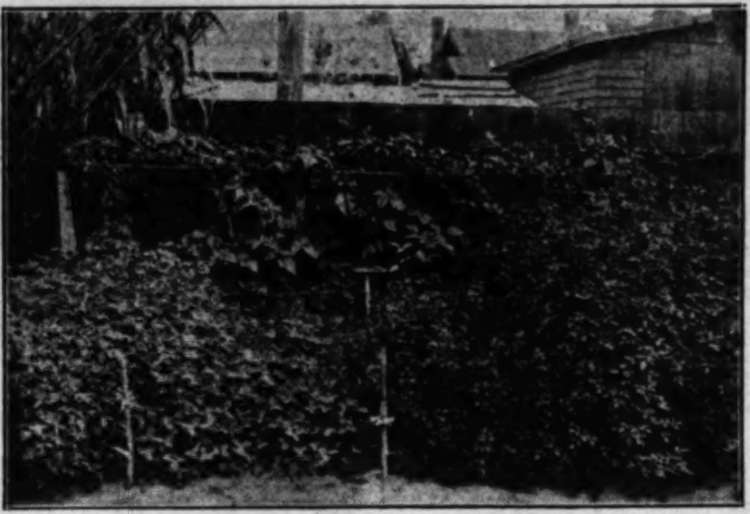
It does appear promising, however, as a spring cover crop or as a summer green manure crop. It would seem to promise more as a spring cover crop for prevention of June drop of citrus and other fruits than any crop discovered as yet. When planted as late as February 15 by the middle of May it has shown a growth of three feet or more, thoroughly shading the ground before the commencement of the June drop period. As a strictly summer-grown crop for green manuring purposes it bids fair to furnish considerable more tonnage for the same growth period than any other crop available. The new clover will thus be of particular value to truck crop growers who desire a short-time green manure crop.

It would seem possible to grow a spring crop of potatoes, followed by the new clover as a cover crop. The clover could be turned under in time for fall planting of cauliflower or cabbage.

The biennial clover has long been recognized as of special value as a soil improver, particularly for wet or alkaline soils, and as a crop for rotation purposes in ridding the soil of nematodes or other pests. If the new clover is found to possess these valuable characteristics, and to manifest them to the same degree in a single season, it would prove to be of immense value for these purposes. The main objection to it has been its two-year growth cycle.

Bee men are showing considerable interest in the new clover, as a source of bee pasturage, and poultrymen are anxious to try it as a source of green feed.

Altogether, the new clover promises much for the Southern California farmer, and he will doubtless continue to await with interest the reports following its use for the various purposes mentioned. Already a few individuals are considering growing it as a seed crop to supply the needs of the Southwest.



Vigor of Growth a Characteristic of Hubam Clover.

Here is a test plot, contrasting the growth of the new clover with that of other legumes. Left to right, sweet clover, crimson clover, alfalfa and hubam clover. All were planted on Feb. 12, 1921, and photographed on May 10, 1921.

In July, make preparations for repairing and painting buildings.

NEW ROTARY PLOW.

An implement designed to till and seed the soil at one operation was demonstrated recently at San Jose. It is known as a rotary plow and was invented by C. M. Hamshaw of Seattle. The machine consists of a drum on which are set plows, the whole being drawn by a tractor with a special drive attachment. The invention claims for the implement that it will "reduce the soil to any depth desired, cut up and cover trash and seed the ground, in one operation."

VALENCIA SHIPMENTS.

PLACENTIA.—While over 700 cars of Valencia oranges have been shipped from the local packing-house, the crop is not half picked.

TO TRY WATER ACTION.

VISALIA.—Judge Peter J. Shields has been selected as the third man to sit as judge in the pending controversy between the Lindsay-Strathmore and the Tulare irrigation districts over the waters of the Kaweah River.

The eastern pear crop varies from total failure to half a crop in many States.

CONDITION OF HAY CROP HAS IMPROVED.

E. E. Kaufman, California statistician, in his July report, states that the condition of hay throughout the State improved during June, and is now 88 per cent of normal, and four points above the ten-year average. In Southern California the grain hay was damaged seriously by rains the latter part of May. The then uncut hay was improved by the rains, and a better condition is reported than on June 1.

Pasture conditions continue very good in the northern and mountain counties, thus practically offsetting the deteriorated condition in the interior valleys and southern counties. The condition of pasture is 86 per cent of a normal, as compared with 87 per cent on June 1, and 78 per cent on July 1, 1920.

Bonelli System Monolithic Concrete Pipe for All Purposes.
PATENT ALLOWED.
Concrete when properly mixed and poured wet between two forms as contemplated in the Bonelli System, and then allowed to remain contained between the forms for from twenty-four to forty-eight hours before removing the outside forms, makes a concrete pipe that will not leak at all after a few days' time, and will stand a pressure according to the thickness of the wall you make and the reinforcing that is put in. We pour as many feet or miles as are desired, making a continuous jointless pipe with all Ts, Crosses, Elbows, Outlets, Gates, Stand Pipes, Plugs, Expansion Joints, Valves, etc., made and set at the same time without any joints to leak or bother. Local economic conditions regulate the kind of inside forms to be used, which are of great variety. A better pipe for less money. You may be convinced of the above facts by calling at Arthur Black's Ranch, Palmdale, Cal., where it is in use. Ask him or John Boyle, Upatore Ranch.

A SHELTER ON WHEELS FOR PASTURED HOGS.

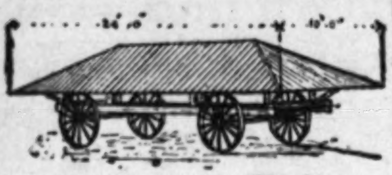
BY H. A. SHEARER.

It is natural for hogs to feed early in the morning and late at night, but they like to lie in the shade in the middle of the day when the sun shines hot. To be successful with hogs we must study their peculiarities and provide the feed and water and shade to suit them.

Many inventions have been worked out to save labor and to keep the pastured herd comfortable and contented. Shelter is one of the worst neglected essentials. Hogs feel the heat more than any other domestic animal because they are overlaid with an insulation of fat that keeps the heat in, so it is necessary to protect them from the hot sun in the middle of the day.

In cultivated fields temporary sun shades are the most practical, as they may be moved from one field to another as the different fodder and grain crops mature.

The illustration shows a portable hog shelter that was first made by two boys on their father's farm in the San Joaquin Valley. The drawing shows the shape and general appearance of the shelter. It is made out of old horserake wheels and axles and it works all right. The wheels are far enough apart not to upset easily and are high enough to permit a good-sized hog to walk under the axles. It is not a handy rig to turn a short corner, but it may be turned on a wide circle.



Hog Shelter on Wheels.

The roof is of the hip roof type, 10x24 feet in size, with two stringers as a base of support.

The following bill of materials will build thois sun shade:

Wheels and axles of two old horserakes, two bed pieces, 4 inches by 4 inches by 16 feet; three pieces, 2 inches by 6 inches by 20 feet for plates; four pieces 2 inches by 4 inches by 16 feet for rafters, ridge, etc.; two pieces 2 inches by 4 inches by 12 feet for braces; twenty-six pieces ⅞ inches by 10 inches by 16 feet for roof boards.

REAL SCARCITY OF HOGS IN CALIFORNIA.

HANFORD.—California hog men are producing only 28 per cent of the pork consumed in the State, according to D. H. Bitner, general manager of the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association, who has just conducted an auction here, during which feeder pigs sold for an average of $11.10, the highest price received this summer.

"There is more profit in selling hogs now at 10 cents than there was in raising them to sell at 16 cents a year ago," said Mr. Bitner. "Representatives of the large packing firms, because of the shortage of hogs in the State, are importing into California solid trainloads of hogs from the Middle West and Texas. The people of California have never before consumed so much pork. The packers are now demanding the smallest class of hogs, which accounts for the hog rancher marketing his animals at from 150 to 180 pounds. The demand for feeder pigs is very insistent."

The tomato acreage of California is less than half what it was last year. The carry-over of canned tomatoes is responsible.

"Better Beef."

hide, .0700 per cent; yield fat, .0743 per cent; total yield, .7536 per cent.

Price 10½ cents and sold to C. S. Hardy, Jan. 12, 1921.

Commenced to feed cottonseed Dec, 4, 1920.

The lot she was turned off with all brought ⅛ cent over the market price when sold. This is the usual case on this ranch, as the sales checks show. An additional 2 cents per pound was paid later for every pound the carcasses dressed over 55 per cent. The average was .58842 for the twenty-six head. Even in a smal' lot, such as the eight head turned off last month, this extra premium for meat dressed, bringing in this case an additional check for $29.04, is appreciated. This eight head, too, were culls from steers sold earlier in the season. All of the steers on the Viejas Valley ranch, of course, are culls to begin with, or they would have been raised as part of the fine lot of registered bulls Mr. Ogden's forty to fifty registered breeding sows produce every year.

His own accurate methods in keeping account of all the details of his business, giving him the means of checking up on all possibilities of losses or failure to progress at any point, have stood Mr. Ogden in such good stead that he thinks they should be adopted by all stock men. He points out a recent test made in Illinois, where every dairy in one county was checked up over a period of some months. The county farm agent making the report was able to show that there was a wide difference in the production of scrub stock and pure-breds. A significant point brought out was that, of the ten dairies testing highest in production, not a single one was of common stock. Conversely, not a single one of the ten testing lowest in the county was pure-bred Mr. Ogden concludes that meat, as well as milk, would uphold the contention that quality in live stock means quantity. Whether it's cuarts or pounds is all the same, he says. The extra production is there if the breeding is right.

Just to pick at random, here are some weights to show what some of his calves, now belonging to various proud owners, have to contribute to the argument. The date of calving, of one subsequent weighing and of weight at time of sale are given: San Miguel, Oct. 24, 1918; Sept. 12, 1919, 728 pounds; Dec. 11, 1919, 854 pounds. San Rafael, Nov. 3, 1918; Sept. 12, 1919, 888 pounds; Jan. 14, 1920, 920 pounds. Mainly, Oct. 4, 1918; Sept. 12, 1919, 688 pounds; Nov. 30, 1919, 822 pounds. Sir Rupert, Sept. 18, 1919; June 14, 1920, 708 pounds; Feb. 13, 1921, 1210 pounds. Lon Rupert, Feb. 11, 1920; Dec. 16, 1920, 886 pounds; Dec. 30, 1920, 740 pounds.

It will be interesting to cattlemen studying economical short-cuts to beef production to look over these weights of some of Mr. Ogden's spring calves of this season. Dates of calving, with one later date of weighing and weight are given: Heifer calf, Nov. 12, 1920; June 11, 1921, 474 pounds. Heifer calf, Nov. 21, 1920; June 11, 1921, 488 pounds. Dec. 10, 1921; June 11, 1921, 514 pounds. Sept. 1, 1920; June 14, 1921, 688 pounds. Dec. 8, 1920; June 11, 1921, 480 pounds. Jan. 22, 1921; June 11, 1921, 440 pounds. Jan. 22, 1921; June 11, 1921, 480 pounds. Heifer calf, Feb. 5, 1921; June 14, 1921, 420 pounds.

Some of the experiences of stock men who have been convinced of the sound good sense of Mr. Ogden's methods of beef production are fully as interesting evidence as his own. The Garfield Jones estate, on the 5600-acre Barona ranch, in San Diego county, has found it worth while to come back three times for Viejas Valley bulls to head their fine herds. E. G. Erwin of the big Jamul ranch, after previous purchases, last season bought fourteen bulls of Mr. Ogden. These animals made an average gain, through five winter months, with only small feedings of hay and corn silage to supplement the poor season's range pasture, of 200 pounds each during that period, according to Mr. Erwin's reports. He confesses himself formerly to have been one of the skeptics among the old-time cattlemen of the county.

R. L. McCain, long known as a "good picker," has put Viejas Valley registered Herefords on his large range near Boulevard for several seasons, as has Ben Garboni on his ranch at Descanso. T. M. Meanly is stocking the 10,000-acre Fanita ranch near Santee with this better beef stock. Henry F. Bergman and son of Aguanga have bought both bulls and heifers to start a registered herd, as has John H. O'Hair for the 3600-acre San Bernardino ranch near Escondido, recently bought by Albert E. Smith. Mr. O'Hair is an experienced cattle feeder from Illinois. Ben Thorpe, for the Canfield estate at Bonsall, and the Warner ranch are among the enthusiastic repeaters who are rapidly converting the cattle ranges of San Diego county into a better-beef center.

SOME POINTERS BY A GARDEN HANDY MAN.

BY E. E. JOHNSON.

Combine all garden operations as far as possible and by so doing cut down your labor charges. For example, while digging potatoes prepare and plant your next crop. Suppose you are ready to dig three or four rows of potatoes. Use the set sprinkler and water a little; next day the ground will be just right to dig, and then note how easy it is to work the soil. Throw your vines and weeds on your nearest compost heap, grade your spuds in sacks, cultivate and level the ground all in the one operation. Plant your next crop immediately the ground is ready to receive the seed, then water well and your crop is started towards maturity.

Let's see, haven't we saved just three distinct operations by the above method?

(1.) First you have weeded and cleared the ground.

(2.) You save water, time, and much hard labor in digging potatoes where the soil is just right to work, besides you are the preparation and cultivation to the good.

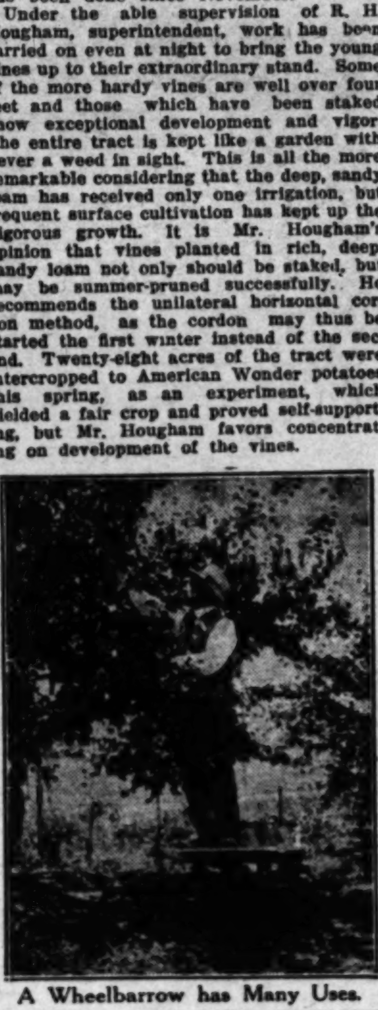
(3.) By planting at once we get the jump on nature by at least two or three weeks, and then it usually takes some extra trips to the garden to plant another crop at a later date.

Fill a gunny sack half full of sawdust or shavings and have friend wife run it across on the machine. You have a garden pillow that saves your back and tired feet. Use it when you pull weeds, in transplanting, pruning or picking vegetables; kneel or even sit down tailor fashion. The ground may be cold and wet, but your sawdust pillow won't mind a bit and while you are about it, make two or three such pillows to keep them about in convenient places.

Every gardener should have a wheelbarrow. Ordinarily this costs money, and those you buy may not fit your needs. A few hours will suffice to make one. Two pieces two inches by two inches by six feet, will serve as handles. An old wheel and bolts, of course, will help. Then nail on one-inch boards, make it narrow; two to three feet is a good width, and a few added braces will give it the desired height.

Here are some uses that you can put such a wheelbarrow to that will surprise you. It makes a fine movable seat. A good many garden operations can be carried on while comfortably seated, such as picking and cleaning vegetables, or changing tools on your wheel hoe. In spraying carry your knapsack sprayer on it. While working on your fruit trees it makes a fine step ladder. Stand on it to prune and spray and put your fruit box on it. You have made it narrow enough to carry your chicken feed direct to the feed hoppers in the coops. For carrying fertilizer make a false bottom of one-fourth inch boards, thereby save your wheelbarrow.

The Useful Garden Pillow.



A Wheelbarrow has Many Uses.

WILL STUDY WEEVIL.

TUCSON (Ariz.)—The "wild" cotton boll weevil of southwestern Arizona is to be studied minutely by R. W. Moreland of the Federal Bureau of Entomology, who will establish a camp in the Santa Catalina foothills, from which to examine the Thurberia insect in its native lair. This work is to be done in conjunction with the State entomologist and agricultural boards.

QUICK WORK ON THIS VINEYARD PROJECT.

PRAIRIE CENTER.—One of the outstanding developments this season of the Prairie Center district, west of Strathmore, Tulare county, is the eighty-acre vineyard owned by Frederickson & Shannon of Fresno. Particularly impressive is the stand of vines in this tract, in view of the fact that it was barren land last fall. The entire work of leveling, preparation of the soil, digging of a well and installation of an irrigation system and planting of forty acres of Emperors, twenty acres of Thompsons and twenty acres of Malaga cuttings has been done since November.

Under the able supervision of R. H. Hougham, superintendent, work has been carried on even at night to bring the young vines up to their extraordinary stand. Some of the more hardy vines are well over four feet and those which have been staked show exceptional development and vigor. The entire tract is kept like a garden with never a weed in sight. This is all the more remarkable considering that the deep, sandy loam has received only one irrigation, but frequent surface cultivation has kept up the vigorous growth. It is Mr. Hougham's opinion that vines planted in rich, deep, sandy loam not only should be staked, but may be summer-pruned successfully. He recommends the unilateral horizontal cordon method, as the cordon may thus be started the first winter instead of the second. Twenty-eight acres of the tract were intercropped to American Wonder potatoes this spring, as an experiment, which yielded a fair crop and proved self-supporting, but Mr. Hougham favors concentrating on development of the vines.

Attention to Soil Moisture.

summer and the blighting winds hit the tops, the draft on the tree is so great that the root system is not able to withstand the strain and the leaves suffer as a consequence. If a bunch of fine feeder roots were developed in the space from the tree out to a distance of four feet, then these roots would absorb some of the shock in these trying times on the upper part of the tree instead of existing there as so much deadwood. Nelson emphasized the necessity for adding organic matter to these soils. roots. When the critical time comes in the as it spoils the shipping quality of the fruit.

Another discovery was that the growers in that section, as a rule, irrigated too far from the tree, thereby causing a space of four feet in which there are no fine feeder plemented by a couple of winter irrigations. Care should be taken not to apply water just at or near the time of harvesting. He stated that the danger is not near at hand, but that the accumulated nitrogen which has taken centuries to store up is being drawn on and that some provision must be made for its replacement.

Donald Graham of Del Sur has been experimenting on the little leaf problem for the last year and has greatly reduced the condition and his trees are in fine shape. This was brought about purely by close attention to moisture conditions and nothing else. He has used the soil augur continually, watching the soil so that there would be little fluctuation in the water content. This practice was even carried into the winter season when the trees are dormant and generally are more or less neglected.

Prof. Nelson's visit to Los Angeles county was of real value to the growers who had the opportunity to hear him. He summed up his observations by saying that closer attention to maintaining an even soil moisture content and the replacement of the fast diminishing organic matter would greatly tend to eliminate a major part of the perplexing problems confronting the truck and field crop grower today.

The Livestock Bulletin.

BY ROBERT T. EVANS.

A number of excellent yearly records have recently been made in the high-class herd of registered Holsteins owned by Robert N. Clapp, Nuevo, at his farm, Sycamore Acres. The famous cow Gerben Abbekerk Maid, now in her tenth year, with ten living sons and daughters, made 852.3 pounds milk in seven days and 3460.7 pounds in thirty days, the best day being 124.6 pounds. She is being continued on yearly test. Her junior four-year-old daughter, Abbekerk Pontiac, made 25.59 pounds butter from 446.9 pounds milk in seven days. Four more daughters of the good bull, King Pontiac Netherland Segis, third son of Gerben Abbekerk Maid, completed excellent records. Rosamaines Rowena, a junior three-year-old, made 28.79 pounds butter from 551.2 pounds milk in seven days, and 115.81 pounds butter from 2398.8 pounds milk in thirty days. Aralia Pontiac, as a four-year-old, made 26.25 pounds butter from 536.5 pounds milk in seven days. Rosamaines May Korndyke, at two years four months, made 21.12 pounds butter in seven days, and her full sister, Rosamaines Korndyke Beauty, has lately made one of the greatest heifer records ever made in California. Freshening at one year and ten months, she has made 22.24 pounds butter from 575.1 pounds milk in seven days, from 88.27 pounds butter from 2368.7 pounds milk in thirty days, and continued on test, made 160.46 pounds butter from 4525.1 pounds milk in sixty days. Mr. Clapp recently added another high-class lot of females to his herd, and now owns one of the strongest herds in the blood of King Segis.

The Holstein-Frisian Association of America, with headquarters in Chicago, has allotted for the California State Fair to be held September 3 to 11, inclusive, 20 per cent ' the total prize money paid to livestock exhibitors. The State Fair this year will have some of the best Holsteins in California and also good herds from other States.

Southern California live-stock breeders have been rather in the motion-picture ligelight recently. "The Ten Dollar Raise," which has enjoyed heavy patronage at a Los Angeles theater, is from a story written by Capt. Peter B. Kyne of the Sierra Vista Stock Farm in Perris Valley, and William V. Mong, Whittier Duroc-Jersey breeder, plays one of the leading parts in the same film version.

The following California breeders have entered their herds for the spring and fall futurity prizes offered by the National Duroc-Jersey Record Association at the California State Fair: J. C. Craig, Owensmouth; Ordway & Snyder, Hudson; The Western Laboratories, Stockton; H. P. Slocum & Son, Willows; J. C. Thorp, Lockeford; Diamond Bar Ranch, Spadra; William V. Mong, Whittier; V. F. Dolcini, Davis; Witherow & Stafford, Live Oak; Harvey M. Berglund, Dixon; C. L. Gregory, Live Oak; Sierra Vista Stock Ranch, Perris; J. D. Rowe & Sons, Davis. The following are the entries for Riverside: Diamond Bar Ranch, Spadra; William V. Mong, Whittier; W. H. Dupee, Santee; Orkmere Ranch, San Diego; J. E. Thorp, Lockeford; Charles J. Le Moyne, Lankershim; Alvan G. Goodell, Spadra; J. C. Craig, Owensmouth; Ward B. Wilson, Lankershim; G. F. Curtis, Chino.

In a recently compiled report of the medal awards for 1920 issued by the American Jersey Cattle Club, seventy-one Jersey cows in the United States are shown to have qualified for medals under the rules of the club. Of the ten highest records made in the year, six were made by Pacific Coast cows with an average production of 887.21 pounds of fat.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ward of Huntington Park and Louis A. Bonjean of Valley Center are importing twenty-five head of registered Toggenburg, Saanan and Chamouise goats from Switzerland, the latter mentioned breed being the first of its kind to come into this country The shipment will be loaded on board the steamship Iris at Havana on August 13, proceeding to Los Angeles through the Panama Canal, and is due to arrive at Port Los Angeles on September 13. This will be the first shipment of registered goats to come from Switzerland through the Panama Canal.

Mr. Harry Chandler,
Los Angeles Times,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Mr. Chandler:

Within the past few months we have been placing some page advertisements in the Farm and Tractor Section of The Times for the Vapo Corporation, advertising an iceless refrigerator.

Three inquiries received by the advertiser have been from such distant sources, and of such unusual nature, that the thought occurred to us you might be interested to know of them.

One came from a middle western State. The resulting correspondence led to expressing one of the Vaporators to the inquirer, followed by an order for more of them than the factory could fill this summer.

Another from an Atlantic Coast State. The correspondence which followed may lead to the building of a factory there.

The third was from England. The writer indicated his financial standing, and wished to form a company to manufacture the Vaporators there, also to export them to Africa, where he has marketing connections.

When advertising gets such definite results, it certainly is "bringing home the bacon." When next your Mr. Kimball comes to San Francisco the writer will be glad to take him to the Vapo Corporation's office to see these letters.

Yours very truly,
JOHNSTON-AYRES COMPANY.
(Signed) Johnston.

HEAVY RAINS BRING JOY TO THE STOCKMEN.

TUCSON.—The second heavy rain in ten days, which fell in the southern counties of Arizona a few days ago, has brought optimism to cattlemen, who were preparing to ship their stock to Texas and California. Grass has already started in most counties, and the cattle are finding good feed. The rains put an end to one of the worst droughts the State has ever passed through.

The ranges west of Tucson, including the Coyote and Baboquivari, the Papago Indian Reservation, and the San Fernando, Santa Margarita and La Osa ranches, were drenched by the last rain. There was a cloudburst in the Tanque Verdes. Fire wardens in the Santa Rita and Catalina ranges have withdrawn from the mountains, the fire risk being almost nil since the rains. Ranchers coming in from the Chiracua Mountains say good rains fell in that country. Good rains also fell at Bowie, San Simon and Gleeson, where stages have been held up on account of muddy roads.

The raspberry and blackberry crop of Northwestern States varies from fair to good this year.

The Healthiest Trees Are in Sprayed Groves

—and that's a fact. Records open to your inspection prove it. For example, growers in Tulare County who used our sprays both winter and early summer packed about 90 per cent of fancy fruit. One spraying in summer gave about 75 per cent fancy. Those failing to spray at all had about 60 per cent fancy—some only 20 per cent.

These unchallenged records that spraying pays are furnished by your brother citrus growers in California. Why not ask them? Their groves—that showed the highest profits from fancy oranges are sprayed regularly with

B. T. S.	15 lbs.	B. T. S.	10 to 12 lbs.
TRIUMPH	1½ to 2½ gals.	TRIUMPH	1 gal.
GLUE	1 lb.	GLUE	1 lb.
(for citricola and black scale) (patented formulas)		(for red spiders)

The market wants fancy fruit again this year. You can make up for the drop in orange prices by increased production of fancy crops. Summer spraying with our field tested, patented formulas "brings the pay."

Write or call at our headquarters in the H. W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles Frank B. Herbert, Assistant Entomologist, and his aides will examine your grove free of charge. They will tell you the right spray to use and how to use it. To get best results, spray today.

"Better Beef, Quicker Beef, and More of It."

BY H. G. DAVIS

Glimpse of oak-dotted Viejas Valley ranch.

Some of Mr. Ogden's young "white faces."

Beau Rupert, herd sire.

Hereford steers on Viejas Valley ranch.

THERE is a group of cattlemen in San Diego county that is maintaining an unruffled front in the very face of the agitated quest of many statisticians and stock growers for the lost, strayed or stolen beef profits of better days, which once upon a time paid an income to the producer. They say they know where such a thing still exists. Certainly their fine, fat farms and live stock give appearance of some relationship with prosperity.

"Better beef, more of it, and quicker beef" is what they will tell you has done the trick. There is no repining over the handicaps of this post-war period of readjust-proven quite worth-while by any stock man who will heed. The living example is flourishing there today, easy of access from a fine, paved, State highway for all who would to see.

Mr. Ogden says his success has been built up entirely because those who came and saw were converted. They were his neighbors, to begin with, and soon the neighbors' neighbors, in an ever-widening circle. And he points out that he couldn't have developed his prosperous business, in which he disposes of all the registered stock which he is willing to sell right in his own section, if he had not been able to prove to practical farmers, who were in a position to keep tabs on him, that his kind of cattle would pay better. And pay better for beef is what he means by that.

"Blue ribbons are worth less than nothing at all," he declares earnestly, "unless the performance is there first. Unless I can prove to the man who buys registered ment among these pure-bred cattle growers. In fact, they see in these times of high production costs and problematical pay a positive force for betterment of the livestock interests. They believe that the farmer is going to profit by his losses. It is self-evident to those who have already tried it that unprofitable stock will be discarded and that the practical stock man will be driven by his present difficulties to a serious study of the production of better beef, which will inevitably lead to the general adoption of pure-bred stock.

D. H. Ogden of the Viejas Valley ranch, near Alpine, is probably deserving of the credit for bringing this idea to San Diego county. He formed the nucleus of a now rapidly growing group of Hereford cattlemen some twenty years ago. To Mr. Ogden the name Hereford is synonymous with the word pure-bred. In his case the white faces have assuredly spelled success, and the story of his advancement from the fattening of feeders on rented pasturage to the ownership of 1400 acres of rich valley pasture land on which graze 300 head of pure-bred Herefords is an interesting tale. It is one which points a moral that can be stock of me that I'm putting money in his pocket I wouldn't have any business to be in the business—and I wouldn't last long. The butcher's checks are the only thing that talks when it comes to beef production." Then he produces a few of those which make interesting reading.

And so, though there are plenty of the blue ribbons hanging on his office wall and though in his fields there are pasturing animals whose blue-blooded blood relations have brought, and even now are bringing, fabulous sums in the great cattle sales of the East and Middle West, Mr. Ogden emphasizes first and foremost the point of weights.

It is the weight of his young calves, which he leads to the scales in his corrals once a month or oftener, recording in his accurate books their daily average gains of two to three pounds; the weights of his six-and-seven-months-old calves, climbing to 400 and 500 pounds and better; his yearlings at upwards of 800 pounds and still gaining at the rate of sometimes three pounds a day; his long yearlings, topping 1200 pounds; his two-year-old steers, culled from his herd, weighing an average of over 1100 pounds and dressing higher than 58 per cent meat according to the butcher's report, thus bringing a premium for extra weight and quality—those are the things Mr. Ogden discourses on with pride. Also, there is no guess work about it. His records are carefully kept. His stock in the field is evidence. His reports from the meat buyers are in black and white, and indisputable. And the ranchers who are his customers tell the same tale of record gains. The pure-bred pudding has been tested and tasted and has been proved to have a pleasant flavor.

However, Mr. Ogden believes that the stock business at present is on a precarious footing. He says so freely. There are several factors squarely in the way of profitable progress in the business of cattle production in this State, he thinks.

The whole 70,000,000 acres of range in California is overstocked, according to his belief, though the State is not feeding its own population the beef it consumes. California is using 40,000 to 50,000 beef cattle per month, and the business of production, which now represents an investment of $350,000,000 by cattle growers of the State, could be doubled and still not reach the number of cattle produced in proportion to population which is achieved in Iowa. Even in normal times the increase of beef production in California is not keeping pace with the increase in population.

The situation seems to be, from Mr. Ogden's viewpoint, that the demand is right here at home, but the supply is not. Furthermore, that the supply could be increased, but is not, which he does not consider good business. The two reasons which apparently prevent the handling of this big volume of beef production are, in the first place, that there is not enough range; and, in the second place, it costs too much.

Both of those reasons seem to be discouraging. But, to Mr. Ogden, the answer is obvious. It has been evolved from the depths of his own experience. It is pure-bred stock. He feels that, unless some agency, such as the present crisis, forces an acceptance of this solution the business of beef production is destined toward a fatal decline.

Some twenty odd years ago Mr. Ogden was pasturing eighty head of stock cattle on a piece of range in what was then known as the Monte ranch, near San Diego. He found the pasturage was insufficient, and in the dry months he had to take his cattle out and pasture them on the stubble from grain fields, pumping water and herding them. The next year he carried 100 head, but still felt himself obliged to conserve his pasture by taking them out for a couple of months. Gradually he increased his herd until, at the end of several years, he left the Monte with 198 head of stock which had ample pasturage for the entire year on the same range that formerly would not carry eighty head. This was the result, he says, of underpasturing, an art still to be learned by the average range man of the West.

The means which would make underpasturing immediately possible in many cases, he says, is the increased profits from better stock. He advocates the cutting of the carrying capacity of the average range to two-thirds of the number put on in present practice. Having proved to his own satisfaction that, by consistent underpasturing for a comparatively short period, a range will not only rapidly regain, but will soon surpass its former capacity, he improved his plan by making the gain doubly profitable. By adding a gain in individual weight to increased numbers he was able to make his range yield him top production. He says he soon decided that any other policy was foolishly wasteful.

If the ranges of California could be made to carry 50 per cent more stock, according to Mr. Ogden's theory, and if this stock could be made to pay appreciably more income per head, and if this income could be produced in a third less time, as is accomplished when a steer weighs more at two years of age than many a thin "feeder" can be brought to at the end of three years, the possibilities are worth considering.

Assuredly, the "cost of a calf," which is stirring up so many portentious statistics right now and is causing concern to so many apprehensive cattle growers, would be materially reduced. Mr. Ogden firmly believes that the margin of gain would make all the difference between failure and success for many another stock man, as it did for him and as he has seen it work out for rancher after rancher who has adopted his plan. He preaches pure-bred stock as a life-saver for critical times and as a means of greater prosperity when market readjustments again favor the producer.

An incident which recently occurred on his own ranch brought out the contrast in results between scrub stock and pure-bred production. A calf from one of the milk cows on the place was given to a small boy on the ranch to raise. It occurred to Mr. Ogden to keep an account of the cost of this calf, which was sold a couple of months ago with some of the steers. This calf might be called a grade, as it was partly Hereford, though its mother was a dairy cow. Besides its mother's milk, it was fed cottonseed meal, hay and milo, the cost of this feed mounting to $57. When this steer was turned out in a bunch of thirty Herefords taken off the range it brought exactly $10 less than the price of the average of the lot. The total of $67 difference in profit is noticeable.

A cow which Mr. Ogden tried fattening for market not long ago he fed for five weeks, giving her five pounds of cottonseed meal a day, with no gain at all. Those things do happen. Needless to say, she was not a pure-bred, nor was she even a grade Hereford. In contrast, he points to the sale record of a cow he sold in January of this year, after less than a month of any accessory feeding in addition to grass pasture, which was discouragingly poor at that time. Here is the record:

MYRTLE RUPERT.

Live weight, 1400 pounds; dressed weight, 870 pounds; shrinkage allowed, 2 per cent; chilled weight, 853 pounds.

Farmers Count Chips after the Spring Potato Gamble.

The job of harvesting the spring potato crop, now nearly finished, is a heavy one, as there were 12,000 acres in Los Angeles county alone. Above, tractor pulling modern digger near Van Nuys.

For the first time, growers are grading their crop according to Federal standards. Here H. H. Warner, supervising inspector for the State Depatment of Agriculture, is conferring with a grower and buyer's agent.

THE spring potato gamble in Southern California is about over and the growers are counting wins and losses. Some potato farmers report good profits, despite the lowest price in five years; others say the price received did not pay the cost of harvesting.

Every effort is being made by the growers to pull themselves out of the bad hole caused by the decline in price. In spite of the fact that the quality of the spring crop in the ten southern counties is the best that has been raised in many years, some of the growers will plant other crops next year. State and national forces are also striving to aid the farmers to dispose of their crops profitably, but this seems, in the majority of cases, to be a vain labor, for when United States Grade No. 1 White Rose potatoes dropped below $1 per hundredweight, the price went down below the cost of production, according to well-informed growers.

With 12,000 acres of potatoes grown in Los Angeles county alone, the problem is not only one of harvesting the crop at the least possible expense, but of eliminating waste in marketing. Towards the latter end a group of San Fernando Valley and El Monte growers are working, having formed a tentative co-operative marketing body at a recent meeting at the office of the Agricultural Extension Service, Los Angeles. Mark Grimes of Van Nuys is the instigator of the movement for a growers' marketing association, and a contract is now being placed before the growers. To make the movement a success, 75 per cent of the growers must sign up. As many growers have already made agreements with private marketing sources, it seems improbable that this number of growers will be signed.

Better seed and more attention to culture and disease and pest prevention have produced an excellent quality of White Rose potatoes this year. However, the late frosts and rains have proven a disturbing factor. Frosts cut down the yield in many fields, and the heavy rains of late spring started second growth. No potato with second growth can pass either the first or second standard grade, and many carloads have gone to the hog pen because of this rain. Also, in the Baldwin Park-Puente district, the rains served to pack the ground so that the yield was cut down 75 per cent in some cases. It required eight large, strong horses to pull a digger in a Puente field, the yield being cut down to fifteen sacks per acre. This in contrast to the crop in a Mission Acres avocado orchard, approximately 150 sacks to the acre.

Eight horses pulling a digger on the Fickleworth ranch, Puente, where the yield, owing to frost and late rains, was but 15 sacks to the acre.

Harvey E. Truax, truck crop expert of the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, who is in Southern California aiding the potato growers in grading their stock, says of the potato situation:

"One of the biggest gamblers in the world is the farmer, especially the potato grower of Southern California. From the time he prepares his seed bed until the money for the crop is in his pocket, he flirts with chance.

"His first great hazard is in securing good seed, true to name. For generations it has been the usual practice to sell the large potatoes out of the crop, and save the small ones for seed. This procedure, followed out year after year, leads to a poor quality of seed. Due to climatic conditions, the potato grower in Southern California deems it necessary to secure seed from outside sources. Therefore he is dependent upon some unknown grower, and his seedsman, for his seed. Only too often he is disappointed in the quality of the seed obtained. Some of the more progressive growers of Southern California are overcoming this hazard by using seed certified by the State inspector.

"After the seed is planted, the grower runs all the chances that arise due to weather conditions, disease and insect pests. Possibly untimely rains may happen along and rot the potatoes, or the sun may get so hot as to cause heat necrosis, or sunburn. His crop may be doing fine, when suddenly a disease may kill the tops and limit the yield. Scab may infest the tubers, and make them practically worthless. One of the most serious pests, which is almost sure to be with the potato grower during the latter part of the harvesting season in the spring, is the tuber moth. This is a moth which flies at night and lays its eggs on the tuber. This egg hatches into a worm which bores into and practically ruins the tuber. In some instances, as high as 50 per cent of the crop has to be sorted out and destroyed on account of this pest.

Following the potato digger on the McChesney ranch, where 150 sacks to the acre are reported.

"And do you think that the potato growers' game of chance is over when he has his crop grown? Not so. All the year he has been hoping that he will make a profit from his arduous labors. He has rented or bought land, purchased seed, paid for labor, and the marketing time tells either a story of profit or loss. Too often during the past year it has meant a loss. Consumers should not be too much overjoyed when potatoes get 'dirt cheap.' It is not a healthy condition when
